

EPIGRAPHIA INDICA.

VOLUME XXV.

No. 1.—REWAH PLATES OF THE TIME OF TRAILOKYAMALLADEVA: [KALACHURI] YEAR 963.

By N. P. CHAKRAVARTI, M.A., PH.D., OOTACAMUND.

This set of two copper plates was found in 1929 at Dhureti, a village about 7 miles from the Rewah town, by a cultivator while ploughing his field, and is now preserved in the Treasury at Rewah. During my visit to Rewah early in 1936. I came to know of this find and later in the same year the Political Minister of the State very kindly sent me the plates for examination and taking impressions. The record has already been noticed by me in the Annual Report, Archaeological Survey of India, 1935-36, pp. 90-91 and I am now editing it in the Epigraphia Indica with the kind permission of the Rewah Darbar.

The plates measure $15\frac{1}{2}'' \times 10\frac{1}{2}''$ each and are strung together by means of a ring, passing through a hole pierced about the middle of each plate. They are inscribed on one side only, the obverse of the first and the reverse of the second plate being left blank. They have highly raised rims which have protected the writing beautifully. There is a seal attached to the ring, bearing at the top the figure of Gaja-Lakshmi in relief, rather crudely executed. Below the figure is a legend in one line which reads Śrīmat-Traiḷōkyamallā. When the plates were received by me the ring was found already cut but there can be no doubt that both the ring and the seal belong to the plates under discussion. The seal measures $6\frac{3}{4}'' \times 4\frac{1}{4}''$ and the plates including the ring and the seal weigh 419 toḷas.

Each plate has 11 lines of writing, the letters being approximately $\frac{1}{2}''$ in height. The engraver appears to have left too much margin between the lines in the second plate and had to engrave the last two lines in slightly smaller characters so that the record could be completed in this face of the plate. The engraving was done rather carelessly. Some of the letters are ill formed and while syllables have been dropped in many places, only in two cases the missing letters have been supplied at the top of the line concerned. The characters are Nāgarī, the language being Sanskrit. The whole record with the exception of three verses in ll. 1-5 is in prose. Several mistakes in grammar and syntax show that though the record was composed by two Pandits, neither of them was a proficient scholar in Sanskrit. The script does not call for any special remarks but attention may be drawn to the following minor points. The anusvāra has sometimes been represented by a circle above the syllable to which it belongs, e.g., śiṃha (l. 8), Śrīcanda (l. 9), paṇḍita (l. 11), etc., and sometimes it has been written in an ornamental way, e.g., ōm (l. 1), mantri, maṇḍalaka (l. 8), śaṇḍhi° (l. 8), etc. In writing ś sometimes a cross bar has been used joining the two limbs of the letter thus making it look like s. cf. Śivāya (l. 1), śaranyah (l. 4), śrī-Malayasiṃha (l. 8), Śaiv-āchārya° (l. 11), etc. Due to slabbiness in writing it is sometimes hard to distinguish between v and ch. For the same reason pra in pravarddhamāna and ṭha in Jyēṣṭha (l. 7) look like via and va respectively. As regards orthography the following points may be noted : (1) The same sign has been used for writing v and b, e.g., Kanyakurj° (l. 6). (2) While consonants in conjunction with a subscript r have never been doubled, those joined with a superscript r have sometimes been doubled and sometimes left single, e.g., sarvva- (ll. 4, 5, etc.), pravaraddhamāna (l. 7), chakravartti- (l. 11), Duvvāsū (l. 12), etc., as against samarthō (l. 3), Chaturmukha (l. 4), dharmā° (l. 9), kārya (l. 19), etc. (3) Anusvāra has invariably been used in place of the nasal of the same class, e.g., namdanō (l. 1), kōmal-āṃgō (l. 2), Nīlakamṭha (ll. 2-3), -āmbhōja (l. 4), etc. (4) Rēpha has been wrongly dropped in Tipura (l. 3) and visarga in Nīlakamṭha (ll. 2-3), tapa, kuśala (l. 11), Sēvarāja (l. 14), etc. (5) While ś and s cannot always be distinguished for reasons stated above, ś has been definitely used for s in hamśa (l. 4), śaṃdhī° (l. 8), =āśtāśa (l. 17) and vice versā in Sēvarāja (l. 14) if it stands for Śivarāja. (6) Sandhi has not been observed in many places, sometimes not even between members forming a compound, e.g., °ra-aśvapati (l. 5), Vāhaḍa-artha-lēkhī- (ll. 8-9) and wrong sandhi is found in -sūtō Sāmīla° (l. 13). In l. 13 though honorific plural has been used in Sāntaśiva-charaṇāḥ, all the qualifying epithets have been left in singular. The genitive in Dharēkasya (l. 14), however, has been correctly used, as this person was not the recipient of a permanent gift.¹ The term vittava(ba)ṃdhā (ll. 13, 19) which I have taken in the sense of 'mortgage, or pledge for money received' is of lexicographic interest. All the errors occurring in the record have been corrected either in the body of the text or in the footnotes accompanying it.

The inscription opens with the sacred syllable ōm and obeisance to Śiva and Gaṇapati which are followed by three invocatory verses. The first two of these verses are in praise of Kṛishṇa and Śiva respectively and the third is a quotation of the verse found at the commencement of Daṇḍin's Kāvyaḍarśa. A similar instance is found in the Rewah Plates of the Mahārāṇaka Kumārapāla (V. S. 1297) and the Mahārāṇaka Harirājadēva (V. S. 1298)² where the last of the three introductory verses is taken from the introduction to Bāṇa's Kādambarī.

The record (ll. 5-7) refers itself to 'the prosperous, auspicious and victorious reign of the illustrious Trailōkyamalladēva, who was endowed with all the royal titles commencing with Paramabhaṭṭāraka (i.e., Paramabhaṭṭāraka-Mahārājādhirāja-Paramēśvara), who was a devout worshipper of Mahēśvara (Śiva), who was the lord over three rājas (viz.), the lord of horses, the lord of elephants and the lord of men, who was a veritable Vāhaspati in the investigation of the various (branches of) knowledge, who meditated on the feet of the illustrious Vāmadēva, (and) who was the lord of Kanyakubja'. In l. 12 he is also called triśatī-rājy-ādhipati, an epithet not met with elsewhere.

The date of the record is given in l. 7 as Sarhma(va)t 963 Jyēshṭha-śudi 7 Sōmē dinam-(nē), i.e., on Monday the 7th day of the light half of the month of Jyēshṭha in the year 963, which must be referred to the Kalachuri era. The date is, however, irregular, unless Sōmē is an error for Saunmyē in which case it would regularly correspond to Wednesday, the 9th May A.D. 1212.

Lines 7-9 mention some of the officers of the king and the offices they held. Malayasimha who bears the titles Mahāmahattaka and Maṃḍalika was the minister (mantrin) of the king. The other officers mentioned are : Thakkura Haripāla, the Saudhivigrahika or the minister of Foreign Affairs, Vāhaḍa, the city-prefect (Kōḷapāla) and Śrīchamda, who was a merchant (śrēṣṭhīn), the writer of deeds (arthalēkhin). The last three among others appear to have been the members of the pañchakula and the dharmādhipikarāṇa.

² Ind. Ant., Vol. XVII, pp. 231 ff. and 235 ff. For another inscription where the benedictory stanza of Kāli-dāsa's Sakuntalā is cited as an introductory verse, see above, Vol. XI, p. 65.

The record is interesting in that it is not the usual land-grant but is a vitta-bandha or ' deed of mortgage '¹ for the village Alirā, situated in the Dhōvahaṭṭa-pattana of the Dhanavāhi-pattalā. The village was pledged by the Śaiva teacher Śāntaśiva, son of the royal preceptor (rājaguru) Vimalaśiva, to the Rāṇaka Dharāka, but no mention is made of the actual amount of money that was taken as loan. The mortgagee, who belonged to the Vatsa-gōtra, was a son of Sēvarāja (Śivarāja) and grandson of Rāsala. The document is said to have been issued from a camp in a certain auspicious place, apparently in the city of Dhōvahaṭṭa (ll. 10-14). The deed was executed by Nādaśiva, another son of Vimalaśiva, on the authorisation of his elder brother Śāntaśiva (ll. 15-18). The mortgagee was given all the rights of collecting taxes. As far as it can be made out from l. 19, the meaning of which is not quite clear, he also appears to have been given the right of holding the village in pledge as long as he wished, probably meaning thereby till all the dues were cleared. There were seven witnesses to the deed, viz., the Paṭṭakila Madanē, Śilē, Thākur Sūpaṭa, Thākur Gāmgē, Raṇadhavala, Gaṃgādēva and Kavita (? ll. 19-20). It appears from the use of punctuation marks in lines 20-21 that Thākur Gōllana, probably an additional witness, was also authorised to take possession, evidently on behalf of the mortgagee. The document was drawn up by the Pandits Viśvēśvara and Gaṃgādhara and engraved by Śiruka. As it is not a land-grant, it naturally does not contain any imprecatory and benedictory verses at the end.

In connection with the identification of Trailōkyamalla mentioned in the present record we may observe that most of the binudas used by this ruler were used by the Kalachuri rulers of Tripurī and also by the Gāhaḍavāla rulers of Kanauj. But though places in the neighbourhood of Rewah were within the Kalachuri territory we do not know of any Kalachuri ruler of this name. I would therefore identify this Trailōkyamalla with the homonymous ruler mentioned in the Rewah Plates of Harirāja of V. S. 1298.² Cunningham and Kielhorn have already suggested that he is no other than the Chandēlla ruler Trailōkyavarman for whom we have records dating from V. S. 1261 to 1298 (A.D. 1205-1241). But while Trailōkyavarman, like his predecessors, calls himself Kālāñjaṛādhipati in both the sets of Garrah plates of V. S. 1261³ and Trikalīṅgādhipati in the Rewah plates of the Mahārāṇaka Kumārāpāla dated V. S. 1297,⁴ he is called Kanyakubjādhipati in the present inscription, a title used by the Gāhaḍavāla rulers of Kanauj. Though this last-mentioned title is not found in any other Chandēlla record, it is not unlikely that with the decline of the Gāhaḍavāla power, Trailōkyamalla assumed this title, as he did also the title of Trikalīṅgādhipati borne by the Kalachuris of Dāhala. Many years ago a hoard of 48 silver coins of the Chandēlla Madanavarman was found at Panwar in the Teonthar Tahsil of the Rewah State.⁵ This find tends to show, as has been already suggested by Dr. H. C. Ray⁶, that even in the time of this ruler the Chandēlla power penetrated into Bāghelkhand, north of the Kaimur range. But that the country around Rewah still continued to be under the Kalachuris for several decades is certain. We have two inscriptions of the Kalachuri Vijayasinha's time to support this view. The first is the Rewah plate of Salakshaṇavarman, the chief of Kakarēḍi (modern Kakreri on the border of Rewah and Panna States) and still a feudatory of Vijayasinha in V. S. 1253 (A.D. 1195),¹ the date of the record, and the second, the Rewah inscription of Malayasinha² dated K. 944 (A.D. 1192-93). Verse 24 of the latter record seems to show that already before K. 944, Salakshana had tried to throw off the yoke of subordination of these rulers, probably by joining hands with the Chandēllas, an attempt in which he was not apparently successful. I have noticed elsewhere a damaged inscription of the reign of Vijayasinha,³ the date on which seems to read (Chēdi year) 962. Unfortunately the provenance of this record, which was issued from Tripurī, is not known. But as it is now deposited in the Rewah Treasury, it is likely that it did not come from a place far from the Rewah town. If that is so, it is clear that the Kalachuris were still holding sway in this part of Bāghelkhand in K. 962. The record under consideration, however, shows that in K. 963, i.e., only a year later, their territory contiguous to the Rewah town had passed under the Chandēllas.

In the inscription of Vijayasinha of K. 962 referred to above, we find the name of one Maṇḍalika Malayasinha mentioned among the officers of this ruler. The Rewah inscription of K. 944 also mentions a Sāmanta Malayasinha who was responsible for the excavation of a tank and also for the setting up of the record in the reign of the very same Kalachuri ruler. Now there is nothing against our taking Malayasinha mentioned in these two records as identical. It is quite likely that Malayasinha, whose ancestors were connected with the Kalachuri rulers as officers for several generations, was himself appointed an officer by Vijayasinha sometime between K. 944 and K. 962. But what is surprising is that the record under consideration also not only mentions a Malayasinha bearing the titles Mahāmahattaka and Maṇḍalika but in addition calls him a mantrin or minister of the ruling king, viz., Trailōkyamalla. As this inscription is later than the inscription of K. 962 by one year only, there is little doubt that Malayasinha mentioned in all the three inscriptions is one and the same person. If this view is correct, then we have to admit that one of the chief officers of Vijayasinha not only transferred his allegiance to the conquering ruler but was also appointed a minister under him. It is reasonable to assume that he had to accept the Chandēlla suzerainty to save himself and his estate. We have a parallel instance in the history of the chiefs of Karkarēdi. We know from his Rewah plate that in V. S. 1253 Salakshanavarman was still a feudatory of the Kalachuri Vijayasinha. But in the Rewah plates of Harirāja (V. S. 1298) and his son Kumārapāla (V. S. 1297) we find these chiefs owing allegiance to the Chandēlla ruler Trailōkyavarman. But what is puzzling in the present record is the appointment of Malayasinha as a minister by the Chandēlla ruler. It may be that he helped the latter in his cause in some way or other or it may be that on account of his experience in local administration his services were utilized in the newly conquered territory on his accepting the Chandēlla supremacy.

In conclusion it would not be out of place to say a few words about the Śaiva teachers mentioned in the record. As I have already pointed out⁴ Vimalaśiva mentioned in the record is no other than the Rājaguru Vimalaśiva of the Jubbulpore Kotwali Plates of Jayasinhadēva of K. 918.⁵ Though the name is not found elsewhere it is probable that he belonged to the line of the ascetics of the Mattamayūra clan who were held in great reverence by the Kalachuri rulers of Tripurī. We know from the present record that Vimalaśiva had two sons, the elder being Śāntaśiva and the younger Nādaśiva. The epithets applied to the latter two teachers show that they, like their father, were also held in high estimation. Śāntaśiva is said to be the incarnation of the sage Durvāsas in the Kali age. The interpretation of another phrase used in connection with him is rather puzzling. It is trīṣaṭī-rājy-ādhipati-śrīmat-Trailōkyamalla-pād-ārcchana-rataḥ (l. 12). Probably this has to be translated as 'whose feet were devotedly worshipped by the illustrious Trailōkyamalla, the lord of the kingdom (consisting) of three hundred.' If that is so, it is reasonable to conclude that this teacher was getting some patronage from the new ruler as well, who also calls himself a Paramamāhēśvara. It is not clear under the circumstances why he should have to alienate what was apparently one of the gifts these teachers received from the Kalachuri rulers. Probably the Chandēlla conquest was very recent and as such these teachers did not get the same patronage as was hitherto extended to them by their former patrons and as a result they had to mortgage one of their gift villages to raise funds. A somewhat similar instance is provided by the Bengal Asiatic Society's Plates¹ of the Gāhaḍavāla Gōvindachandra which record that in V. S. 1177 (A.D. 1120), in presence of this ruler, the village of Karaṇḍa in the Antarāla-pattalā which was originally given to the Rājaguru-Śaivāchārya-Bhaṭṭāraka Rudraśiva by (the Kalachuri ruler) Yaśaḥkarna was transferred to Ṭhakkura Vasishṭhaśarman. Dr. F. W. Hall, who edited this record, suggested that the village which changed hands lay in the country conquered by Gōvindachandra from Yaśaḥkarna.

Of the localities mentioned in the record Dhōvahaṭṭa which was a paṭṭana at the time is identical with the village of Dhureṭi where the plates were found. The other localities mentioned in the record, viz., Dhanavāhi-pattalā and the village Alira, I am unable to identify.

No. 2.—RAMTEK STONE INSCRIPTION OF THE TIME OF RAMACHANDRA.

BY PROF. V. V. MIRASHI, M.A., AND L. R. KULKARNI, M.A., NAGPUR.

Rāmṭēk is the head-quarters of a taluk of the same name in the Nagpur District of the Central Provinces. It is situated 28 miles North by East of Nagpur and derives its name from the temple of Rāma on a hill close to the town. The place is regarded as very holy on account of a number of temples and tirthas on the hill and in its vicinity. A fair is held in the month of Kārttika, which attracts thousands of people from even far-off places. The sanctity of the place can be traced back to the fourth century A.D. at least; for the Riddhapur plates, which were issued from the foot-prints of the Lord of Rāmagiri¹ (modern Rāmṭēk), record a grant of the Vākātaka dowager queen Prabhāvatiguptā on the twelfth taluk of the bright fortnight of Kārttika. Kālidāsa also mentions in his Meghadūta that the hill was marked with the foot-prints of Rāma². These references indicate that the shrine at Rāmagiri at first contained only the foot-prints of Rāma. Later on the images of Rāma and Sītā appear to have been installed there and another temple dedicated to Lakshmaṇa was built. This is probably the reason why the temple of Lakshmaṇa is at present situated in front of that of Rāma and Sītā. The present images of these deities are said to have been found in the Dudhālā tank at Rāmṭēk³ and were substituted some years ago for the earlier ones which had been mutilated. These temples are surrounded by a number of smaller shrines. They are situated in the innermost of three enclosures on the hill and none but caste Hindus get access to them.

The present inscription is incised on a large slab let into the wall on the right hand side of the door of the garbhagriha in the temple of Lakshmaṇa. It was first referred to by General Cunningham's Assistant Beglar,⁴ who visited Rāmṭēk in 1873-74. He was not admitted to the innermost court-yard of the temple, but he got the inscription copied by his Hindu servant and noticed in it the name of Rāmadēva.⁵ He could not, however, offer any conjecture about the identification of this Rāmadēva. Subsequently from a faint rubbing of it supplied by Dr. Fleet, Prof. Kielhorn first noticed in it the names of Simhaṇa and Rāmachandra whom he identified with the homonymous princes of the Raipur branch of the Haihaya dynasty⁶ mentioned in the Khalāri and Raipur stone inscriptions. In 1904-05 Mr. Cousens visited the place, but he too was not admitted inside⁷ and was therefore unable to give any account of the contents of the inscription. Finally Rai Bahadur Hiralal briefly noticed the inscription in his *Inscriptions in the C. P. and Berar*⁸ and identified many of the tirthas mentioned in it in an informative article entitled 'A visit to Rāmṭēk', published in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XXXVII, pp. 202-08. Though referred to or noticed several times the inscription has remained unedited so far. In the absence of a reliable edition it has given rise to some misconceptions about its historical contents. We have, therefore, edited it here from the original stone which we could examine several times during our visits to Rāmṭēk.

As stated above, the record is inscribed on a stone fixed in the front wall of the garbhagriha in the temple of Lakshmana. It now contains 75 lines of writing covering a space 2' 9" broad and 3' 3" high, but a few lines may have been lost at the top. The extant portion falls into two parts, separated by some ornamental figures in lines 31 and 32, the first part comprising ll. 1-31 and the second ll. 31-75. As the surface of the stone has flaked off in several places the record has suffered very much, especially in its upper and lower portions and on the left hand side. The loss of the upper portion is very much to be regretted; since, judging from the fragments still extant, it seems to have contained a description of the exploits of the reigning king and his ancestors.

The characters belong to the Nāgarī alphabet of about the thirteenth century A.D. The language is Sanskrit. As regards orthography, we find that the vowel ri is in some places wrongly written for ri, see tribhuvana l. 31; v is throughout used for b, see vāla for bāla l. 26; sh is employed for kh and vice versa, see e.g., vishaṇḍila l. 13 and namaskarikhyē l. 54; the visarga before k and p is changed to sh, see tushṭuvush-kalp-āntē l. 47 and ṛipash=Paṁktirathō l. 48, etc.¹ The sign of anagraha is also noticed in some places.

The first four lines of the inscription are too much mutilated to yield any coherent sense. The fifth line contains the words Yādavō vaṁśaḥ and Yadu-vaṁśajaḥ evidently indicating that the reigning king called himself Yādava and traced his descent from the legendary hero Yadu. The exploits of some king of this family are next described, but the only names of his adversaries that can be made out are Rudra in l. 7, the lord of the Andhras and Chōḍa in l. 8 and possibly the lord of the Gurjaras in l. 9. The syllables Jaita which occur at the end of l. 9 probably denote some name like Jaitrapāla. The name of the king Siṁhaṇa occurs in l. 15 in the course of the description of his successor, who is said to have made the Earth forget her grief on account of separation from the illustrious king Siṁhaṇa. This name seems to have occurred at the beginning of l. 13 also, but the first two aksharas of it have now been broken away. Line 16 mentions the genealogy of a person named Śrī-Rāghava. He was a descendant of one Vāyīnāyaka. From l. 17 we learn that the king, the illustrious Rāmachandra, bestowed on him (i.e., Rāghava) fortune which appeared lovely owing to the prosperity of his empire and himself enjoyed the company of ladies skilled in all arts. This means that the king entrusted the government of his kingdom to him and being free from care gave himself up to the enjoyment of pleasures. This Rāghava is probably referred to again in ll. 18 and 21 as Śayyāpāla (guardian of the royal bed-chamber). His wife Rājyāī is mentioned in l. 19. Once upon a time Rāghava asked his preceptor how he could cross the ocean of worldly existence. In answer to this the latter seems to have given a description of the hill as well as of the temples and tīrthas situated on it and in its vicinity. The first part of the record seems to have described the hill and the temples on the four sides of it, viz., Ghaṇṭeśvara, Sudheśvara, Kēdāra and Ānjanēya. The second part, which is better preserved, names and describes the temples and tīrthas on the hill and in the town of Rāmṭek after the manner of the tīrtha-māhātmyas. As a matter of fact many of them find mention in two Sindūragiri-māhātmyas, one of sixteen and the other of forty-five *adhyāyas*². The description and topography of these temples and tīrthas given in the present inscription agree with those in the māhātmyas. Some of them are again mentioned in a work of the Mahānubhāva sect³ in connection with the itinerary of Chakradhara, the founder of the sect, who lived in the time of the Yādava king Rāmachandra (13th century A.D.). Most of these temples and tirthas can even now be identified at Rāmṭēk. The traditions about them are thus at least seven centuries old.

As stated above, Prof. Kielhorn, in his article on the Khalāri stone inscription, expressed the opinion that the kings Siṃhaṇa and Rāmachandra mentioned in the present inscription were identical with the princes of the same names who were respectively the grandfather and father of Haribrahmādēva, a Haihaya or Kalachuri prince who ruled in Chhattisgarh in the beginning of the fifteenth century A.D.¹ From this he concluded that the rule of the Kalachuris extended in the west as far as Nāgpur. An examination of several Kalachuri dates had led him to the conclusion that the Kalachuri year commenced on the first tithi of the bright fortnight of Āśvina, but he had no evidence of the actual use of the Āśvinādi year in any territory under the rule of the Kalachuris. This was subsequently furnished by the remark of Colebrooke in his Journal of Occurrences at Nagpur that the year at Nāgpur commenced on the first of the bright half of Āśvina.² Kielhorn thought that this usage was reminiscent of the use of the Kalachuri era in the territory round Nāgpur, which on the evidence of the Rāmṭēk inscription he believed to have once been under the rule of the Haihayas or Kalachuris of Raipur.³ The identification of the family to which the princes Siṃhaṇa and Rāmachandra mentioned in the present inscription belonged is, therefore, important not only for the interpretation of the record, but also for the determination of the beginning of the Kalachuri year.

Kielhorn had no opportunity to examine the inscription in situ. He had before him only a faint rubbing of it. The characters of the inscription have become very shallow, being choked up with oily dust and white-wash. It is therefore extremely difficult to decipher the record from rubbings or inked estampages. Rai Bahadur Hiralal, who personally examined it, read the words Yādavā ramśaḥ (l. 5), but he chose to stick to Kielhorn's view that the kings Siṃhaṇa and Rāmachandra mentioned therein belonged to the Haihaya dynasty, because he thought that the Haihayas being descended from Yadu could be called Yādavas⁴. It is no doubt true that the Haihayas were descendants of Yadu; for their ancestor Haihaya was, according to the Purāṇas, a grandson of Sahasrajit who was himself a son of Yadu⁵. But the name Yādava was by usage restricted to the descendants of Krōṣṭhī, another son of Yadu⁶. Nowhere in their numerous inscriptions have the Haihayas or Kalachuris called themselves Yādavas. Besides, in the genealogy of the Haihayas there occurs nowhere any name like Jaitrapāla, which, as shown above, appears at the end of line 9 of the present inscription. But the most important objection to the identification of the kings Siṃhaṇa and Rāmachandra with their namesakes who ruled in Chhattisgarh is that neither these latter kings nor any of their immediate ancestors achieved any victories over Rudra, the lord of the Āndhras, the Chōla and the lord of the Gurjaras; for they were petty princes, whose rule did not extend much beyond the modern district of Raipur. Besides, there is no king of the name Rudra known from history as ruling in the fourteenth or fifteenth century

⁵ See Harivamśa (Bombay Ed.), adhyāya 33, vv. 1-2. Compare also the Piṭhāpuram pillar inscription of Mallidēva and Manma-Satya II, above, Vol. IV, p. 89.

A. D., who may have been defeated by these kings. It is therefore difficult to uphold the identification first proposed by Kielhorn.

We find, on the other hand, the names Jaitrapāla, Siṃhaṇa and Rāmachandra in the genealogical list of the Later Yādavas of Dēvagiri, who flourished in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries A.D. Jaitrapāla, whose name seems to have occurred at the end of line 9, is probably identical with the homonymous king who was the father of Siṃhaṇa. The names of Rudra, the kings of Āndhra and Chōla in ll. 7-8, seem to have occurred in the course of the description of Jaitrapāla's victories; for we know from the introduction to Hēmādri's *Vṛatakhṇḍa*¹ as well as from the Paṭhan plates² and other Yādava grants that Jaitrapāla killed the Kākatiya king Rudra. This latter king is in some places called the king of Āndhra. We can therefore unhesitatingly identify the kings mentioned here with the Yādava kings of Dēvagiri. That the kingdom of the Yādavas extended in the East as far as Lānji in the Bālāghāt District is known from a stone inscription of the dynasty found at Lānji³ which mentions the Yādava king Rāmachandra.

We know from other records that Siṃhaṇa was succeeded by his grandson Kṛishṇa, but his name does not occur in the extant portion. We can, however, conjecture that he must have been described in line 15, which speaks of a king having made the earth forget its grief due to separation from Siṃhaṇa. The names of Kṛishṇa's brother Mahādēva and his short-lived son Āmaṇa may have been omitted in the present record. As no successor of Rāmachandra has been mentioned here, it seems that the inscription was put up during his reign. It may, therefore, be referred to the last quarter of the thirteenth century A. D.

As the kings mentioned in the present inscription are thus proved to be of the Yādava dynasty of Dēvagiri and no inscriptions of the Kalachuris are found in the Marāṭhī-speaking districts of the Central Provinces, Kielhorn's view that the Kalachuri year commenced in the month of Āśvina cannot be supported by any usage current in the territory round Nāgpur⁴.

The mutilated condition of the inscription makes it difficult to say what it was intended to record. But the fact that the genealogy of a personage named Rāghava is given in lines 16 and 17 where he is also said to have been entrusted by Rāmachandra with the government of his whole empire combined with the statement in l. 63 that this Rāghava felt gratified on doing something seems to show that the object of the inscription was to record some service rendered by Rāghava to the deities at Rāmṭēk—perhaps some repairs done to the temple of Lakshmaṇa where the inscription is put up. Māidēva, who is mentioned in ll. 70-71, seems to have been a local official in charge of the work.

The hill on which the main temples of Rāma and Lakshmaṇa are situated is called Sindūra-giri and Tapaṃgiri⁵ (for Tapōgiri) in the present inscription. The tradition about the former name was apparently given in line 23 which is partly mutilated. What remains of it is, however, sufficient to show that the hill was called Sindūragiri, because it was reddened by the blood flowing from the breast of Hiraṇyakaśipu which was torn by Narasimha with his sharp claws. There are two temples on the hill containing huge images of the man-lion incarnation of Vishṇu. As conjectured by Cousens¹ the name Sindūragiri may have been originally given to the hill because of its red stones which when broken or newly dressed appear blood-red. The second name of the hill Tapagiri (for Tapōgiri, penance-hill) which occurs in this very form in one of the Sindūragiri-māhātmyas owes its origin to the tradition that Śambūka, a Śūdra ascetic, practised penance here. He was afterwards killed by Rāma with his sword called Chandrahāsa. But, the Māhātmya says, he asked for three boons from Rāma, viz., that his mortal remains should be transformed into a liṅga in situ, that Rāma should live on the hill for ever and that he himself should be worshipped before Rāma. In accordance with this, pilgrims first worship the liṅga, now called Dhūmrēśvara, situated on the southern plateau of the hill outside the citadel, before they proceed to the temples of Rāma and Lakṣmaṇa. The story of Śambūka is given in line 45 of the present record, which mentions the liṅga Dhūmrākṣa.

The story of Śambūka occurs also in the Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmīki. It would, therefore, be interesting to see how far the topography of the place where Śambūka was practising penance suits Rāmṭēk. According to the Epic the Śūdra ascetic was engaged in austerities on the bank of a large lake to the north of the mountain Śaivala.² This mountain is not mentioned anywhere else. But from the Rāmāyaṇa itself we learn that a king named Daṇḍa was ruling over the territory between the Vindhya and Śaivala mountains.³ His rape of a Brāhmaṇa girl led to the devastation of the country measuring a hundred yōjanas round the Śaivala mountain and this country came consequently to be known by the name of the Daṇḍaka forest.⁴ This Daṇḍa or Dāṇḍakya is called Bhōja elsewhere⁵ and it is well known that the Bhōjas were ruling over Vidarbha. So the site of Śambūka's penance must have been situated in Vidarbha to the south of the Vindhya mountain. The Rāmāyaṇa tells us that after killing Śambūka, Rāma went in his aerial car to the hermitage of Agastya which was situated not very far from the Gōdāvarī,⁶ but it gives us no idea of the distance between the site of Śambūka's penance and the hermitage of Agastya. Still the description in the epic shows clearly that the former lay somewhere in ancient Vidarbha between the Vindhya mountain and the Gōdāvarī. The description in the Rāmāyaṇa of the site of Śambūka's penance suits Rāmṭēk where there is a large tank at the foot of the hill. As there is no hill in Vidarbha where there is such a tradition connecting it with Śambūka's penance, it would not be wrong to identify Rāmṭēk with the Śaivala mountain.⁷

line 70 has आह्वय सवरसुवाच वचः स मैथिलीनायस्तुयति देन मे कुरु . . . which shows that the inscription was intended to record something done by Māidēva by the order of Rāghava—perhaps some repairs to the temple of Lakshmana.

No. 3.—A GRANT OF THE WESTERN CHALUKYA VIJAYADITYA : SAKA 653.

By S. C. UPADHYAYA, M.A., LL.B., BOMBAY.

This set of three copper-plates was presented by the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society to the Archæological Section of the Prince of Wales Museum, Bombay, and is now exhibited in the Epigraphical Gallery.

These plates have not been published so far nor have they been noticed anywhere. Their authenticity is, however, unquestionable and therefore they are taken up for publication in this journal.

Each plate is 10"×5½" in size. The whole grant runs into 45 lines. A circular hole with a diameter of about ¾" is found in all the three plates. There is neither any ring nor any Royal seal attached to the set at present. The first and third plates are written on one side only while the second plate is inscribed on both the sides. As regards orthography the record has no peculiarity worth mentioning.

Vijayāditya, the donor of the present grant, seems to have ascended the throne in 618-619 Śaka as the Bādāmi Sanskrit and Kanarese inscription is dated Śaka 621, in his third regnal year.¹ The present grant was made in his 36th regnal year when 653 Śaka had passed. His reign seems to have ended in 654-655 Śaka as his son Vikramāditya II issued from Raktapura a grant in his 2nd regnal year in 656 Śaka expired.²

The donation was made on the full-moon day of Vaiśākha to Bhavasvāmi-Bhaṭṭa of the Viśvāmītra-gōtra, who was well versed in the Vaidika literature and who was the son of Paśupatiśarman and grandson of Yajñaśarman. The donation was of a village (?) in a certain *viśhaya*³. The grant was issued from the victorious camp at Raktapura.⁴

The writer was Niravadya-Puṇyavallabha. We know that in the reign of Vinayāditya the Mahāsāmdhivigraha was one Rāma-Puṇyavallabha.⁵ But in the reign of Vijayāditya there was one Niravadya-Paṇḍita alias Udayadēva-Paṇḍita, a Jaina to whom Vijayāditya granted a village.⁶ Niravadya-Paṇḍita who was of the Mūla-Saṃgha was the spiritual guide of Vinayāditya.⁷

The inscription opens with Scasti followed by a verse in praise of the Boar incarnation of Vishnu. Then it successively refers to the famous Mānavya-gōtra, the descent from Hārītī of the Chalukyas who were guarded by the Seven Mothers, the receipt of a hanner bearing the figure

35 भवस्वामिभट्टाय नवसारिविषये तेह्लादाहारे

36 कोच्चत्त्यातेह्लादपटमल्याषवेसीभायामाया मधेय तारा[व]द्रना-

37 सयान(नी) वाप्ययमने विजयादिखेन दत्तः etc.—N. L. R.]

⁷ [The late Prof. Pathak has suggested (above, Vol. X, p. 15) that the name Niravadya, which seems to have been a biruda, originally of Vijayāditya, was assumed by the writer of his grants.—N. L. R.]

of a Boar on it through the favour of Vishnu, etc., as found in most of the other grants of this dynasty.

The genealogy begins with Pulakēśi-Vallabha (I)¹ who had purified his limbs with the holy waters at the time of the horse sacrifice performed by him. Then his son, the famous Kirtti-varman(I) who had defeated the kings of Vanavāsī, is referred to. Then we find mentioned his son Satyāśraya otherwise famous as Pulakēśin (II) who bore the additional titles Mahārājā-dhīrāja and Paramēśvara; the last-mentioned title he obtained by defeating Harshavardhana. Then comes his 'favourite' son Vikramāditya (I). Mounted on the back of his favourite steed Chitrakaṇṭha and with only a sword in hand he is said to have retrieved the fortune of his father which had been taken away by the alliance of three kings. He also broke down the power of the Pāṇḍyas, Chōlas, Kēraḷas and Kaḷabhras, and made the king of Kāñchī bow down in reverence to him. Then is mentioned Vinayāditya, who is also stated to have subdued the triple alliance. He subdued the kings of Kavēra, Pārasika and Sirṃhaja and by defeating the king of the north acquired the emblems of greatness such as the Pāḍhvaja, etc.

His favourite son was Vijayāditya-Samastabhuvanāśraya, the donor of the present grant. He secured peace at home while his grandfather carried on wars with the southern kings and he assisted his father in a campaign in the north and going further to the north (more than what his father had done) he acquired for himself the emblems of Gaṅgā, Yamunā, the Pāḍhvaja banner and the Ḍhakkā drum. He was once caught by the enemies but he skilfully contrived to escape and brought peace and order unaided by others in the provinces where disorder reigned supreme for a while.

No. 4.—ELLORA PLATES OF DANTIDURGA : SAKA 663.

By S. K. DIKSHIT, M.A., NEW DELHI.

The copper-plates which bear the subjoined inscription of the earliest Rāshtrakūṭa emperor Dantidurga were discovered at Ellora (ancient Ēlāpura) in Aurangābād District of H. E. H. the Nizām's Dominions. They were handed over to Sir John Marshall by Major Garforth, Under Secretary, Public Works Department, in the year 1921, but originally belonged to a widow lady, by name Mrs. Plunkett, from whom they were subsequently purchased by the Archæological Department. Unfortunately they have somehow remained in oblivion for more than 17 years, until Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit happened to come across them. He has kindly lent them to me for editing, which I am doing under his guidance.

The plates are two in number, each measuring in the middle roughly 6 inches in length and $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches in breadth. They are joined together by a copper ring which is oval in shape, being roughly $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches in length and $1\frac{1}{8}$ inches in breadth. The letters, which are engraved with fair accuracy, vary in size from $\frac{1}{8}$ th to $\frac{1}{3}$ rd of an inch. The plates are inscribed on one side only, and the engraving is fairly deep, though the letters do not appear on the other side except in a few cases. The edges of the plates are thickened only very slightly, so that the first plate is worn out in the middle of the upper edge though no damage is thereby caused to any letters. The copper ring which joins the two plates together has a seal attached to it, on which appears a winged figure sitting cross-legged. The figure must be of Garuḍa who usually appears on the Rāshtrakūṭa seals. The language is Sanskrit and the inscription is throughout written in prose, except for the imprecatory and benedictory verses (lines 23 to 28) which are usually found near the end. As regards orthography, it may be noted that the consonant following r is generally duplicated (cf. Dantidurgga, l. 8; antarggata and vinirggata, ll. 13 and 14; Adhvaryyu, l. 14; utsarppaṇārtthan, l. 17). A certain amount of laxity in rules relating to sandhi, etc., is also observable.

The palaeographical peculiarities found in this inscription mark it out from the Rāshtrakūṭa inscriptions like the Multāi and Tiwarkhēḍ plates of Nannarāja Yuddhāsura,¹ the Bhāṇḍak plates of Kṛishṇarāja I², which, according to Dr. V. S. Sukthankar, have characters belonging to the "Northern class of alphabets". On the other hand, a comparative study of this record with some of the Valabhi and Southern Gujarāt plates betrays their closest affinity in palaeographical details. Thus the Ilāḍ (Broach District) plates of Dadda II-Praśāntarāja,³ Prince of Wales Museum plates of Jayabhaṭa,⁴ Āntrōli-Chhārōli plates of Karka II (dated Śaka 679)⁵ and Baroda plates of Suvarṇavarsha (dated Śaka 734)⁶ bear a much closer resemblance with the present record than the first-mentioned three grants from the Bētāl and Chāṇḍā Districts. Special attention may be drawn to the form of the letter ē (l. 10), which could easily be mistaken for 'gu' or 'l', but is obviously meant to be of the same type as is found in Ēlāpur-āchala, etc., of the Baroda plates⁷.

The object of this inscription is to record the grant of a village called Pippalāla in the district of Chandanapuri-eighty-four, to certain Brāhmaṇas originating from Navasārikā, by the Rāshtrakūṭa prince Dantidurga, son of Indrarāja and grandson of Karkarāja. The grant was issued from, and probably recorded at, Badarikā-vāsaka, though it was originally made at Ēlapura (Ēlapura) by the donor after bathing in the Guhēśvara tīrtha. Its chief importance, however, lies in the fact that it is the earliest dated record of the Imperial Rāshtrakūṭa dynasty so far known. The inscription is dated in the (Śaka) Samvat 663, Āśvina Śuddha trayōdaśī, Sōma-vāra. According to S. K. Pillai's Indian Ephemeris the date is not regular either for Śaka 663 current or for 663 expired. The details cited, however, regularly correspond to Monday, the 17th September 742 A.D., in the Śakā year 664 expired. The present inscription, whose authenticity can be borne out by the palaeographical test, is thus dated 12 years earlier than the Sāmangaḍ plates of Dantidurga,¹ which are dated in the Śaka year 675. The genuineness of the latter has been called in question by scholars like Dr. Sukthankar² and Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar,³ who base their arguments mainly on palaeographical grounds, which are, however, 'hardly convincing' to Dr. A. S. Altekar, 'when the difference is only of a few decades.'⁴ One may not perhaps fully agree with Dr. Altekar in his doubts as regards the validity of the palaeographical test, which has always to reckon the district in which the inscription is found, the district in which the grant is given and the personality of the writer; but one cannot set aside the Sāmangaḍ inscription altogether, especially in view of the possibility that it might have been copied from an earlier and authentic inscription which really gave the correct date of Dantidurga (viz., Ś. 675). The present record also bears out Dr. Altekar's suggestion that at any rate "there is nothing impossible in Dantidurga being a ruling prince in 753-4 A. D."⁵

Another point to be considered is regarding the titles that were borne according to this inscription by Dantidurga and his predecessors, Karka and Indra. All the three bear only feudatory titles, such as Samadhigata-paṇcha-mahāśabda and Mahāsāmantādhipati. Thus Dantidurga had not as yet assumed the imperialistic titles which appear in the Sāmangaḍ plates. No doubt, he bears in this record the title of Prithivīvallabha, but that may signify at best his increased importance. It is true that the title Prithivīvallabha was often borne, along with Śrīvallabha, by kings of the Imperial lines of the Chālukyas and the Rāshtrakūṭas; but while the latter title, like the simpler Vallabha, was exclusively a suzerain's title, the former, viz., Prithivīvallabha, was borne also by important feudatories. Thus in circa 645 A. D. Chandrāditya, the eldest son of Pulakēśin II, is styled Prithivīvallabha and Mahārāja. About a century later, i.e., in or before 739 A. D., the same title Prithivīvallabha was conferred upon Pulakēśin (the repeller of the Tūjikas) along with other titles, viz., Avanījanāśraya, Dakṣiṇāpathasādhāra-Chalukyankulālamkāra, etc., by Śrī-Vallabhanarēndra who evidently was his suzerain⁶. Dantidurga also seems to have defeated certain enemies, before 742 A. D., since he is said in this inscription to have obtained victory in many battles. One may therefore suggest that he too was honoured by Śrī-Vallabhanarēndra with the title Prithivīvallabha in recognition of his service in some battles, possibly fought in collaboration with Pulakēśin-Avanījanāśraya. The date of the present record is only three years later than the date of Pulakēśin's record. The connection of the Rāshtrakūṭa predecessors of Dantidurga with Gujarāt is borne out by the fact recorded in the Sanjān and other inscriptions that the mother of Dantidurga (called Bhavagaṇā in the Bhāndak plates of Kṛishnarāja)⁷ was a Chālukya princess who was carried away by Indrarāja from Khēṭaka-maṇḍapa in accordance with the Rākshasa form of marriage. Further, the connection of Dantidurga with Southern Gujarāt is perhaps betrayed by the fact that one or probably all of the donees of the present grant hailed from Navasārikā. Lastly, as shown above, close palaeographical examination of this inscription confirms this connection, for the inscription was probably engraved somewhere in South Gujarāt. Thus, there is nothing impossible in Dantidurga helping Pulakēśi-Avanījanāśraya, when the Tājikas were penetrating into Dakṣiṇāpatha at Navasārikā, though it has to be admitted that this is nothing more than a supposition.

When did this scuffle between the Gujarāt Chālukyas and the Tājikas take place? Several scholars have averred that it must have taken place soon after 724 A.D., when Junayd¹ under Caliph Hisham carried raids into the dominions of the Hindu kings. But it seems to me that the Chālukyan skirmishes with the Tājikas did not take place before 731 A.D., since Pulakēśi-Avanījanāśraya who claims for himself the credit for repulsing the Tājikas, did not come to the throne till after A.D. 731, for an inscription of Vijayāditya Janāśraya Yuddhamalla Maṅgalarāja, the elder brother of Pulakēśin, is dated in that year.² Pulakēśin must have, therefore, encountered the Arabs sometime between 731 A.D. and 739 A.D., i.e., probably in the reign of Vikramāditya II who ruled from 733 A.D. to 746 A.D. Thus Vikramāditya was probably the Śrī-Vallabhanarēndra who conferred titles on both Pulakēśin and Dantidurga. The assumption of the title Prithivīvallabha and the biruda Khaḍgāvalōka on the part of Dantidurga shows, at any rate, that he had materially added to the dignity and prestige of the Rāshtrakūṭas before this grant was issued; while the issue of a land grant itself shows a certain amount of independence enjoyed by Dantidurga.

Dantidurga must have required some time to achieve victory in many battles as is claimed by him in the present record, or at least to add to the dignity and prestige of the family, as is indicated by the assumption of additional, if not higher, titles. Hence, Dantidurga's career probably began some time before 742 A. D. This would probably invalidate Dr. Altekar's supposition that Indra I married the Chālukya princess Bhavaganā in or after 726, when he "very probably served in this campaign (against the Valabhī king) as one of the feudatories of the Chālukya king (Maṅgalarasa)"³. Another statement of Dr. Altekar that "Nanna Guṇāvalōka, a younger brother of Indra I, was still alive in 792 A.D., as the Daulatabad plates show",⁴ also needs correction, since it is nowhere told in the original record that Nanna was still alive at that date, though his son who issued the grant was then certainly living. Hence, the dates suggested for Dantidurga and his ancestors by Dr. Altekar have to be revised in the light of this record and the suggestions made above and we have perhaps to assign the following approximate dates to Dantidurga and his ancestors :—

Dantivarman (A.D. 615-40).

Indra-Prichchhakarāja (640-65).

Gōvindarāja (665-90).

Karka I (690-715).

Indra I (715-35).

Dantidurga (A.D. 735-57) ; known dates, A.D. 742 and 754.

¹ Elliot : History of India, Vol. I, pp. 125-26.

⁴ Ibid., p. 10. See above, Vol. IX, pp. 195 ff.

Consideration of the above facts would make it clear that the suggestion of Dr. Bhagwanlal Indraji about the identity of Karka I of Āntrōli-Chhārōli plates with the grandfather of Dantidurga is more probable than Dr. Altekar is disposed to agree. According to him, "the drawback in this theory is the necessity of assuming that Dhruva, Govinda and Karka II were, all of them, the eldest sons of their parents."¹ This is because he would assign later dates to the predecessors of Karka I, and would place Nannarāja in 793 A.D., when he probably did not exist. Thus the various branches of the Rāshtrakūṭa family emanating from Karka I may be shown with their known dates as follows :—

As stated already, the palaeography shows a close similarity between the letters of this record and those of the Āntrōli-Chhārōli record of Karka II, which favours Dr. Bhagwanlal's hypothesis. Dr. Altekar, however, tries to connect the line of Dantidurga with Nannarāja Yuddhāsura of Multāi and Tiwarkhēd plates, which palaeographically differ from the present grant.

A verse in the Sāmangaḍ plates possibly connects early activities of Dantidurga with the Mahi and the Rēvā as also with the Mahānadī. But this does not necessarily show that he was connected with the Rāshtrakūṭas of Berār. He might have led an expedition and gained a victory on the bank of the Mahānadī. As regards Dantidurga's revolt against the Vallabha it is possible to hold that it did not take place till the death of Vikramāditya II who had bestowed on him the title Prithivīvallabha, while the accession of Kirtivarman II in circa 747 A.D. probably gave an impetus to his desire to catch hold of the royal sceptre, which he did, according to the Daśāvatāra cave, Sāmangaḍ and many other inscriptions, by means of daṇḍa or daṇḍabala. In view of this definite statement of the use of force, it is difficult to agree with Dr. Altekar's suggestion that 'the overthrow of the Chālukya emperor was brought about by strategem or treachery.'² The very fact that Kirtivarman II was alive at least upto 757 A. D. shows that very probably there was no intrigue against him, but that he was defeated in a regular battle by Dantidurga, who had raised the standard of rebellion in consequence of the weakness of the central authority. Another fact that I should mention here is about the reading Sandhubhūpa found in l. 10 of the Daśāvatāra record, which Dr. Bhagwanlal reads as : daṇḍen-āira jīgāya Vallabha-balan yaḥ Sandhubhūp-ādhipam. According to Dr. Altekar, Sandhubhūpa "is obviously a mistake for Sindhuhūpa".³ But then, it would mean that Dantidurga conquered "the overlord of the kings of Sind". The correct reading, so far as I can see from ink-estampages of the Daśāvātāra inscription, kindly supplied by Dr. N. P. Chakravarti, is : danḍeṇ=aiṇa jīgāya Vallabha-nṛipam (?) yaḥ sarva-bhūp-ādhipam, etc., that is : "He conquered Vallabha, the king of all kings by means of force". We may here note that Ballara "signifies king of kings", according to Ibn Khurdādh, Al-Idrisi, etc.¹ There is thus no question of Dantidurga conquering Sind according to this reading.

Of the localities mentioned in this inscription, Badarikā whence this record was issued probably lies as indicated by the palaeography of the record, somewhere in southern Gujarāt, though an alternative that the writer who inscribed the record might have hailed from that region is not altogether barred out. Navasārīkā is the famous Nausārī (Baroda), while *Ēlāpura*² is the famous Ellora, where Dantidurga built the Daśāvātāra cave temple as can be inferred from his inscription found in that cave, and where his successor Kṛishṇa built the Kailāsa temple. As regards the Guhēśvara-tīrtha, which, according to this inscription, seems to be in Ēlāpura, one may suggest that this Īśvara of the cave (guhā) is none else but Gṛishṇēśvara of Ellora,³ one of the twelve Jyōtir-līngas. Chandanapuri is the same as the modern Chandanpuri a small town on the Girna river, three miles to the south-west of Malegaum, and about forty-five miles to the north-west of Ellora while Pippalāla is the same as the modern Pimpal 12 miles south-east of Chandanpuri, and about 33 miles from Ellora. Since Pippala changes into Pimpal in Marāṭhī, there is little phonetic difficulty with regard to the equation Pippalāla=Pimpal. This geographical consideration therefore suggests that the Rāshtrakūṭa territory included at least the Aurangābād District and parts of Nāsik and Khāndesh Districts as early as 742 A. D.

I may point out another tradition narrated in the Brahmapurāṇa, Ch. 108 (Gautamī-Māhātmya), according to which Ilāpura owes its name to king Ilā. The story says that Ilā changed his sex on entering the forest called Umāvana due to a curse of Śiva and came to be known as Ilā. Wishing to regain her former sex Ilā worshipped Śiva on the banks of the river Gautamī (Gōdāvarī) in the forests of Dandaka. She succeeded and hence the town established there came to be known as Ilāpura. The tīrtha, according to Dr. Burgess, "was originally at the caves" (A. S. W. I., Vol. V, p. 4).

¹ The epithet 'anēka-chāturdānta-gaja-ghaṭ-āṭṭopa-samara-saṃghaṭṭa-labha-vijayah' is also found in the Khāmkhēḍ plates of the time of Prāpāṣila, edited by Prof. V. V. Mirashi (Supra, Vol. XXII, p. 95). The letters being partly illegible, the editor has read them as: 'anēka-cha[tu]rddanta-[gaja-ghaṭā] [prāpta*]-vijayah.' (In the Khāmkhēḍ plates there is no room for so many syllables after ghaṭā. — Ed.) But the present record has a greater similarity with the Bagumrā grant of Nikumbhallaśakti Sēndraka (Prithivi-vallabha) than with the Khāmkhēḍ plates. Cf. Ind. Ant., Vol. XVIII, p. 267:—Ācūmahādhara-vijara-sthira-ruchira-samunnatē vilasita-mahatī yaśasi (vilasita-yaśasi mahatī) Sēndraka-rājñām=anrayē naika-chānu(tu)rdanta-gaja-ghaṭ[ā]-āṭṭopa-sam[re]-saṃghaṭṭa-labha-vijayā, etc. (The reading cited here will be found slightly different from the one given by Bühler.) The writer of our inscription thus seems to have before him a Sēndraka record, which he blindly copied till he inscribed the words 'vilasita-yaśasi mahatī sa', as if he had to write 'Sēndraka-rājñām=anrayē.' Immediately after he wrote 'sa', however, it seems to have dawned upon him that this deed belonged to the Rāshtrakūṭas and not to the Sēndrakas. So he inserted an obviously unnecessary word 'Indrarājā(ji)ṇāyē.' After stating that Dantidurga belonged to the Rāshtrakūṭa family and that he was a son of Indrarāja it was certainly not necessary to add that he was a member of Indrarāja's family.

² The letter la is incised below the line. It was evidently omitted at first by mistake and was supplied later on. The līlapada sign over the foregoing lā indicates the omission.

No. 5.—BHIKSHUNIS IN INDIAN INSCRIPTIONS.

BY BIMALA CHURN LAW, M.A., B.L., PH.D.

Here I am concerned to put together the evidences which Indian inscriptions bear to the existence of the Buddhist Bhikshunī order in India, and to examine how far they tally with the facts that may be gathered from literature and foreign travels.

It may be observed at the outset that the epithet *bhikshunī*¹ (*bhikhunī*², *bhichhunī*³) is nowhere employed in Indian inscriptions to denote a religious woman other than a Buddhist female mendicant, sister or nun as she is usually represented. In rare instances samanikā or pavajitkū is used as the epithet of a Buddhist nun.⁴ This is, however, not to deny that Indian inscriptions are wanting in references to the female members of the Jaina Order, although they are not called bhikshunīs.⁵

The Bhābrū and Schism Pillar Edicts of Aśoka go to prove that the Buddhist community was constituted in the 3rd century B.C., precisely as in the Buddha's time, of bhikshus, bhikshunīs, upāsakas, and upāsikās. The text of Aśoka's ordinance provides against schisms in the Saṅgha fomented by bhikshus as well as bhikshunīs (e chum kho bhikhū vū bhikhunī vū saṅgham bhākhati).⁶ Thus the bhikshunīs had at that time to be reckoned with as equally powerful factors in the matter of unity or division in the Buddhist Fraternity.

The information about the bhikshunīs which may be gathered from Aśoka's edicts may be supplemented by the account of Saṅghamitrā's mission to Ceylon as met with in the Dīpaṃsa and the Mahāvamsa. The Dīpavamsa informs us that Aśōka's son and daughter, Mahēndra and Saṅghamitrā, received the ordination as Buddhist monk and nun in the sixth year of his reign.¹ The renowned Dharmapālā was, according to the Mahāvamsa, Saṅghamitrā's preceptress (upajjhāyā), and Āyupālā her teacher (āchariyā).² The brother and the sister, Bhikshu Mahēndra and Bhikshuṇī Saṅghamitrā, both of whom belonged to the Theravāda school of Buddhism, were destined to illumine the doctrine of the Buddha even like the sun and the moon.³ In about the 19th or 20th year of Aśōka's reign after his coronation, the wise Saṅghamitrā with ten other capable bhikshuṇīs went from India to Ceylon during the reign of King Devānampiya Tissa and taught the three Piṭakas in Anurādhapura. They succeeded in founding the Bhikshuṇī Order in the island of Laṅkā, Princess Anulā with her following having received the ordination from Saṅghamitrā.⁴ The Dīpavamsa immortalises the names of a few other bhikshuṇīs who had then received the Upasampadā Ordination in Ceylon.⁵ The nunnery (bhikshuṇī-upassaya) in which Saṅghamitrā dwelt with her company of bhikshuṇīs was known as the Upāsikā-vihāra consisting of twelve buildings.⁶ King Devānampiya Tissa caused to be erected a suitable nunnery for Saṅghamitrā and other bhikshuṇīs round about the Thūpārāma, which came to be known by the name of Hattabāhaka-vihāra.⁷

The state of things which prevailed in India regarding the bhikshuṇīs after the reign of Aśōka, both before and during the Śuṅga-Mitra period, may be easily inferred from some of the donative inscriptions on the Sāneli Stūpa, the Bharhut Stūpa, and the Bodhi-Gayā railings. These epigraphic records reveal the following facts concerning the Buddhist nuns, each of importance :—

- (1) That the nuns are mentioned generally as bhikshuṇīs or bhichhuṇīs, while the monks are honoured with such epithets as bhaddanta, bhayaṃta, aya (ārya) and bhaddantaya, a fact which may not be unreasonably taken to indicate the inferior position accorded to the nuns as compared with the monks;⁸
- (2) that there are instances where a senior nun had junior nuns as female pupils under her⁹ or a nun was a female pupil of a monk,¹⁰ but none where a monk was a pupil under a nun;
- (3) that the nuns, precisely as the monks, either received Buddhist names at the time of initiation and ordination¹¹ or were allowed to retain their quondam names, the names given by their parents or guardians;¹²
- (4) that the following localities are the various places or centres with which the nuns are associated : Ujeni (Ujjayini), Kākandī, Kāchupatha (Kañchupatha, Kāñchipatha ?),

In the two surviving inscriptions on the coping of the Bodh-Gayā railing Kuraṅgī is introduced as the elderly wife of King Indrāgnimitra,² while in all the fifteen shorter inscriptions on the up-rights of the same railing she is honoured as Ayā Kuraṅgī (Āryā Kuraṅgī).³ Having regard to the fact that in both Buddhist literature and inscriptions the epithet ayya or ayira (ārya) is applied to the name of a person who has attained Arhatship, it may be presumed that Kuraṅgī passed a retired life as a bhikṣuṇī in her old age and that she was found to be in an advanced state of spirituality.⁴

Coming to such later period of Indian history as the Kushāṇa we shall expect in vain to come across many references to the bhikṣuṇīs in inscriptions. There is definitely one inscription only at Junnār Buddhist cave which records the erection of a nunnery (bhikṣuṇī-upasaya) in the town for the residence of the bhikṣuṇīs of the Dharmōttariya sect.⁵ So far as Mathurā is concerned, we know of one inscription only, assigned to the reign of Huvishka, in which the Bhikṣuṇī Dhanavatī, the sister's daughter of the Bhikṣuṇī Buddhāmitrā, is said to have set up a Bōdhisattva image at Mādhuravanaka (Māthuravana). This bhikṣuṇī is praised as one who knew the Tripiṭaka (Trepīṭikā) and introduced as the female pupil (antēvāsini) of the Bhikṣu Bala who himself was a master of the three Piṭakas (Trepīṭaka).⁶ It needs no mention that the sphere of influence of the Bhikṣu Bala was not confined to Mathurā but extended to Śrāvastī and Sārnāth. At Amarāvati, however, one may obtain as many as eight inscriptions which, too, go to prove that the Buddhist community continued to be constituted of bhikṣus, bhikṣuṇīs, upāsakas and upāsikās. In all of them the bhikṣuṇīs, otherwise called samanikā and pavajitikā, figure as female donors.⁷ In one instance a bhikṣuṇī, called Budhā, is described as the sister of the Thera Chetiyavandaka Bhadanta Budhi,⁸ and in two records the bhikṣuṇīs are introduced as the resident female pupils of two saintly theras, Budharakhitā of the Thera Bhadanta Budharakhitā⁹, and Nandā of the Arahata Ayira Budharakhitā.¹⁰ One inscription speaks of Vasā (Vaśyā) as a pavajitikā (pravrajitā) resident in Kevurura.¹¹

The continuance of the Bhikṣuṇī Order at Mathurā up till the 5th and 6th centuries of the Christian era is clearly attested by the testimony of Fa-Hien and that of a Sanskrit inscription. In speaking of Mo-tu-lo (Mathurā) Fa-Hien observes: "The bhikṣuṇīs principally honour the tower of Ānanda, because it was Ānanda who requested the lord of the world to let women take orders; śrāmaṇeras mostly offer to Rāhula."¹²

A Sanskrit inscription, dated in the (Gupta) year 230 (=A.D. 549-50), records the religious gift of the Śākya-bhikṣuṇī (Buddhist nun) Jayabhaṭṭā at a monastery called Yaśovihāra.¹

So far as our present knowledge goes, this is the latest epigraphic record having either mention of or any reference to the bhikṣuṇīs.

Hsien Tsang who visited India during the reign of Harshavardhana has nothing whatever to say about the bhikṣuṇīs in his Si-yü-ki. But Bāṇa in his Harshacharita puts the following words in the mouth of Rājyaśrī and Harshavardhana, which may be taken to testify to the existence of the Bhikṣuṇī Order, however lingering it might be :

Rājyaśrī : " Let me therefore in my misfortunes be allowed to assume the red robe ".²

Harshavardhana : " At the end, when I have accomplished my design, she and I will assume the red garments (kāśhāyāni) together."³

Even apart from the evidence of Bāṇa's Harshacharita it cannot be doubted that the Bhikṣuṇī Order continued to exist, in some form or another, in India, though not among all Buddhist sects. The continuance of this order is unmistakably proved by the following observation of I-tsing whose visit may be assigned to the last quarter of the 7th century A.D. :

" Nuns in India are very different from those of China. They support themselves by begging food, and live a poor and simple life."⁴

At about this time, or a little later, flourished Bhavabhūti who included the Saugata-Parivrājikā Kāmandakī among the female characters in his famous drama Mālātī-Mādhava, together with her three female pupils, Avalokitā, Buddharakṣitā, and Saudāminī, and Subandhu who, in his Vāsavadattā, spoke of a bhikṣukī as devoted to Tārā and as wearing red garments (bhikṣukīva Tār-ānurāga-rahit-ūmbara-dhārīṇī). Bhavabhūti, be it noted, associates these Buddhist nuns with the Śrīparvatā in South India, and describes them as female ascetics who put on yellow robes (chīra-chīvara-parichehḍā) and lived on piṇḍapāta only.

Tatakara Gupta of unknown but late date is the Buddhist author, who, while speaking of Vajrayāna or Agraṇaya Mahāyāna, observes that this school of Buddhism provided religious training for the bhikṣus, the bhikṣuṇīs, the śrāmaṇēras, the śrāmaṇēris, the upāsakas and the upāsikās.⁵ I do not know of any Indian work, Brahmanical or Buddhist, containing references to the bhikṣuṇīs in the 9th or 10th century A.D. It would seem that by that time the Bhikṣuṇī Order became defunct in India, or that even if it had continued, it was just dragging its existence here and there among certain sects of the Buddhists.⁶ Eventually it ceased to be in India proper even prior to the Muslim conquest.

⁶ This surmise is well borne out by the evidence of the Mahāvamsa and the Chūlavamsa. These two Pāli chronicles (Mahāvamsa, Ch. 18, v. 12; Ch. 19, v. 68; Ch. 20, vv. 21, 22, 40; Ch. 34, v. 36; Ch. 37, v. 43; Chūlavamsa, Ch. 39, v. 43; Ch. 46, v. 27; Ch. 48, vv. 30, 139; Ch. 49, v. 25; Ch. 51, v. 47) mention the pious work of erection of nunneries (bhikkhuni-upasāyā) in Ceylon from the time of Devānampiya Tissa to that of King Bhūmibhanda (7th century A.D.), and nothing of the kind after that.

No. 6.—AMBASAMUDRAM INSCRIPTION OF SOLANRALAIKONDA VIRA-PANDYA.

A. S. RAMANATHA AYYAR, B.A., MADRAS.

The subjoined inscription¹ is engraved on the south wall of the Erichchāvudaiyār shrine in the Śiva temple, situated on the northern bank of the Tāmraparṇī at Ambāsamudram, the headquarters of the taluk of the same name in the Tinnevely District. This god who is called Tirupōt-tudaiya-Bhaṭāra (the god of the bull-vehicle) in early inscriptions, must have been the principal deity of the temple in the olden days, because several endowments of the Pāṇḍya kings Māraṇ-Jaḍaiyaṇ and Śaḍaiya-Māraṇ are found recorded on the walls of this shrine only.² But when the adjacent and more imposing Kāśi-Viśvanātha temple came into existence, apparently in the later Pāṇḍya times, this shrine appears to have shrunk into an insignificant auxiliary structure isolated in the north prākāra of the bigger temple. Further, during some extensive repairs carried out some fifty years ago, some of the engraved stones belonging to the present record have become disarranged, with the result that one piece containing the ends of lines 9 to 16 is now found embedded in the inner wall of the shrine, while another important slab which must have contained the ends of lines 1 to 8 cannot be traced at all.

The inscription is engraved in clean-cut Vaṭṭeḷuttu characters attributable to the 10th century A. D. Grantha letters have been used in the words Svasti Śrī (l. 1), Sūrya-grahaṇa (l. 11), and *Brahma*³ (l. 12). The letters ta and ṛa and consequently tu and ṛu are written alike, without much differentiation. There are no special orthographic peculiarities noticeable in this record, except that some old forms of words occurring in other early Chōḷa and Pāṇḍya records of this period are also found here, such as, i-ññādu (l. 2) for i-nnādu; paḍiṇṇu vēli (l. 3) for paṭṭu-vēli and nāḷi-ūm (l. 15) for nāḷiyum. The Sanskrit words āchārya and śrīkārya are transformed into āchārchchiya (l. 19) and śrīkārchchiya (l. 22); the colloquial form ṣeyṣa for ṣeyḍa is also used (l. 24).

The record is dated in the 15+5th year of the Pāṇḍya king Śōḷaṇ-ṛalai-koṇḍa Vira-Pāṇḍya, when an order issued in the 12th year of his reign was engraved on stone on the wall of the temple by his officer Chōḷāntaka-Brahmamārāya. It is important in that it mentions the occurrence of a solar eclipse in the month of Mithuṇa in the 12th year of the Pāṇḍya king's reign, and enables us to fix that date.

From the inscriptions copied hitherto, it has not been possible to determine the exact years between which Vira-Pāṇḍya reigned. All that we know is that the Chōḷa king Parakēsarivarman Āditya-Karikāla II claims to have cut off the head of a Vira-Pāṇḍya, in the title Vira-Pāṇḍya-ṛalai-koṇḍa assumed by him from the 2nd year of his reign⁴, and that the highest regnal year so far found⁵ for Vira-Pāṇḍya is 15+5 or 20.

The predecessor of Rājārāja I (A.D. 985-1013) on the Chōḷa throne was Parakēsarivarman Uttama-Chōḷa, whose date of accession was A.D. 969-70⁶, and as he had a reign of about 16 years,⁶ he must have ruled from A.D. 969-970 to 985-986. As both Āditya II and Uttama-Chōḷa had the same title of Parakēsarivarman, it had been inferred that they had ruled jointly in the interval between Rājakesari Sundara-Chōla and Rājakesari Rājarāja I. The Uḍaiyārguḍi record¹ dated in the 2nd year of Rājakesarivarman (Rājarāja I) states that the lands belonging to some persons who were implicated in the death of Āditya-Karikāla were confiscated by the king; and it is reasonable to consider, from the trend of political events that attended the succession of Uttama-Chōla, that he had himself countenanced this act of treachery, which led him a step nearer to the Chōla throne. The Tiruvālaṅgāḍu plates while slurring over the actual facts that culminated in Āditya's death make, however, the significant remark that 'Rājarāja did not wish to succeed to the Chōla territory, so long as his uncle Uttama-Chōla coveted it'. These facts suggest that Āditya must have been killed before Uttama-Chōla's actual succession, and so Āditya II must have lived and ruled before A.D. 969-70.

The Leiden plates² of Rājarāja I mention that while yet a boy, he (Āditya) 'played sportively in battle with Vira-Pāṇḍya, just as a lion's cub (does) with a rutting mad elephant, proud of (its) strength' while the Tiruvālaṅgāḍu plates³ are more explicit in stating that 'he killed the Pāṇḍya king (who must have been the same Vira-Pāṇḍya) in battle,' and 'having deposited in his (capital) town the lofty pillar of victory, (viz.), the head of the Pāṇḍya king, Āditya disappeared (from this world) with a desire to see heaven'. From these statements, we can infer that Āditya II had won his military spurs even during the reign of his father and that he did not live for a long time after his own independent victory over his Pāṇḍya adversary. Though the title talai-konḍa assumed by kings, has, in some rare instances, been interpreted⁴ to connote a simple capture of the crown of their opponents, this specific statement in the Tiruvālaṅgāḍu plates warrants the conclusion that Vira-Pāṇḍya literally lost his head, i.e., met his death, in his encounter with Āditya.⁵ The highest regnal year found for Vira-Pāṇḍya in the records so far copied is only 15+5, i.e., 20, and it was probably the last year of his reign. As the earliest year in which the title Vira-Pāṇḍiyan-talai-konḍa is applied to Āditya is 2, we may assume that the 20th year of Vira-Pāṇḍya coincided with the 2nd year of Āditya's reign.

Of Āditya's father Rājakesarivarman Sundara-Chōla, it is stated in the Leiden plates⁶ that he fought a fierce battle with his enemies at Śevvūr (Chēvūra), while the Kanyākumāri record⁷ mentions that the Pāṇḍya opponent of this king fled from the field of battle and hid himself in a forest. The earliest record⁸ of Sundara-Chōla crediting him with this achievement in the title Pāṇḍiyanai-chchuram-irakkina is dated in his 7th year; and as he is considered to have reigned from about A.D. 956 to 973,⁹ this conflict with the Pāṇḍya king, who must have been Vira-Pāṇḍya himself, could have taken place only in about A.D. 964. It seems probable therefore that the Pāṇḍya king was then simply defeated and routed, that he actually lost his life in another subsequent near engagement in which Āditya distinguished himself, and that this signal victory gave Āditya the title of Vira-Pāṇḍiyan-talai-konḍa, in common with the two feudatories Pārthivēndravarman¹⁰ and Bhūti-Vikramakēśari¹⁰, who must have both helped him in this exploit.

As stated already, a solar eclipse occurred in the month of Mithuna in the 12th year of Virapandya. In the period from A.D. 930 to 970, the only three years in which a solar eclipse occurred in Mithuna were :—

- (1) A.D. 950, June 18 (Mithuna 26), Tuesday,
- (2) A.D. 959, June 9 (Mithuna 17), Thursday, and
- (3) A.D. 960, May 28 (Mithuna 5), Monday.

If the week-day on which the eclipse occurred or the nakshatra which was current on that day had been specified in the present record, it would have been possible to verify the exact date referred to ; but in their absence we shall have to select a plausible equivalent, only by a process of elimination.

If we suppose that A.D. 950 was the 12th year of Virapandya's reign, it would give A.D. 957 as his final year, and as this will have corresponded to the 2nd year of Aditya, the Chola king's date of accession would be A.D. 956. This would yield the inconsistent results that Aditya killed him in A.D. 957, and that his predecessor Sundara-Chola defeated him in A.D. 963 ; so this date of accession for Aditya is not possible. Similarly, A.D. 960 which would yield A.D. 967 as the 20th year of Virapandya and the 2nd year of Aditya and A.D. 966 as Aditya's date of accession, may have also to be discarded, because in that case Aditya's reign which extended to the 5th year would overlap into the reign of his successor Uttama-Chola (accession A.D. 969-70), which is not possible, since, as stated already, Aditya II should have passed away before Uttama-Chola could have succeeded him. On the other hand, if we take A.D. 959 as the 12th year of Virapandya, his 20th year and Aditya's 2nd year would have corresponded to A.D. 966, giving A.D. 964-5² as Aditya's initial year. This date would satisfy the presumption that his fight with Virapandya could have happened in about A.D. 966, which would be only a year later than the defeat of the Pandya ruler at Sundara-Chola's hands in about A.D. 964 before the 7th year of the latter's reign, and that a five-year rule for Aditya II could also be accounted for between A.D. 965 and 969. These results may be tabulated thus :—

	Virapandya's 12th year.	Virapandya's 20th year = Aditya's 2nd year.	Aditya's accession.	Virapandya's accession.
3	960	967	966	948

Of these three dates, No. 2 may therefore be considered as the best suited for the record under review, and it would yield A. D. 947 to 966 as the period of reign of Virapandya. His position in the Pandyan genealogy may be taken to be between Rajasimha³, who was defeated by Parantaka I before A.D. 922, and Amarabhuja⁴, whom Rajaraja claims to have conquered.

The Pandya king himself claims to have taken the head of a Chola, as evidenced by the title Solanralaikonda assumed by him from the 6th year onwards (i.e., from A.D. 953-54).⁵ Who ¹ As there is only one record of the 15+5th year, it has been inferred that he died in the beginning of that regnal year.

² Three records of Aditya II from Udaiyargudi in the South Arcot District furnish astronomical details which would approximately take the date of his accession to the end of A.D. 963. This point requires further examination in the light of future discoveries.

⁵ No. 163 of the Madras Epigraphical collection for 1894.

this Chōla king was, who was killed by Vira-Pāṇḍya the Chōlāntaka, has not been specified by name in any of his records. Sundara-Chōla was called 'Ponmāligait-tuṇṇiṇa-dēva' (the king who died at the golden palace or at Chidambaram known as the Kanakasabhā ?)¹, but he could not have been the victim, because records going up to the 17th year (=A.D. 973) are found for him. Ariṇḍajaya, the predecessor of Sundara-Chōla, was called 'Āṇṇūr-tuṇṇiṇa-dēva' (he who died at Āṇṇūr); but the circumstances that led to his death at that place are not known. As a paḷippaḍai was erected for him at Mēlpāḍi² in the Chittoor District, it may be inferred that he fell fighting in one of the skirmishes with the army of the Rāshtrakūṭa king Kṛishṇa III in that locality. There is reason to believe that he lived a few years later than A.D. 953. Gaṇḍarāditya was called 'Mērk-ṇḍarūḷiṇa-dēva' (he who proceeded west)³, but he could not have been Vira-Pāṇḍya's adversary, because, having probably succeeded as yuvarāja-coregent soon after the death of prince Rājāditya in A.D. 949-50 and with records of the 8th year definitely assignable⁴ to him, he would have lived up to A.D. 957-8 at least. In addition to all these, there was another Chōla prince of this time called Uttamaśīli, who is mentioned in two records⁵ dated in the 24th and 26th years of his father Parāntaka's reign; but we know next to nothing about him and his career, except that a village⁶ and a ebannel in the Trichinopoly District were named after him.

According to the calculation arrived at above, Vira-Pāṇḍya must have assumed the title of Sōḷaṇ-ṇalai-koṇḍa from about A.D. 953-54; and this date coincides with the 46th or 47th year of the reign of Parāntaka I. Parāntaka's records of the 46th year are only two in number and none of his 47th year has been discovered yet. It is therefore tempting to conclude that it was the last year of the Chōla king's reign and that it was Parāntaka himself who had lost his life at the hands of Vira-Pāṇḍya,⁷ thus giving the latter an opportunity to avenge the defeat and possibly the death of his father (?)⁸ Rājasimha at the Chōla king's hands, some years earlier. It was left to Āditya II to follow up the family vendetta by killing Vira-Pāṇḍya in his turn in about A.D. 966. These conclusions appear to be warranted by the sequence of events that happened in the eventful half-a-century preceding the accession of Rājārāja I in A.D. 985. There is, however, one solitary Kannada record⁹ at Vanamaladinne in the Punganur taluk of the Chittoor District, situated in the northern-most border of the Chōla dominion of the time, which quotes the 48th year of Parāntaka's reign; and this has perhaps to be explained by supposing that the recent news of the death of the Chōla king had not percolated so far north, at the time that record was incised. This need not surprise us, as such instances are not unknown in the history of this period.

As regards the subject-matter of the record, it is stated that in the 15+5th year of Sōḷaṇ-ṇalai-koṇḍa Vira-Pāṇḍya, Chōlāntaka-Brahmamārāyar, the officer of the king (adikāram-ṣeykiṇṇa) receiving the royal order relating to a gift of 10 ṛēli of land as kuḍiṇṇū-gā-dēvadāṇam

¹ That tribute 'he who died in the Ponmāligai' has no point, unless it be that some important fact connected with Sundara-Chōla's death was sought to be expressed by it. Could Uttama-Chōla have had any hand in his removal as certainly he must have had in Āditya II's death?

⁷ Vira-Pāṇḍya must have encountered the Chōla king in some southern campaign only. It may also have to be noted that Vira-Pāṇḍya's records are not found very much to the north of Madura.

made by the king earlier in his 12th regnal year to the temple of Tiruppōttudaiya-Bhaṭāra, had it engraved on stone in that temple. This officer figures in an inscription¹ of the king dated in the 15+4th year at Suchindram in the Travancore State, where his name has been incorrectly read as Chērāntaka-Brahmārāyar. Chōlāntaka (Death to the Chōla) was evidently the title assumed by Vira-Pāṇḍya to commemorate the act of his having cut off the head of the Chōla king (Śōlap-ṛalai-koṇḍa), and this may have been adopted by the officer Chōlāntaka-Brahmārāyar, either because he had also taken part in the encounter himself or simply after the title of his master. A liquid-measure called 'Chōlāntakan-nāli' was also current in this period in the Pāṇḍya country. Vira-Pāṇḍya is said to have had also the title of Pāṇḍimārttūṇḍa,² 'the Sun of the Pāṇḍya family'; but this title was in vogue even earlier in the time of Śaḍaiya-Māraṇ³ (Rājasimha).

The names of the several revenue officials who were cognisant of the endowment made to the temple of Tiruppōttudaiya-Bhaṭāra are enumerated:

1. The officer who was supervising the king's secretariat duties in the 12th year (en-karṇam=ārāchchi mēl=ēḷuttu śeykṇṇa)⁴ was Tamiḷavēḷān⁵ belonging to Kāḍandai community (?);
2. the ēvi-mudal was Araiyan Mānābharāṇa;
3. the ōlai-ēḷuttu was an officer, whose name is lost;
4. the vāykēḷvi was [Chū]lāmaṇi-kiḷavan of Mēyūr alias Kuvalaiyaśiṅganallūr in Aṇḍa-nāḍu; and

5. the baṇḍāra-ppottagam was Vikramapāṇḍya-Mūvēndavēḷān alias Kaṭṭinakkan Iraṇaṇ of Vēḷiyārūr in Kīl-Kuṇḍāru in Koḷuvūr-kūṛraṇ.

6. The original document was attested and engraved by Pullaṇ-Korṇaṇ;

7. the engraving of the record in the 15+5th year of the king was done under the supervision of Dēvan-Kirinaṇ, the śrīkāryam of the temple.

From the surnames of two of these officers (Nos. 2 and 5), we can infer that there were Pāṇḍya princes having the names of Mānābharāṇa⁶ and Vikrama-Pāṇḍya even before Vira-Pāṇḍya's time. Another record⁷ of this king testifies to the existence before this period of another prince Sundara-Pāṇḍya, in whose name a shrine called Sundarapāṇḍyēśvaram was erected at Paḷḷimaḍam in the Ramnad District.

The details of the scale of offerings, etc., that had to be provided for from the endowment registered in this document are given at some length:

For one day—

to god Tiruppōttudaiya-Dēvar	32 nāḷi of rice (for four offerings), for anna-bali	6 nāḷi,
for kaṛi-amūdu	1 nāḷi,
to god Tiruvēnkatanilai-Dēvar	4 nāḷi, to god Tirumūlattānattu-Dēvar	4 nāḷi, and

² An. Rep. on South Indian Epigraphy for 1932-3, para. 30; and No. 122 of 1905.

³ The functions of the several officials are not clearly definable.

⁴ An officer of the name of Tennavan Tamiḷavēḷ figures in records of this king from Kilmāttūr, Madura District (Nos. 624 and 626 of 1926), and he was probably identical with this officer.

⁵ No. 26 of 1895 from Tillaisthānam (Tanjore District) mentions a Mānābharāṇa in the 8th year of a Parakēsarivarman. It may be noted that there were also later members of the Pāṇḍya family with the same set of names of Mānābharāṇa, Vikrama-Pāṇḍya and Sundara-Pāṇḍya, who were contemporaries of Rājādhirāja I in A.D. 1046.

No. 7.—KANTERU PLATES OF SALANKAYANA VIJAYA-ŚKANDAVARMAN.

By R. S. PANCHAMUKHI, M.A., MADRAS.

In 1924-25, the Assistant Archaeological Superintendent for Epigraphy, Madras, secured three sets of copper-plates belonging to the family of Śālāṅkāyana-Mahārājas, of which two were received from Mr. Challa Jagannatha Pantulu, Assistant Editor, Andhra-Patrikā, Madras and the third from Mr. M. Somasekhara Sarma of the Telugu Encyclopedia office.¹ The first two are stated to have been found buried underground in the village called Kantēru in the Guntur taluk, Guntur District, while the third was discovered underground at Pedda-Vēgi near Ellore in the Kistna (now West Godavari) District. Of the two records discovered at Kantēru, one is a charter of Mahārāja Vijaya-Skandavarman and the other of Mahārāja Nandivarman. The Pedda-Vēgi copper-plates belong to the Śālāṅkāyana-Mahārāja Nandivarman and give the genealogy of the king for three generations before him. This last-mentioned charter has been published with plates in the *Journal of the Andhra Historical Research Society*² as well as in the Telugu monthly Bhārati for Raktākshin, Śrāvaṇa (1924) in which the genealogy of the Śālāṅkāyanas is discussed at some length. The two Kantēru plates have been published by the late Mr. K. V. Lakshmana Rao in the *Journal of the Andhra Historical Research Society*³ but without facsimiles of plates and seal. None of the seals of this family known so far contains a clear relief figure of the emblem, and the quadruped faintly seen on the seal of the Ellore Prākṛit Plates of Vijaya-Dēvarman has been surmised to be a tiger. But the seal of the present grant is fairly well-preserved and shows distinctly the figure of the animal on it as a couchant bull. As the genealogical arrangement and to a certain extent also the text of the inscription given by Mr. Rao require revision, I re-edit the Kantēru plates of Vijaya-Skandavarman with the kind permission of the Superintendent for Epigraphy.

While editing the two sets of Kantēru plates in the Journal of the Andhra Historical Research Society Mr. Lakshmana Rao who was the first to examine the plates, with seal, assigned the seal of the present grant to the set of king Vijaya-Nandivarman instead of to that of Vijaya-Skandavarman as noticed in the Annual Report on South Indian Epigraphy for 1924-25. This raised a doubt about the correctness of the description given in the Annual Report and to clear it and make a comparative study of the known seals of the family, I obtained on loan, through the kind offices of the Superintendent for Epigraphy, the original plates with seal of the two Kantēru sets as well as the Ellore Prākṛit Plates of Vijaya-Dēvavarman from the Superintendent, Government Museum, Madras. On examination I found that the seal attached to the plates of Vijaya-Skandavarman bore the distinct figure of a couchant bull with a partially indistinct legend which, as stated below, indisputably mentions Mahārāja Skanda[varman]. Hence the description given by Mr. Lakshmana Rao has to be revised since the legend conclusively proves that the seal belonged to Vijaya-Skandavarman and not to Vijaya-Nandivarman.¹ It may be observed here that the seal of Nandivarman of the Kantēru plates though badly worn out can be made out to represent a couchant bull with a seated figure at the top which looks like Śiva wearing a crown and with four (?) arms, while the figure on the seal of the Ellore Prākṛit plates looks like a tiger or lion. The wavy line representing the clouds which is prominently visible in the present grant is partially seen below the bull in the seal of the Kantēru plates of Nandivarman described above.

The subjoined grant consists of four thin copper-plates strung together on a ring of the same metal passing through a narrow hole at the proper right margin of the plates. To the ring is firmly attached a circular copper seal with the figure of a couchant bull facing the proper right cut in relief on its slightly concave face. At the top of the bull is seen what looks like a liṅga sheltered by a triple-hooded serpent, with an aṅkuṣa-like object to the proper left and a lamp-stand and a fly-whisk (?) to the proper right. Below the bull is a wavy line which may be taken to represent a cloud line as is conventionally done in sculptures and paintings. In the right portion of the seal along the fringe are some worn-out letters in relief of which the syllables Mahārāja [S]kanda can be made out.² The plates are damaged on account of age and the first line at the top of the second plate has broken away. Also some small holes are found on the plates owing to the corrosion of the metal. The plates measure $5\frac{1}{2}$ inches long and $1\frac{3}{4}$ inches broad. The hole through which the ring passes has a diameter of $\frac{3}{4}$ inch and the diameter of the ring holding the plates is 2 inches. The diameter of the seal is also 2 inches. The plates with ring and seal together weigh $36\frac{1}{2}$ tolas. They are now purchased and deposited in the Government Museum, Madras.

The alphabet belongs to an archaic variety of the Kanarese and Telugu script prevalent in the east between 3rd and 6th centuries A.D. In general appearance, it resembles the one found in the Ellore Prākṛit plates³ and the Ōṅgōḍu grant⁴ of Skandavarman II and is more archaic than the writing of the three grants⁵ of Simhavarman. The following are a few noteworthy points in the palæography of the record : (1) there is no loop to distinguish l from n which is generally found in the three grants of Simhavarman, the Pedda-Vēgi plates of Nandivarman II and the Vishnukunḍin charters. As in the Hirahadagalli⁶ and Ellore Prākṛit plates the l is distinguished from n by a slight curve at the right ; cf. pādānudyātasya (l. 2), °nupālītā (l. 15), tāny=ēva (ll. 18 f.), etc. The Kantēru plates of Nandivarman, however, mark the loop both for l and n without distinction. As first members of a consonant group, both l and n of the present grant look the same as in the Hirahadagalli and Ellore plates, see for instance, dattū (l. 15) and °mantā (l. 18). (2) The exceptionally looped archaic y from which the one with a small circle or curve at the left is apparently derived is found here alongside the unlooped linear y as in the plate of Vijaya-Dēvavarman; cf. Śālaṅkāyana (l. 3), Śivāryyāya (l. 8), maryyādayā (l. 10), vishaya (l. 12) and sagōirāya (l. 7), vāstavyāya (l. 8), niyukt-āyuktaka (l. 11). The plates are numbered like the pages¹ of a modern book with the numerical symbols for 2 to 6 on the left margin, the first side of the first plate being marked with the symbol for ūm as in the Ellore plates of Vijaya-Dēvavarman. The numerals 1, 2 and 3 appear also in the three grants of Simhavarman where they indicate a definitely later development in their shape. In the present set, each engraved side contains three lines of writing except that the first and the last plates are engraved on one side only, the latter having four lines.

The record is written in Sanskrit prose with two of the usual imprecatory verses at the end. The language is simple and business-like and the formula or the draft of the preamble, e.g., the passage Mahārāja-śrī-Vijaya-Skandavarmanāḥ vacanēna Kudrāhāra-Chintapurē grāmēyakāḥ vaktavyāḥ (ll. 3-5), resembles closely that employed in the Ellore Prākṛit plates of Dēvavarman² and the Maṭṭēpād plates of Dāmōdaravarman³ belonging to the period of transitional Prākṛit, as well as the one found in the Ōṃgōḍu grant of Vijaya-Skandavarman II⁴ and the Uruvupalli grant of Yuva-Mahārāja Vishṇugōpavarman,⁵ which are assigned to the time of the earliest Sanskrit charters of the Pallavas. The inscription is dated on the full-moon day of Vaiśākha in the first year (in words, ll. 13 f.) of the Mahārāja Vijaya-Skandavarman (ll. 3 f.) who issued this grant from Vōṅgī (l. 1) and addressed it to the villagers of Chintapura in the district of Kudrāhāra (ll. 4-5).⁶ The donee was one Śivāryya of the Maudgalya-gōtra, a resident of the village Lēkumārī (ll. 7-8), who received the village (i.e., Chintapura) exempt from all imposts (ll. 8-9). The king is described as the Śālaṅkāyana, the meditator on the feet of the holy Chitrarathasvāmin and one devoted to the feet of Bappa-bhaṭṭāraka. He does not bear the epithet either Parama-Māhēśvara borne by Dēvavarman or Parama-Bhāgavata assumed by Nandivarman of the Kantēru⁷, Kollēru⁸ and Pedda-Vēgi plates.

Of the five copper-plate records of the Śālaṅkāyana family known so far, the Pedda-Vēgi plates of Nandivarman alone give the genealogy for four generations as follows:—Hastivarman-Mahārāja, his son Nandivarman-Mahārāja, his son Chaṇḍavarman-Mahārāja and his eldest son Mahārāja Nandivarman II, Parama-Bhāgavata. Since the ājñapti in these as well as in the Kollēru plates is the same person Mūlakura-bhōjaka, the two Nandivarmans might be identical with each other. Now, Nandivarman of the Kantēru plates (Set II) may, from the likeness of names, be identified with either Nandivarman I or Nandivarman II of the above genealogy, preferably with the former, since the script employed in his charter is more angular and antique than the one found in the Pedda-Vēgi and Kollēru plates, which is rounded and more developed. Vaiṅgyaka Hastivarman mentioned in the Allahābād pillar inscription as the contemporary of Samudragupta (middle of the 4th century A.D.) might be Hastivarman, the great-grandfather of Nandivarman II mentioned above. He must have been preceded by Vijaya-Dēvavarman whose grant is worded in Prākṛit since the inscription of Samudragupta whose contemporary Hastivarman was, is couched in chaste classical Sanskrit. From the similarity of script and phraseology adopted in the present grant with those found in the Prākṛit plates of Vijaya-Dēvavarman and the Ōṃgōḍu grant of Vijaya-Skandavarman II as well as the Uruvupalli grant of Siṃhavarman II, it may safely be said that Vijaya-Skandavarman of the present record flourished close after Vijaya-Dēvavarman and some time during the period of the above-mentioned Pallava Sanskrit charters, and was evidently a predecessor or an elder contemporary of Hastivarman.¹ The arrangement of the Śālaṅkāyana genealogy given in the Annual Report on South Indian Epigraphy for 1924-25 which follows the one worked out by the late Mr. K. V. Lakshmana Rao is not tenable since Vijaya-Nandivarman (correctly Vijaya-Skandavarman) and Yuva-mahārāja Buddhavarman of the so-called Elliot's unpublished grant² accommodated in it, do not belong to the Śālaṅkāyana family.

The territory of the Śālaṅkāyanas consisted of Kudrāhāra-vishaya and Vēṅgī which lay to the north of the Kṛishṇā river. We know from the Mayidavōlu plates that Dhañṇakaḍa was included in the kingdom of Pallava Śivaskandavarman. The two Ōṃgōḍu grants of Skandavarman II and Siṃhavarman respectively and the Chendalūr plates of Kumāra-Vishṇu mention Kammarāshṭra in which some lands were granted, while according to the Māṅgaḍūr grant of Siṃhavarman, the Pallava territory contained a division called Vēṅgōrāshṭra. It is quite likely that during the time of Śivaskandavarman of the Mayidavōlu plates also, the Andhrā-patha comprised the two divisions Vēṅgōrāshṭra and Kammarāshṭra. If Vēṅgōrāshṭra is identical with the Vēṅgī-vishaya of later inscriptions, the Pallava territory would, then, include the modern districts of Kistna, Guntur and Nellore, while the country to the north of the Kṛishṇā was for some time at least ruled by the Śālaṅkāyanas. The fact that Vijaya-Dēvavarman calls himself the performer of a horse-sacrifice points to his having raised himself to the status of an independent monarch after overcoming all his enemies among whom the Pallava must have been included. The rebellion of the Śālaṅkāyana king against the Pallava overlord appears to have synchronised with the rise of Kadamba Mayūrasarman in the vicinity of Śrīśailam and his carving out a semi-independent kingdom at Vaijayantī in the beginning of the 4th century A.D.

Among the places mentioned in the record, Vēṅgī is generally identified with Pedda-Vēṅgī near Ellore; Kudrāhāra which is probably the same as Kudūrahāra of the Koṇḍamuḍi plates

¹ [As the paleography of the present plates of Skandavarman closely resembles that of the Pedda-Vēṅgi plates of Nandivarman II, Mr. Panchamukhi's arguments, mainly based on paleography, for placing Skandavarman long before Nandivarman cannot be accepted as certain. Until more reliable evidence can be found, it will not be possible to determine the position of Skandavarman in the genealogy of the Śālaṅkāyana family. (See also Mr. D. C. Sircar's 'Successors of the Śātavāhanas', pp. 59-60, in the Journal of the Department of Letters of the University of Calcutta, Vol. XXVI.)—Ed.]

² While editing the Kollēra plates (Ind. Ant., Vol. V, p. 175), Fleet considered it as a Śālaṅkāyana grant. But subsequently he edited it in Ind. Ant., Vol. IX, p. 100, where he corrected his first mistake by stating that Vijaya-Buddhavarman was a Pallava king and had, therefore, 'no genealogical connection with Vijaya-Nandivarman of the Vēṅgī grant (Ibid., Vol. V, p. 175) who was of the Śālaṅkāyana gōtra'. The grant has since been published in this Journal (above, Vol. VIII, p. 143) by Dr. Hultzsch under the caption "the British Museum Plates of Chārudēvi". Dr. Dubriol and the late Mr. K. V. Lakshmana Rao have, without noticing the subsequent corrections, followed Fleet's original suggestion (Ancient History of the Deccan, p. 89; J. A. H. R. S., Vol. V, p. 27) and this mistake has crept into the writings of Mr. M. S. Sarma (Bhārati for Raktākshin, Śrāvapa), Mr. R. Gopalsn (Pallavas of Kāñchi, p. 74) and Mr. K. R. Subrahmaniam (Buddhist Remains of Andhradēśa and Andhra History, p. 89, f. n. 4 and p. 91). Mr. Sarma's placing Hastivarman before Vijaya-Dēvavarman, it may be observed, cannot be accepted since the latter, as stated above, lived during the period when Prākṛit was the documentary language before Sanskrit began to be used in inscriptions.

of Jayavarman¹ was the name of the district with its headquarters at Kudūra mentioned in the same plates and in the Amarāvati Buddhist sculpture inscription.² The district was apparently named after Kudūra the modern Kūdūru in the Bandar taluk of the Kistna District; Chintapura may be identified with Chinnāpuram in the Bandar taluk and Lōkumārī with Lōkamūḍi in the Kaikalūr taluk of the same district.³

TRANSLATION.

(Lines 1-5) Hail! From the victorious (city of) Vāṅgī by the word (of command) of the illustrious Mahārāja Vijaya-Skandavarman, a Śālaṅkāyana, a meditator on the feet of god Chitrarathasvāmin and one devoted to the feet of Bappa-Bhaṭṭāraka (i.e., father), the villagers of Chintapura in Kudrāhāra should be informed thus :

(Ll. 5-9) That small village (paṭlikā, i.e., Chintapura) has been granted by Us to this¹ (Brāhman) Sivāryya of the Maudgalya-gōtra, a resident of the village Lēkumārī, free from all imposts, for the increase of the prosperity and fame of our family (kula) and clan (gōtra).

(Ll. 9-12) Knowing this, you should behave well (with the donee) with affection as hitherto (pūrvva-maryyādayā). Further, that village should be exempted (from imposts) by all the presiding officers appointed to carry out (Our) command, agents (āyuktaka) and heads of districts.

(Ll. 13-14) The (copper-plate) charter² was issued on the full-moon day of Vaiśākha in the first year of Our ever-increasing, illustrious and victorious reign.

No. 8.—EPIGRAPHICAL NOTES.

By RAO BAHADUR C. R. KRISHNACHARI, B.A., MADRAS.

NIBINNĀ AND NIVINĀ.

In the Nibinnā charter of Mahā-Sivagupta edited by Mr. B. C. Mazumdar,³ the name of the gift village is given in two different forms, i.e. (i) Nibinnā in l. 5 and (ii) Nibinnā in l. 17 of the text.⁴ It is thus evident that even at the time of the charter the name of the village was spelt in two different ways. Though there is no special necessity for it, Mr. Mazumdar reads bi where the original contained only vi, both v and b being indicated in this record only by the sign for v. Consequently the place might also be called Nivinnā or Nivinnā. It was attached to the Ganūtapāṭa-maṇḍala of the Kōśala-dēśa (text, ll. 4 f.). We are now confronted with a possibility of this village being identical with the village Nivinā the gift of which is recorded in the Nivinā grant of the Śailōdbhava king Dharmarājadēva published by Dr. N. P.

Chakravarti.¹ In the latter record Nivinā is stated to be attached to the Khidiṅgahāra-vishaya. But it is likely that this village which was originally attached to this vishaya in Dharmarāja's reign was later on included in the Kōśala-dēśa. Khidiṅgahāra has been identified by Dr. Chakravarti with Khidiṅgi and Nivinā with Nimmina² in the Kudala taluk of the Ganjām District. I think that Ganuṭapāṭa-maṇḍala or Ganuḍapāṭi-maṇḍala in which Nibiṇḍā or Nibinnā of the other charter was situated is identical with Gaṇṭhapadā, a Zamindari village of the same taluk. Moreover, since the Sonepur Feudatory State attached to the district of Sambalpur is a part of the Chhatisgarh division which roughly corresponds to the ancient (Southern) Kōśala-dēśa in which Nibiṇḍā or Niviṇḍā (with its variant names) lay and the Ganjām District in which the Nivinā grant of Dharmarāja was found is adjacent to that tract, the possibility of the identity of both the villages is strengthened. This is also confirmed by the form of the name Nivinā in which it occurs in the latter grant.

If the suggested identity could be granted it follows that the gift village Nivinā changed ownership in the interval between the reigns of Dharmarāja and Mahā-Sivagupta and that the latter monarch granted it afresh to a Brāhman of a different family from the original donee's.

Dr. Babadur Chand Chhabra suggests the identification of the village Nibinnā with Nimna about 15 miles south-east of Binka, a town in the Sonepur State. This is not altogether impossible though we can take it only as an alternative. In this case the headquarters of the Ganuṭapāṭa-maṇḍala in which the village was located must be identified with the modern Gaṇṭapara on the right bank of the river Tel one of the tributaries of the Mahānadi in the Baud State. (Vide Imp. Gaz. Atlas, 1909, Plate 29, A 4.)

URUVUPALLI.

In the Uruvupalli grant of Pallava Yuvamahārāja Vishnugōpa issued in the reign of Simharman (Ind. Ant., Vol. V, pp. 50 f.) the boundaries of the 200 nivartanas of land actually given are enumerated in detail very much in the style of the Redḍi copper-plates of a later period. Among these boundaries occur the names of the villages Kaṇḍukūra, Kurupūra, and Koṇḍamuruvuḍu and the river Suprayōgā. The grant was intended for the benefit of the Vishnu-hāra temple founded by the Senāpati Vishnuvarman at Kaṇḍukūra. So it is evident that we have to look for the villages mentioned in the grant in the vicinity of modern Kandukūru in the Nellore District. A reference to the taluk map shows that Uruvupalli must be identical with Ulavapāḍu which lies east-south-east of Kandukūru. Of the other villages, Kurupūra would correspond to modern Kared alias Kurvaḍe in the eastern direction of Kandukūru, and Koṇḍamuruvuḍu would be the modern Koṇḍamuḍusupāḷem due south of Kandukūru. Since the lands are stated to lie adjacent to those of Kaṇḍukūra, the river Suprayōgā which lay to the south of the gift-lands would be identical with the modern Mannēru flowing in a north-easterly direction between Kandukūru and Ulavapāḍu. Ulavapāḍu is a station on the Madras-Calcutta line of the M. & S. M. Railway.

VIRIPARA.

This village in Andhrāpāṭha (i.e. the Telugu country) the grant of which is recorded in the Prākṛit Mayidavōlu plates of Śivaskandavarman could not be identified by Dr. Hultzsch. He, however, rightly suggests that it must have been situated near Amarāvati, (formerly Kistna now)

² The List of Villages gives the name as Nimina. There are two villages of this name one in the Khallikotā and the other in the Athagada Zamindari of the Ganjām District. The district Map shows also a third Nimina village on the bank of the Mahānadi canal in the Aska taluk.

Guntur District.¹ The plates were found in a pāḍu (old village site) near Mayidavōlu, a village in the Narasaraopet taluk.² There can be the least doubt that the gift village Viripara is identical with the modern Vipparla in the same taluk situated at about 8 miles west-north-west of Narasaraopet.³ It is to be noticed that the village possesses not only some pre-historic remains like dolmens,³ etc., which prove its great antiquity but also that an inscription of the early Eastern Chalukya king Sakalalōkāsraya Jayasiṅgha-Vallabha and another of Viṣṇuvardhana Vijayāditya dated in Ś. 996 (=A.D. 1074) have been found here.⁴ In the former the village is called Vitpaṛti and in the latter Virppaṛu. In still later times it was called Vipparu.⁵ These facts go to prove definitely that the village mentioned in the copper-plates must be identical with Vipparla.

Dattānuyōga and the village Kōḷāla.

In his article on 'Two Kadamba Grants' (above, Vol. VI, p. 15, n. 6) the expression Dattānuyōga is rendered by Prof. Kielhorn in the sense of an āchārya (anuyōga-kṛit). From the context we must expect the term to refer to a concrete or proper attribute of the donee Dēvaśarman and not to a general attribute, viz., an āchārya, especially as the expression occurs between his gōtra and his śākhā. We should therefore naturally expect in the middle of these two epithets a reference to the donee's school of philosophy. We know that Datta is the name of an Upanishad, and the donee must have been a student or professor of that Upanishad.⁶ Dattakasūtras are mentioned in Western Gaṅga copper-plates.

The land gifted was in the village of Kōḷāla as read by Kielhorn. It might be read as Kōḷāla also in which case there can be no objection to our identifying it with Kōḷāla, the Kōḷālapura or Kuvaḷālapura of the Gaṅga inscriptions and identified with the modern Kolar.

Śemponmāri.

In his article on the Śendalai pillar inscriptions (above, Vol. XIII, pp. 134 ff.) Mr. K. V. S. Aiyer notices the mention of Śemponmāri as one of the places where king Perumbiḍugu Muttaraiyaṅ gained his victories. Regarding the identification of the village Mr. Aiyer suggested that it was probably situated in the Pudukkōṭṭai State. I would identify it with the village Śembonmāri of the Tiruvadanai taluk of the Ramnad District. The present village is divided into two units one called Kiḷ-Śembonmāri and the other Mēl-Śembonmāri.

Tāmbbrāpa-sṭhāna.

This is the place from which the Pallava king Vijaya-Skandavarman issued the Ōṁgōḍu grant (above, Vol. XV, pp. 250, 251, etc.). This can very well be Dāmaramaḍugu in the Kovur taluk, Nellore District. Maḍugu represents a pond and Tāmbbrāpa might be the modern corrupt Dāmaramaḍugu. This lies in the ancient Pallava country and is not very far from Vavvēru where the Viḷavattī grant of Simhavarman⁷ of this family was recently discovered.

⁶ [This argument is not convincing to me. The full name of the Upanishad is Dattātrēya. Moreover, Datta or Dattātrēya being a minor Upanishad it is doubtful if proficiency in it should be regarded as a high distinction. I also do not know of any other inscriptions where a donee is mentioned as a student or a professor of a particular Upanishad alone. After gōtra usually comes the pravara of the donee which is not specified in the present record. Can the expression under consideration not simply mean 'who is given to meditation' (anuyōga)? It may also be pointed out that the Dattaka-sūtra occurring in the Western Gaṅga copper-plates has been taken to be a work on erotics—see J. R. A. S., 1911, pp. 183 ff.—Ed.]

No. 9.—NALANDA PLATE OF SAMUDRAGUPTA: THE YEAR 5.

By A. GHOSH, PATNA.

This copper-plate, edited here for the first time, was unearthed at Nālandā in 1927-28 in Monastery Site No. 1, near the copper-plate of Dēvapāla.¹ In 1935 it was transferred to the Archaeological Section, Indian Museum, Calcutta, where it is at present housed. A preliminary note on it was published by Dr. Hirananda Sastri² and it is also summarized by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar in his List of Inscriptions of Northern India.³

The copper-plate measures $10\frac{1}{2}'' \times 9''$ and weighs 45 tolās. No seal was found along with the plate, but it is not unlikely that one was originally attached to it in that portion of the proper right side of the plate which is now broken. The inscription is neatly engraved and runs to 12 lines, but owing to the much damaged condition of the plate large portions, including nearly the whole of l. 7, have either broken away or are utterly obliterated. The whole of the text, however, can be restored by a reference to the spurious Gayā plate of Samudragupta⁴ except the place-names and the adjectives of the donee.

The palæography of the inscription shows Gupta forms throughout and has the same features as the early Gupta records, with the exception of y, which is bipartite in the present record. S is of the looped or so-called eastern variety, but ś is unlooped. H is of the same type as appears on the Allahābād pillar inscription of Samudragupta,⁵ and presents a contrast to the form that we come across in the central and western records of the age.⁶ The average length of letters is $\frac{1}{2}$ inch. As regards orthography, mention may be made of the use of the upadhāniya in such cases as *utpannaḥ=parama*⁷ (l. 4) and ch=ṭaḥ=prabhṛiti (l. 8), the doubling of consonants in sarva (l. 1, etc.), medh-āharttur=mmahārāja (l. 3), dauhitṛasya (l. 4), traividya (ll. 8 and 9), etc. Another feature, remarkable for the Gupta period, is the indiscriminate use of b and v, as exemplified in viditām bō for viditām vō (l. 6), sambat for samvat (l. 10) and mahā-valādhikṛita for mahābalādhikṛita (l. 11).

The inscription records the grant of two villages to a Brāhmaṇa Jayabhaṭṭi by name, who is called traividya in the subsequent lines, by the mahārājādhirāja Samudragupta, whose usual adjectives are given,⁷ from the victorious camp at Ānandapura in the year 5. The grant was written at the orders of Gōpasvāmin, the akshapaṭalādhikṛita, mahāpīlūpati and mahābalādhikṛita. At the end the name of the prince Chandragupta occurs, possibly as the Dūtaka.

I am not sure of one of the names of the villages that were granted: the first is Bhadrāpushkaraka in the Vaiva(?)—y.-vishaya, while the second is Pū[rṇa(?)—nā(?)ga] in the Krimilā-vishaya. Krimilā as the name of a vishaya also appears in the Monghyr grant of Dēvapāla, where it is stated to have been situated in the bhukti of Śrīnagara or Patna.⁸ The same place-name occurs as Krimilā on a Nālandā sealing (Site No. 1, Reg. No. 824), reading Krimilā.

*vishaya-Kāchāla*¹-grāmē mahattama-Narasvāmīnaḥ in 8th century characters. I cannot propose any identification of this place.

The only other copper-plate purporting to belong to Samudragupta² is the Gayā copper-plate, but as Fleet pointed out the plate cannot be regarded as genuine³ on the following grounds: (1) in the genealogical portion of the inscription the adjectives of the king are in the genitive, while the name of the king is in the nominative—which shows that the drafter of the inscription was copying this portion from some grant of one of the successors of Samudragupta, and (2) while some of the letters are antique others are more modern. This shows that there was a deliberate attempt on the part of the scribe to imitate the old script, which also explains the halting nature of the writing; when the difference between the earlier and later forms of a particular letter is only slight, the scribe has betrayed himself, cf. ś, in which the right vertical member invariably projects above the upper horizontal member of the letter—a feature which is definitely later than the early Gupta times.

If the present document can be proved to be genuine, it would rank as the earliest record of the Guptas and also the earliest copper-plate grant in Northern India. This fact makes the task of determining the genuineness or otherwise of the grant all the more difficult, as we have no means to ascertain whether it conforms to the genuine records of the age. The two scholars who have previously noticed the record have opined differently, Dr. Sastri rejecting it as spurious and Dr. Bhandarkar leaving the matter open. The question has, therefore, to be considered afresh.

A perusal of the text given below will show that the present record is similar to the Gayā plate in that it has the same ungrammatical construction of the genealogical portion (...uchchhētuh...apratirathasya...prapautrasya...putrasya ...dauhitrasya ...utpannaḥ Samudraguptaḥ). If the plate be regarded as genuine, it is puzzling why the secretariate of Samudragupta should have committed such a silly error in giving the genealogy of its master. I find it difficult to explain away this error as accidental and am, on the whole, inclined to think that the genuineness of the present plate is not above suspicion. This will also explain why the inscription is full of mistakes, e. g., the dropping of pta in Gupta (l. 3), śshau for śtau (l. 6), śrōttavyam for śrōtavyam (l. 8), grāpratyaḥ for grāma-pratyayā (l. 8) and the lengthening of the vowel in ma in niyatam=āgrahār-ākshēpaḥ (l. 9). One can legitimately expect greater care in a real state document of the mighty Samudragupta. It cannot be denied, however, that the document was forged in early Gupta times, as there is no trace of any late forms in the morphology of the letters. And as the texts of the Nālandā and Gayā plates are mutatis mutandis identical, it is very likely that both of them were copied from some genuine Gupta grant.

² In Cunningham's A. S. R., Vol. XIX, p. 60, Garrick speaks of a copper-plate of Samudragupta, said to be in the possession of a Pandit of Benares. "The inscription", he adds, "had been sent to Bengal, and therefore I was unable even to get a look at it".

³ R. D. Banerji, on the other hand, says: "The Gayā copper plate of Samudragupta, issued in the 9th year of his reign, was regarded as spurious by the late Dr. J. F. Fleet. When his work was published our knowledge of Indian Epigraphy was not so extensive as it is now. Our knowledge of the form of Imperial Gupta land-grants was limited to the Indor-khera inscribed copper plate of the time of the emperor Skandagupta in 1833. The Natore or Dhanaidaha plate of Kumāragupta I, the six Damodarpur plates of the emperors Kumāragupta I, Bndhagupta and Bhānngupta and finally the three Faridpur plates of the kings Dharmāditya and Gopachandra have thrown a flood of light on the procedure of issuing grants of land or deeds recording transfers of the same. In the face of this mass of new evidence it is impossible to believe at the present day that the Gayā copper plate grant of the 9th year of Samudragupta is forged. It cannot be regarded as spurious in the same light as the Sudi plates and in the writer's opinion it is genuine." (Age of the Imperial Guptas, pp. 7-8.)

The inscription is dated in the year 5, 2nd day of Māgha, followed by the word niva(ba)-ddha[m]*. So far as I am aware, this word does not appear with a date in any other Gupta record, but is found in some Pratihāra grants.¹ The date of the Gayā plate, year 9, was referred to the Gupta era by Fleet,² which would mean that Chandragupta I had died by A. D. 328. If the date of the present record too be referred to the Gupta era, his life is further shortened by 4 years, leaving him a reign of only 4 or 5 years, assuming that the year 5 of the Gupta era was the first regnal year of Samudragupta. It is unlikely that he could have created an empire within such a short time, so that we are forced to meet another alternative that the years are in reality the regnal years of Samudragupta himself. But as the Gupta era is universally regarded as having been established by Chandragupta I, it is difficult to understand why Samudragupta should have reverted to the practice of using regnal years in state documents. Was Samudragupta himself then the author of the Gupta era? It must be admitted that this conjecture is not primā facie impossible, as the ascription of the era to the first mahārājādhirāja of the dynasty is only a plausible conjecture which does not conflict with any known facts. But if Samudragupta really founded the era, we have to distribute 136 years (A. D. 319 to 455)—an abnormally long period—among three generations, viz., Samudragupta, Chandragupta II and Kumāragupta I. We are therefore inclined to think that both being spurious documents, the dates on the Nālandā and Gayā plates need not be taken seriously for historical purposes.

The text given below is transcribed from a set of photographs of the copper-plate kindly supplied to me by the Superintendent, Archaeological Section, Indian Museum. I found that some portions were more legible on another photograph of the plate before it was chemically treated, belonging to the office of the Superintendent, Archaeological Survey of India, Central Circle. In deciphering the text I have received much valuable help from Dr. N. P. Chakravarti, Government Epigraphist for India.

³ Read as Nṛipura by Sastri, who evidently reads the portion as skandhātūrāna(n)=Nṛipura.

⁶ Restored from the Gayā plate.

⁷ The word is spelt with sha in the Gayā plate. The letter bhyā is doubtful both here and in the Gayā plate.

No. 10.—A COPPER-PLATE GRANT OF MUMMUNIRAJA ; SAKA 971.

By S. C. UPADHYAYA, M.A., LL.B., BOMBAY.

This set of three plates was first handed over to the Curator, Archaeological Section, Prince of Wales Museum, for decipherment by one Hasan Razak, a Muhammadan water-diviner. The Curator after carefully examining these plates kindly passed them on to me for decipherment in details. I am highly obliged to him for the kind permission to edit the same in this journal.

The grant consists of three plates. Each plate is 11"×9"× $\frac{1}{8}$ " in size. The written space in each plate measures 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ "×10". The first and last plates bear writing on one side only while the second has writing on both the sides. A circular hole of about $\frac{3}{4}$ " in diameter runs through them. The circular ring which holds the plates together, has got a seal (at present with the owner) with the figure of Garuḍa. The whole grant runs into 94 lines.

The characters are similar to those found in the other Śilāhāra copper-plates of the same period. However, they differ to some extent from those in the Ambar Nātha temple stone inscription of the time of Māmvaṇi dated Śaka 982,⁶ the chief reason of the difference being either the roughness of the material or possibly the inefficiency of the engraver.

The language of the grant is Sanskrit. As regards orthography, a consonant following r is sometimes doubled and sometimes left single, e.g., Kapardāi (l. 8), svargga, mārgga (l. 13), karmmaṇi (l. 15), samvarddhanūl (l. 29) as against dōr-daṇḍa (l. 17), yathārtha (l. 20), Nāgārjuna (l. 31), etc. The dental sibilant is often used for the palatal one (ll. 8, 9, etc.), but in certain cases what has been read as s may be a badly written ś.

In the benedictory verses Gaṇeśa and Śiva are invoked. The genealogy begins with the well known mythical story of Jīmūtavāhana, the son of Jīmūtakētu, who offered himself as a prey to Garuḍa in place of the serpent Śaṁkhachūḍa.

¹ There is a hole due to damage over ta which in the photograph looks like an anusvāra.

² The portion that is lost here no doubt contained adjectives of the donee, of which one must have been traividyā, as he is referred to in the following lines.

³ The Gayā plate reads na ch=ētaḥ-prabhṛity= etc.

⁶ J. B. B. R. A. S., Vol. XII, pp. 329 f.

In his family was born Kapardin (I) who was adventurous like Śahasānka¹ and was the forehead-mark (tilaka) of the Śilāra line. His son Puṣaśakti who was well versed in politics and who conquered his enemies is then mentioned.²

Next comes his son Laghu-Kaparddi.³ He is described in the usual poetical and vague manner. His son Vappuvanna is next mentioned in the usual way.⁴ His son Jhañjha is then mentioned. That he erected twelve Śiva temples is particularly mentioned here as in the Khārepāṭa plates.

Nothing particular is said of his brother Gōggirāja and his son Vajjaḍa, except that the former was valorous like Bhishma, Drōṇa and Arjuna. Vajjaḍa's son Aparājita who was benevolent, truthful and brave is then mentioned. He is given the title Śaraṇāgata-rajapāñjara and the record particularly mentions the facts that he helped a king named Gōmma, and made firm the rule of Aiyapaḍeva. He is also said to have protected Bhillama and two other kings whose names seem to be Amma and Maṇaivuva.⁵ His son Vajjaḍadeva (II) and his younger brother Arikēsarin are then mentioned.⁶ The latter had been on a pilgrimage to the temple of Sōmēśvara.

Then his nephew Chhittarāja (son of Vajjaḍa II) is mentioned as in other inscriptions. Next comes his younger brother Nāgarjuna.⁷ His younger brother Mummuni is then mentioned.⁸ He vanquished his foes and ruled over 1,400 villages the chief of which was Puri. At the time of this grant his Mahāmātya was Śrī-Daddapaīya and the Mahāsāndhivigrahika Śrī-Vātṭhapāya, who along with other officers were in charge of the Śrīkaraṇa. The writer of the document was Nāgalaiya.⁹

The grant was given on Friday, Śuddha 15, Bhādrapada in the year 971 of the Śaka era, corresponding to Tuesday the 20th August 1049 A.D.¹⁰ There was a lunar eclipse at that time.

² The Kaphēri inscriptions of Amōghavarsha, Śaka 765, describes Puṣaśakti as a Rāṣṭrakūṭa feudatory and lord of the Koṅkaṇ, ruling in Puri (Ind. Ant., Vol. XIII, pp. 134-36).

³ The Kaphēri inscriptions of Amōghavarsha, Śaka 775 and 799 (Ind. Ant., Vol. XIII, pp. 134 ff.), describe Kapardin (II) as the Rāṣṭrakūṭa feudatory and master of Koṅkaṇ.

⁶ According to Bhūpḍūp plates, the word agraja would go with Arikēsarin. But on the evidence of other documents Vajjaḍa was the elder brother of Arikēsarin. The Vaḍavalli plates of Aparāditya, Śaka 1049 (J. B. B. R. A. S., Vol. XXI, p. 508), confirm this.

⁷ He is mentioned in the Khārepāṭa and Vaḍavalli plates. Altekar's suggestion (Indian Culture, Vol. II, p. 410) that he died before Chhittarāja seems to be baseless.

⁸ For another spelling, Māmvāṇi, cf. J. B. B. R. A. S., Vol. XII, p. 329.

⁹ According to the Ambar Nātha temple inscription (ibid., pp. 329-30) these officers in Śaka 982 were different persons.

¹⁰ Indian Ephemeris, Vol. III, p. 101. [The corresponding date in Christian era is Tuesday the 16th August (not the 20th which was a Sunday and when there was no lunar eclipse), A.D. 1049, when there was a lunar eclipse. The week day seems to read Sutē and not Śukre as Mr. Upadhyaya reads. Probably Suta here stands for Mahāseuta (Tuesday).—Ed.]

The village granted was Kiichchhita. It was in the Mandaraja district. To the east there was the *śrī-Ēnara*¹ hill and rivulets running from it. To the north was the Nimvā village, to the west the Mātara village and to the south the Sāmvīna river. None of these places can be identified at present.

The grant was made to twelve Brahmins (a list of whom is given below) to enable them to carry on their religious duties. Among the donees there were Brahmins who had emigrated from Gauḍa, Madhyadēśa and Lāṭa. They belonged to various gōtras and śākhās. Some of these names are given in the vernacular ending in aiya. The grant contains towards the end the approval of Mummunirāja, son of Vajjaḍadēva.

No. 11.—TIRUPPUVANAM PLATES OF JATAVARMAN KULASEKHARA I.

By K. V. SUBRAHMANYA AIYER, B.A., COIMBATORE.

Tiruppūvaṇam, a village in the Śivaganga Zamindari of the Rāmnād District and a station on the Madura-Rāmnād section of the South-Indian Railway, is situated on the south bank of the river Vaigai, called Vēgavati in Sanskrit. It is 12 miles south-east of Madura and 16 miles west of Śivaganga.¹ The Pushpavanēśvara temple of the village is an ancient one : it is celebrated in the hymns of the three Tamil Śaiva saints Tirujñānasambandha, Appar and Sundaramūrti-Nāyaṇār.² Invited by Kulachchirai-Nāyaṇār, the Pāṇḍya minister, and Maṅgaiyarkkaśi, a Chōla princess and queen of the Pāṇḍya king known in Tamil literature as Nelvēli-pōrveṇṇa-ṇiṇṇāśir-Neḍumāraṇ, saint Tirujñānasambandha is said to have gone to Madura, and to have overcome the Jainas under whose influence the king had become a staunch supporter of their cause. He brought the king back to the Śaiva faith, and on this occasion, after accomplishing the mission for which he was sent, the saint, accompanied by Neḍumāraṇ, his queen and minister, visited thirteen other places in the Pāṇḍya country which were held sacred by the Śaivas and sang hymns on them.³ From the hymns on Tiruppūvaṇam, it is gathered that it was, in those days, a flourishing city with palatial buildings, fine gardens and broad streets and contained residences of wealthy families of weavers.⁴ The Śiva temple of the place is stated in the hymns to have been worshipped by 'the three kings of the South', i.e., the Chēra, Chōla and Pāṇḍya.⁵ Sundaramūrti-Nāyaṇār is also stated to have visited the place in company with the three contemporary sovereigns of the same three families.⁶ The Pāṇḍya king of his time, we are told, was a son-in-law of the Chōla. It was at a spot near the city of Tiruppūvaṇam that the Jainas had been impaled in the days of Mājavarma, the victor of the Nelvēli.⁷

The Tiruppūvaṇam temple is in possession of twelve copper-plate⁸ leaves. Having learnt through the kind offices of the Brahmin lady trustee of the Tiruppūvaṇam temple residing in Madura, that the plates in question are safely preserved in the karivēlam of the temple, I went to the place and made a fruitless attempt to get the plates for comparing the published text and correcting it in situ. Frustrated in my endeavour I wrote to the Government Epigraphist for India to obtain the plates on loan and take their impressions and supply me with one set of them for editing the inscription in the Epigraphia Indica. He took prompt action on my ² Tirujñānasambandha has contributed 'Araiyār puṇalum' 11 verses and 'Mādamar mēṇṇiyaṇāgi' 11 verses, while Appar has sung 'Vaḍivēru tiriśūlam' 11 verses. Of Sundaramūrti's decade of verses, two are lost; the first verse of his paḍigam commences with 'Tiruvuḍaiyār'.

⁸ About them Sowell wrote as follows in his List of Antiquities, Vol. I, p. 298 :—

"A copper-plate grant of ten leaves belonging to the temple has been published by Bishop Caldwell in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. VI, p. 142, together with a supplementary plate of two leaves."

The writer must have meant 'sides' by 'leaves', for Burgess and Natesa Sastri correctly note "Five plates only of the kāsanam are there (i.e., in the Indian Antiquary) given in fac-simile from Sir Walter Elliot's impressions. The whole is here given translated from new impressions obtained with considerable difficulty owing to the ignorant stupidity of the Temple guardians" (A.S.S.I., Vol. IV, p. 21).

suggestion and on 31st January 1939 placed at my disposal two excellent sets of impressions from which I now edit the plates. Dr. Chakravarti took the measurements of the plates and found that what was given in the Archæological Survey of South India, Vol. IV, was incorrect. His note is given below :—

“ Of the first set, the first ten plates measure approximately 16½” in length (the plates are not of exactly equal size) while their breadth is roughly 5½” except of the 4th and 10th which are 6” and 6½” respectively. The eleventh plate is 17½” long and 6½” broad. The plate of Kōnēriṃ-maikōṇḍāṇ (supplementary plate) is 17½” long and 6 ” broad.”

All the plates bear writing on both sides and the lines run from edge to edge in some of them without leaving any vacant margin.¹ There are 15 lines on each of the plates I, II, III, IVa, VIb, VIIb, VIIIb, and Xb; 16 lines on IVb, V, VIa, VIIa, VIIIa, IXa, Xa, and XIa; and 17 lines on IXb and XIb. On the whole there are 343 lines of writing in the first set of eleven plates. A ring-hole is bored in the centre of the left side about an inch and a half from the left edge. Though the plates have not got raised rims to protect the writing, the inscription is fairly well preserved excepting some portions of the last four lines of the first face of the sixth plate. A few letters on Va, IVa and b and Xa are also damaged. The existence of the hole is an indication that the plates must have been strung on a ring bearing perhaps a seal also, though there is none at present. In all probability it must have been lost years ago.

The text and translation given in volume IV of the Archæological Survey of South India require revision. There are serious misreadings especially in proper names. To point out a few, the volume gives punarātō for °s=tata imē (l. 3), grāmasy=āvadhik-āptim for grāmasy=āghāṭa-kṣiptim (l. 4), Kakaṇḍēri for Nakkaṇḍēri (l. 33), pāśakappaḍi for pāḷaguppaḍi (l. 38), janamikaḷ (jananikaḷ ?) for jaṇmigaḷ (l. 44), Kakekuḍi for Kaḍukkuḍi (l. 47), Sembāṇḍēri for Seṇṇāḷēri (l. 48), Tiruppu for tiṇṇappu (l. 49), ivvūr-pārttanṇaṇ for ivvūrpār-Chundāṇ (l. 60), Narimaṇṇamānum-Kaṇḍanallūrum for Narimaṇṇam-āṇa Varagaṇḍa-Nallūrum (ll. 60f.), ivvūr Maḍār-Sīlaiyaṇ for ivvūrpār-Chīlaiyaṇ (l. 61), paśalaiyūr for Pālaiyūr (l. 90), tōḷarum for dēvarum (ll. 91f.), Mahā-vidhinallūr for Kāvidinallūr (l. 112), Puliśāṇi for Pullāṇi (ll. 119f.), Kēśavaṇum for Kōvaṇum (l. 128), Kēśavaṇ for Āḍuvāṇ (ll. 130f.), Sidayil-araya-Baṭṭaṇ for Sī-Kayilāya-Baṭṭaṇ (l. 135), Valliyaṇ piḍittalai for Villiy-āṇa Muḍittalai (l. 137), maruvāy-ikkārūḍē for maruvāy-Iḍukkār-ūḍē (l. 191), vaḍakku varayum for vaḍavāyum (ll. 195f.), Paḷaṇḍiyai for puḷaṇ-kōyilaḍiyai (ll. 197f.), i-n for te (l. 200), maralāra for Mālār (l. 219), Seyyai for śevvai (l. 235), kkāra for kār (l. 242), and kavāyil for agavāyil (l. 243).

As only the first five plates are numbered, it is not possible to say definitely whether the numbering was done when the plates were engraved or at a subsequent date. The caligraphy of the numerals seems to indicate that the numbers must have been incised at a somewhat later date. It behoves us therefore to see if the rest of the plates are in order and whether the set is complete.² On examination, we find that the face commencing with the line nōkki of the seventh plate is the second, for it reads well with the syllables at the end of the other face karaiyē-te which must therefore be the first face of that plate. And the first line of the first face has the syllables l-karaiyē which reads in continuation of the last syllables of the sixth plate, viz., ikkālṇ-mē. In volume IV of the Archæological Survey of South India, by reading the second face of the seventh plate after the end of the sixth plate and then reading the first face after the second, a mistake has been committed.¹ The order of the rest of the plates as given there is correct and none of the plates is missing. Another defect in the published text is that it has omitted to give one full line found on the second side of the ninth plate. This mistake has occurred as two consecutive lines (ll. 272-3) commence with the same syllables ku nōkki=chchenru Mīlaganū-ku. There are many instances where final consonants have been treated as the first combined consonant and vice versa. These defects and the summary treatment of the contents in the Archæological Survey of South India, Vol. IV, make the re-publication of the inscription a great desideratum.

Excepting the first five lines of the first plate, first side, which are in Sanskrit verse written in Grantha characters, the rest of the inscription is in Tamil language and alphabet. Though the orthographical peculiarities found in the record are common to the epigraphs of this period, a few of them deserve to be noted here. There are numerous instances where the sandhi rules are not observed. In the Tamil portion Grantha letters are used in many places where Sanskrit words occur. For instances see Vēda, Sāstra (l. 16) and brahmādēya (l. 19). The superscript r is marked by a short slanting stroke engraved on the top of the letter, e.g., rū (l. 2), mma (l. 13). Punctuation is denoted by what is called single or double piḷaiyār-śūli and visarga-like mark; see, for example, lines 3 and 5. Medial long ī is well distinguished from the short by being given a closed loop on the right of the concave curve on the top of the letters (ll. 5, 6, 9, 12, 39, 40, 42). ṛk and ṛl are often used for rkk and rtl: see, for example, Mīlaganūṛku (ll. 272-3), Māraṅkīṛti (l. 270) and Kaṇṇakīṛti (l. 269). The words mūlaiyīṛ-tiru (l. 288), ellaīyīṛ-tiru (l. 284) and ēmbaṛṇ (l. 309) ought to be mūlaiyīṛ-riru, ellaīyīṛ-riru and ēmbaṛ=ṇ. There are instances of doubling of consonants where unnecessary and of omission to double them when necessary; e.g., *chenru-kKaṭṭi*² (l. 281). Another noteworthy feature is the use of the accusative for the locative in words like vāyikkālaiy-īrandu and kālaiy-īraṅgi. In these cases, Tamil would require ōkāṭil. Influence of Sanskrit has perhaps to account for the departure in these cases.

The inscription is in two parts of which the first, which is very brief, is in Sanskrit and covers only five lines. It gives the mythical genealogy of the Pāṇḍyas traced from Hari (Viṣṇu) through Atri, Moon, Budha and Purūravas, and states that Rājagambhīradēva, in the 25th year of his reign, on the day of Svāti, corresponding to a Sunday and the eleventh tithi of the dark fortnight of the month in which the Sun was in Dhanush, ordered the determination of the boundaries of the village which was called after his name, by circumambulating it with a female elephant. It is to be noted that not even the king's immediate ancestors are mentioned in the record. The king is said to have been apprised of the formation of the new village by Sundarēsa. Who this person is it is not possible to say definitely, as the corresponding Tamil portion omits this fact altogether. Since the formation of the kind is generally conveyed to kings by officials such as Secretaries and Ministers and sometimes even by princes who were in attendance on them, we may not be wrong in thinking that Sundarēsa was one such person of distinction. We know from a record of Jaṭāvarman Kulasekhara I (with Pūriṅkilatti introduction) found at Chaturvēdimāṅalam² that the king had a brother-in-law by name Aḷagapperumāḷ, and our plates also enable us to gather that Piḷaiyār Aḷagapperumāḷ held a high position, for a person under him bearing the official designation adiḡarām acted as kaṇkāṇi in the settlement of boundaries of the new village. It is not unlikely that machchunāṇār Aḷagapperumāḷ and Pillaiyār Aḷagapperumāḷ indicate two different persons. Sundarēśa being a good Sanskrit rendering of the name Aḷagapperumāḷ, there is a possibility of one of the two persons of that name being referred to. But of this we cannot be certain. If a prince is meant, can it refer to Māṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I who, at the time of the record, might be supposed to have been serving the king? The second part which is in Tamil, opens with the usual eulogy of king Jaṭavarman Kulasekhara commencing with the words Pūvinḱilatti and runs to the end of the eleventh plate. It consists of two principal sentences, the first beginning from the end of line 5 (plate Ia) and ending with the beginning of line 139 (plate Vb) with śāvadu, and the second commencing with the words paḍiṇ-mūṇṇ-āvaḍiṇ-eḍir in line 139 (plate Vb) and ending with the word niṇṇadu in line 338 (plate XIb). These two sentences are followed by the names of the writer of the document and the signatories who attested it and these cover up lines 338 to 343 in the last plate. The composing of this Tamil part of the inscription consisting of 338 lines of writing and covering nearly all the 22 sides of the plates, obscures the clear understanding of the various transactions involved and detailed in it. The main sentence, which gives the principal and immediate object of the inscription is Kulaśēkharadēvaṛḱku yāṇḍu 13-vadu nāl nāl-āyirattu mupṇṇṇu arupaḍiṇāl (ll. 14f.) piḍi-naḍanda eḷlaikkur or °paḍiḱku arav-ōlai seydu kuḍutta paṇiśāvadu (l. 73 and l. 138) meaning "this is the deed drawn up and given in the thirteenth year and four thousand and three-hundred and sixtieth day of the reign of Kulaśēkharadēva (embodying) the boundaries as circumambulated by the female elephant". The noting down of the boundaries of the entire village from point to point is thus the main object of this set of eleven copper-plates; and it may be said that it is the last of a series of actions involved in the constitution and grant of the new village of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam as brahmadēya. The document was drawn up by the persons authorised in the royal order issued on the day specified in the Sanskrit portion as niḷē vatsarē paṇcha-vimśē Chaṇḍāṁśāv-ātta-chāpē Kanakapati-tithau kṛṣṇa-pakṣh-Ārkivāra-Svāti-yōgē and repeated in the Tamil portion in the words paḍiṇ-mūṇṇ-āvaḍiṇ-eḍir paṇṇiraṇḍāṁ-āṇḍu Dhaṇu-nāyarru nālān-tiyaḍiyum apara-pakṣhattu ēkādaśiyum Śaṇi-kkiḷamaṇiyum peṇṇa Śōḍi-nāl (ll. 139ff.). This earlier date had been calculated by the late Professor Kielhorn and found to agree with Saturday, 29th November A. D. 1214. As such, the 13th year and 4360th day of the king's reign (=the 26th year, or more correctly 25 years and 40 days) which relates to the drawing up of the boundary deed, must be later than A. D. 1214, November 29, by such number of unexpired months and days as remained in the 25th year (i.e., 12th current year after the 13th) of the king's reign plus 40 days of the 26th year (i.e., 13th year opposite the 13th). The formation of the brahmadēya and the grant of it had already been effected when the order for the kariṇi-bhramaṇa was given on the 29th November A.D. 1214. This is plain by the statement nikki uḷḷa nilam mupṇṇuḍaiyārum paḷam pērum veḷḷāṇ-vagaiyum mudalun-taviṇṇu oru-nāḍum or-ārum oru puravum āḱḱi Rājagambhīra-vaḷanāḍu Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam=ēṇṇu=tirunāmattāl brahmadēyaṇ=cheydaruḷi (ll. 70-72) meaning 'the remaining lands had been constituted as the brahmadēya village of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam so called after the sacred name (of the king) and included in Rājagambhīra-vaḷanāḍu: the previous owners, old names, the classification as veḷḷāṇ-vagai, cultivating ryots and mudal of the lands removed and classed under one nāḍu, one puravu and one village'. We shall refer to the significance of this in the sequel. With regard to the royal order issued on the 29th November A.D. 1214, it must be said that while the Sanskrit portion stops with mentioning the immediate circumambulation of the village which was called after the king's name (sv-ābhidānasya grāmasy-āghāta-kṣiptim=prati sapadi karēṇum gamayitum=avadat Rājagambhīradēvaḱ), the Tamil portion is more explicit and states what ought to be done further. It tells us that the circumambulation of the four boundaries of the said village must be effected in the presence of the superintendents (appointed for the purpose), and, for the boundaries thus gone round, a deed also must be drawn up and given. This is clear from the passage ivvūr nāṅ-ellaiyuñ=kaṇkāṇigaḷōḍuñ=kūda=ppiḍi-sūḷṇdu piḍi naḍanda ellaikkū aṟav-ōlai śeydu kuḍukkan-eṟru tīruvāy-moḷindaruḷiṇamaiyil (ll. 72-74).

We have referred above to three dates that occur in the inscription and have shown that two of them are identical and relate to the day on which the boundaries of the new village were ordered to be determined by the king and that the third, which is expressed in years and days, and which is later than the other two was the day on which the document was drawn up. The identical nature of two of the dates being assured by the details, the mention of the year in two ways, viz., pañcha-viṃśē (the 25th) and paḍiṇ-mūṇṇāṇṇāḍiṇ edir paṇṇiraṇḍu (the 12th year opposite the 13th) shows that the number of years given after the word edir must be added to the number expressed before it. Two other dates occur in the inscription, viz., paḍiṇ-mūṇṇāṇṇāḍiṇ-edir paṭṭām-āṇḍu-varai (up to the 10th year opposite the 13th) and paḍiṇ-mūṇṇāṇṇāḍiṇ edir paḍiṇ-on-ṇām-āṇḍu-mudal (from the 11th year opposite the 13th), in connection with the clubbing together of the villages and lands in the new village and the grant of it as a brahmadēya. The first refers to the state of the items of lands as they stood up to the 23rd year and the second refers to the fact that the brahmadēya had to take effect from the next year, i.e., the 24th year. Evidently the omission to recognise this particular fact, viz., that the 25th year of the king's reign is expressed by paḍiṇ-mūṇṇāṇṇāḍiṇ-edir paṇṇiraṇḍu, though recognising the identical nature of the astronomical details given both in the Sanskrit and Tamil portions, has led the late Pandit Natesa Sastri, who seems to have taken all the years to be one and the same, to postulate the following theory:—

“Nothing definite can be made out of this phrase (paḍiṇ-mūṇṇāṇṇāḍiṇ edir paḍiṇ-on-ṇām-āṇḍu) for the present. Some are of opinion that one of them refers to the age of the king and the other to the number of years he had reigned, but this Śāsanam contradicts that theory; for in IIa, l. 10, we have the 10th year opposite the 13th year, and in Vb, l. 2, the 12th year opposite the 13th year. The following theory may be suggested:—The description of the day of letting loose of the elephant in Ia and of the day in Va (correctly Vb) exactly coincides; and fortunately in Va (Vb) instead of merely stating in the 13th year, it is said in the 12th year opposite the 13th year; from these and bearing in mind that at the commencement of the Śāsanam it is stated “in the 13th year, 4364th day”, and that according to the rough Hindu calculation of 360 days for every year, $\frac{4364}{360} = 12$ years and 44 days, I think that “in the 12th year opposite the 13th year”, may mean, after the completion of the 12th year in the 13th year of the reign. Similarly “11th year opposite the 13th year” may mean after the completion of the 11th year, i.e., in the 12th year of the reign. Similarly 10th, in each case the present year of the reign is also added”.¹

Against this, Burgess noted: “This theory of the Pandit's is ingenious, but will not do: the 13th year cannot coincide with parts of three years. Can it be 1310, 1311, and 1312. Śaka that is meant by the dates? If so, the number of days may refer to the reign”.²

Except in showing the difficulties felt in explaining the double dates, these theories have no value whatsoever to us now, and we pass on with the remark that the singling out of a particular year—in this case the 13th year—still remains to be definitely and satisfactorily made out.

That the determination of the boundaries commenced on the very day the order was given might be inferred from line 140. I would consider that there is an omission of the words—‘piḍi naḍappittu’ after ‘sūḷṇdu’ in the extract given above for the reason that the document, while repeating the same in another place, has the phrase ‘piḍi naḍatta=ppiḍi naḍandaṇḍaḍikkū’ (l. 138). There are still other defects in this part of the document. It omits to state to whom the order was issued and what formalities were observed by the recipients. Judging from other copper-plates it may be said that the order must have been addressed to the assembly of the district of Rājagambhīra-vaṇaṇḍu. It could not have been issued to the assembly of any of the sub-divisions in it, for the villages and lands that had been clubbed to form the new village of Rājagambhīra-chaṭurvēdimaṅgalam, belonged to more than one sub-division. Then again, the inscription does not state to whom this document of boundaries was ordered to be given or was granted. The verb kuḍukka (shall be given) in the passage extracted above, has no object. But it may be reasonably presumed that it should have been directed to be given to the donees and must have been left in the possession of the sabhā of Rājagambhīra-chaṭurvēdimaṅgalam representing the vast number of one thousand and eighty donees. If this was the case, there arise the questions as to how the Tiruppūvanam temple has come to be in possession of it, whether it is the original document that was granted, or only a copy, and if a copy, whether such a copy could not be found elsewhere. The answer to these questions is given below in the introduction to the article on the supplementary plate.

The inscription tells us that eleven persons were appointed to superintend the settlement of boundaries. Their names (Il. 74-93) are given in Appendix A, I. Of these eleven persons, one (No. 4) was the agent of the Tiruvāykkēlvi officer Poṇṇaṇ Sūriyadēvaṇ alias Jayadhara-Pallavaraiyaṇ, another (No. 5) was the kaṅkāṇi of Poyyāmolidēvar, a third (No. 6) was the kaṅkāṇi of Śrīrāmaṇ Tiruvuḍaiyaṇ alias Pottappichechōlar, the fourth (No. 7) was the kaṅkāṇi of the māḷigaittaṇam officer Śivalavaṇ Aḷagiyamaṇavāṇaṇ alias Kāḷiṅgarāyaṇ, the fifth (No. 8) was the kaṅkāṇi of Maḷavarāyaṇ, the sixth (No. 9) was the adigūram of Piḷḷaiyār Aḷagapperumāl and the seventh (No. 11) was one of the aṇukkar of Aḷagiyapāṇḍiyaṇār, who was scrutinising the affairs of the District of Śōḷapāṇḍiya-vaṇaṇḍu. Along with the 11 kaṅkāṇis, 65 others representing the villages adjacent to Rājagambhīra-chaṭurvēdimaṅgalam, most of them being connected with the formation of the new village, went with the elephant and fixed the boundaries. Their names and their native villages and nāḍu (Appendix A, II to XVI) are given in plates IVa (l. 93) to Vb (l. 138). The details of the boundaries from point to point commencing with a spot on the north-eastern corner and ending with the same spot are set forth in plates Vb (l. 140) to XIb (l. 338). This document mentioning the details of boundary of the village, i.e., this inscription, was drawn up by one of the officials (No. 1 of App. A, I) and was attested by three others (Nos. 2 to 4 of the same Appendix) (Il. 338-343).

The duty of the eleven superintendents, who were mostly officials drawn from various parts of the country and were unconnected with the villages that were combined together to form the brahmadēya, must have been to see that the procedure was correctly observed. The actual work was left to be done by the local people. Of the sixty-five others, seven including one who was a resident of Tiruppūvanam, led the elephant, while the others showed the boundaries of their respective villages. The ceremony of circumambulation with seventy-six responsible persons going with an elephant and covering a large area, must have been an imposing one : and by the very nature of the troubles involved in the execution of the task, it must have been done in several stages and taken a long time to finish. The wide extent which was covered by the newly constituted village may, to some measure, be conceived by the fact that it included in it as many as one hundred and forty old villages and lands which lay not in one sub-division but in five separate divisions, viz., Kīraṇūr-nāḍu, Panaṅgalūr-nāḍu, Tiyaṇdaikkūḍi-nāḍu, Mērkūḍi-nāḍu and Puṇṇappāḷalai-nāḍu (Appendix B). The party for the settlement of boundaries had to pass through a number of roads, rivers, and canals on their way. From Śey-yakulattūr there passed three roads, one to Vēmbaṅguḍi (Il. 333f.), another to Kaḍambaṅguḍi

(l. 142), and the third to Mūvaraiyarkōṭṭai (l. 145). From Mānavīramadurai there were roads running to Vēmbaṅguḍi (ll. 143f.), Mūvaraiyarkōṭṭai (l. 147), Neṭṭūr (l. 154), and Piḍāvūr (ll. 149f.). Between Kaṇṇaṇūr and Dēḍa(va)kōṭṭai (l. 225), there was another road. From the village of Miḷaganūr there were roads leading to Iruñchirai (l. 258) and Kōṭṭakīrti in Kāñai-Irukkai (ll. 244f.). Two other roads connected Vēlāṇēri and Aravaṅkuḍi (ll. 205f.), and Iḍaikkāṭṭūr and Vēmbaṅguḍi (ll. 319 & 330).

The inscription may be said to express in action the abstract laws laid down by the ancient law-givers in the determination of boundaries of villages and lands. The number of villages that were directly concerned in this matter were as many as sixteen.¹ As I have already discussed the laws to be observed in such cases it is needless to reiterate them here.²

The early part of this inscription, which forms as it were the preamble of this document of boundaries, informs us how the new village of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimāṅgalam came to be formed and what old villages and lands were taken up to constitute it. On a date, which is not specified, while the king was sitting on the seat called Maḷavarājaṇ in the hall of the bed-chamber of his palace at Madurai, situated in the sub-division of Māḍakkulam, he ordered that a village called Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimāṅgalam after his name, should be formed consisting of one thousand and two hundred shares and be given as a brahmaḍīya, with effect from the eleventh year opposite the thirteenth of his reign, to one thousand and eighty Brāhmaṇas, who were versed in the Vēdas and Sāstras and were capable of expounding them, each being given one share, and the remaining one hundred and twenty shares being set apart for the temple and for those that had to do service. The date that is not specified here may be taken to be the tenth year opposite to the thirteenth of the king's reign, since it is stated that the grant had to take effect from the eleventh year opposite the thirteenth. The names of the lands and villages that had been taken up and included in Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimāṅgalam as given in lines 19 to 69 are noticed in a separate appendix (B). This list of villages ends with the remark āga ivvūrgaḷir=paḷan-dēvadāṇam paḷlichchandaṁ kārūṁmai-y-āga nīlam nikkī, i.e., 'excluding from these villages such lands as are old dēvadāṇas, paḷlichchandas and kārūṁmai'. This general remark applies to all villages other than the ones which, though being dēvadāṇas, etc., had been specifically stated in the body of the list as having been taken up for inclusion in the new village. Such are the three dēvadāṇa villages, Vāgaikuḍi (l. 20), Muttūranāroṭṭai (ll. 59f.), and Śīrukilāṅkāṭṭūr (l. 68) which belonged to the temple of Tiruppūvaṇamuḍaiyār. Some of the villages and lands of this list find mention in the description of boundaries, being situated on the boundary line. We learn from the description of boundaries that Marudūr lay just to the west, and Śaṅkaramaṅgalam just to the south of Mānavīramadurai, that Nīrambaiyūr was to the east of Sōmāttūr, that Vēlāṇēri was to the south of Karuṅgulam, that Miḷaganūr was to the north of both Kōṭṭakīrti and Kāñai-Irukkai, that Kaṇṇakīrti in Kāñai-Irukkai was situated just to the west of Mēṇ-Chēḷi, and to the south of Puvaṇinallūr, that Neṇkuṇṇam was immediately to the east of Kuvaḷaivēḷi, that Vāgaikuḍi was to the north of both Tirumāliruñjōlainallūr and Śīruguḍi alias Virakāmugamaṅgalam, and to the east of Veḷḷūrkuṇṇechchi and to the south of Mānābharapa-chaturvēdimāṅgalam which lay to the north of Tiruvāvaṇam situated just to the east of Veḷḷūrkuṇṇechchi, and lastly, that Kuḍaijāḍi was to the south of Sundankuṇṇechchi. From the boundaries given, we also learn that Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimāṅgalam had on its west Kīraṇūr-nāḍu, on the north Paṇṇāṅgālūr-nāḍu, on the east Tiyandaikuḍi-nāḍu, and on the south Puṇḍapparaḷai-nāḍu. The inscription mentions the rivers Vaigai alias Śrīvallabhappērāru (l. 161), Paraḷaiyāru (l. 198), Kaḷavaḷināḍaṇāru of Paṇṇāṅgālūr (l. 318) and Paraḷaikkāl (l. 193) and states that three of the dēvadāna lands of the temple of Tiruppūvaṇamuḍaiyār, named Muttūranāroṭṭai, Vāgaikuḍi and Śiṟukiḷāṅkāṭṭūr, had been added on to the new village of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam as well as certain specified lands which formed the dēvadāna of the temples of Paṣalaināthar and Śrī-Vaikunda-Viṇṇagar-Āḷvār of Mēṇ-Paṣalai alias Śrīvallabha-chaturvēdimaṅgalam (ll. 48—51).

Like the three dēvadāna villages of Vāgaikuḍi, Muttūranāroṭṭai and Śiṟukiḷāṅkāṭṭūr, the whole village of Miḷagaṇūr had been taken up and included in Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam. In exchange for the last, the following other villages were given, viz., Kuvaḷaivēli, Puḍukkuḷam, Māraṇkīrti, Kāvīdinallūr, Kaḍambamaṅgalam, Śāttiyār-ēmbal in Achchāṅkāṭṭirukkai, and that part of Araiyaḷuḷam in Kāṇai-Irukkai which remained after removing the holding (kāṇi) of Mandari Rāmau alias Pallavaraiyar (ll. 110—114). Care was taken to have the previous owners of these villages removed, their old names changed and the original constitution altered and the whole, like the lands and villages that were included in Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam, grouped together and the newly formed village of Miḷagaṇūr was given the name Rājendraśāṅganallūr. It was placed under the division Achchāṅkāṭṭirukkai and entered as such in State accounts (ll. 114—116). The persons that were entrusted with the formation of this new village are given in group IX of Appendix A : they were among the party that accompanied the female elephant. It is worthy of note that in the constitution of this village also, which was not a Chaturvēdimaṅgalam, the same precaution was taken, as in the other, to bring the different units under one control and to make it homogeneous. The words used, viz., oru-nāḍum or-ūrum oru-puravum ākki, clearly indicate that it became a distinct constituency with single class of interest as Chaturvēdimaṅgalam was.

With the aid of this and a few other allied records, we propose to consider here firstly the constitution of the Chaturvēdimaṅgalam referred to in the preamble and what it implies, secondly whether the king represented in the plates had any other introduction than the one beginning with Pūvīṇkīḷatti and thirdly the geography of the districts and divisions of the Pāṇḍya country mentioned in the plates. On all these matters the existing notions seem to need correction.

Like the founding of temples, construction of tanks, provisions made for the requirements of various shrines, the opening of educational institutions with competent teachers in various branches, erection of feeding houses for the poor and the learned, and provisions made for doctors and hospitals to minister to the needs of the sick,—furthering the cause of the study of the Vēdas and Śāstras was considered a meritorious act by South Indian kings and chiefs and it found a tangible expression in the form of Chaturvēdimaṅgalams, brahmadēyas, agaras or agrahāras and the like. One can easily pick out the names of hundreds of Chaturvēdimaṅgalams by running through the inscriptions contained in the volumes of South Indian Inscriptions ranging from the seventh century A.D. to the time of the Vijayanagara kings. If it is remembered that each one of this class of villages had been originally granted to a very large collection of eminent men who had studied the Vēdas and Śāstras and that each one of the villages had an administrative body called the sabhā, as we know from numerous instances, consisting of several committees and a general body of representative members, whose number in some cases was very large and who, by the qualifications insisted on, always kept up a high standard of Vedic learning, there could be no denying the fact that in South India, at any rate, there was a regular and systematic study of the Vēdas and the branches of subjects connected with them, and there were hundreds of thousands of persons who carried the torch of Vedic learning in the way it used to be handed down. We would like to point out that the donees of the newly constituted brahmadēya village of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam numbered as many as one thousand and eighty and that they had not only studied the Vēdas and Sāstras but were capable of expounding them. The cumulative conjunction um in the phrase Vēdamum sāstramum pōy and the use of the adjectival phrase vyākhyātākkaḷāy irukkum qualifying Chaturvēdi-Bhaṭṭarga! leave no doubt that the subjects of the Vēdas and Sāstras were studied not only with a view to grasping their meaning but in such a thorough manner as to entitle the votaries to be styled vyākhyātās, i.e., exegetes. Though these phrases are sufficient in themselves, we would point out some further instances from inscriptions which more clearly explain that these subjects were thoroughly studied in those days. These inscriptions use the additional word 'poruṭpaḍa', i.e., 'with meaning' before the verb 'pōy' 'had gone through'. One of the inscriptions of Tiruttaṅgāl,¹ dated in the 9th year and 216th day of the reign of Jaṭāvarman Kuḷaśekhara with Pūvīṅkilatti introduction (the same king that figures in the large Tiruppūvaṇam plates), registers a royal order issued on the representation of the king's officer Kāliṅgarāyar for creating a brahmadēya village called Kuḷaśekhara-chaturvēdimaṅgalam by joining together four dēvadāna villages about Tiruttaṅgāl with lands and house-sites allotted to 54 Brāhmaṇas who were versed in the Vēdas and Sāstras and were capable of expounding them. The village-site where the Brāhmaṇas had to reside was named 'Pugalōgagaṇḍanālūr'. We may refer to another inscription² dated in the 8th year and 215th day of the reign of Māṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya II with the introduction Pūmalar-tiruvum which tells us that the great-grandfather of Śrī-Rāmaṇ Aḷagaṇ alias Aḷagiyapāṇḍiya-Brahmādhirājaṇ had originally established, in the name of Vēṇāḍuḍaiyār, a village called Ravivarman-chaturvēdimaṅgalam and settled in it forty-eight Chaturvēdi-Bhaṭṭas who had learnt with meaning (poruṭpaḍa) the Vēdas and Sāstras and were capable of expounding them (vyākhyātākkaḷāy-irukkum), and twelve Bhaṭṭas who had to recite the Vēdas in the temple of Uḍaiyār Tirunelvēli-Uḍaiyār, thus making in all sixty persons. On the representation of these sixty persons and on the recommendation of the officer Ayyaṇ Māḷavarāyar, the king granted all the lands situated in Kaṇṇaṇūr alias Mānābharayappāḍi, within certain specified boundaries, excluding from them the old dēvadānas and paḷlichechandas, to be included in Ravivarman-chaturvēdimaṅgalam in order that the sixty persons settled in the village may get sixty shares, the temple of Śrī-Rāma-Viṇṇagar-Ālvār may have two shares, Pāṇḍimādevīsvaramuḍaiyār may have two shares and Toṇḍaimāṇ-Viṇṇagar-Ālvār may have one share. It is expressly stated that in this case, as indeed in others, the prior owners of lands as well as the classification under other heads had been removed and the whole constituted as one village with one puravu, one classification, etc. The point for note is that the Chaturvēdimaṅgalam was entirely a Brāhmanical village. And as we know that the sabhā was the functioning body in such a village, there is no room for thinking that the members in it could be of any other class. The inscription clearly tells us that the interest in the constituency vested with one class of people, all others being expressly stated to have been removed and changed. One of the inscriptions of the time of the Chōḷa king Rājarāja I gives the names of as many as 144 Brāhmanical Villages (brahmadēyas), which had to supply persons for the post of treasurers, temple-servants and accountants to the Rājarājēśvara temple at Tanjore.³ Without even a single exception, each one of these villages is stated to have had a sabhā. Numerous transactions of the sabhā are recorded in inscriptions giving the names of the members present in the meetings, numbering in some cases thirty and forty, and all of them are Brāhmaṇas¹ as the titles and the gōtras show.

Still another mediæval Pāṇḍya inscriptiou² dated in the 13th year of the reign of Jaṭavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I, with the characteristic title Ellāntalaiyāṇa-Perumāḷ, gives very interesting details regarding the formation of another similar village called Vikramapāṇḍya-chaturvēdimaṅgalam to settle down 108 Brāhmaṇas, many of whom were well-versed in the Vēdas and Śāstras and were capable of expounding them. For the housing accommodation of these and their families, as well as the men who were in charge of the village library and the village servants, four vēlis of land were purchased and set apart as village-site and it included in it the temple premises also. In purchasing the lands, the rights and privileges of the old tenants and title holders were completely bought up. Land for grazing the cattle was also provided for. For the maintenance of the 108 Brāhmaṇa families and others, 147½ vēlis of land in the village of Rājāsikhāmaṇinallūr alias Puḷyaṅguḍi were acquired. The following vr̥ttis were also provided for :—three for teachers of the Vēdas, one for teachers of the Sūtras, one and three-fourths for two doctors, half for ambāḍiṇas, half for the village accountant, one-fourth for a drummer, one-fourth for a blacksmith, half for carpeuter, one-fourth for goldsmith, three-eighths for īraṅkolli, three-eighths for barber, one-fourth for a washerman, three-fourths for a village watchman, and one-eighth for veṭṭiyāṇ. Further, it is said that three-fourths of the nattam land outside the Brāhmaṇa quarter, was set apart for Vellāṇ-kāṇṇyāḷar and the remainder for other professional people. All taxes were remitted and it was stipulated that from the 14th year of the king's reign, i.e., from the first year of the constitution of the new agrahāra village of Vikramapāṇḍya-chaturvēdimaṅgalam, 500 kalam of superior paddy had to be measured out every year to the temple at Chidambaram.

The contents of this inscription, as well as those of others of this class, some of which we have noticed above, show clearly that the constituency of Chaturvēdimaṅgalam was purely one of Brāhmaṇas, self-sufficient in every way ; and other classes of people were given separate accommodation in the nattam lands and were there for performing specific acts. In this limited constituency having a fixed extent of land, be it great or small, which had been completely bought up with all rights, and with their old names, prior holdings and different heads of classification entirely removed, and vested with and owned by one class of people as one unit under the different and distinguishing name Chaturvēdimaṅgalam, there is absolutely no room for thinking that in the sabhā which, as we know from numerous inscriptions, was the administrative body functioning in such a village, there could have been any member that belonged to any other class of people. Though from the qualifications laid down in the two Uttaramallūr inscriptions for membership in committees and from the actual names of persons that are mentioned as members of sabhās in numerous other epigraphs, we could gather that the sabhā was the administrative body functioning in Brāhmaṇical villages and that it had only Brāhmaṇa members, more direct evidence is afforded in No. 3 of South Indian Inscriptions, Vol. VIII. This inscription states that a royal order having been issued by the Chōḷa king Rājādhirāja I to the officer Śōḷa-Pāṇḍya-Mūvēndavēḷar to the effect that from the interest to be given in paddy by Brāhmaṇa-ūryaḷ (Brāhmaṇical villages) on sums received by them on loan from the treasury of the temple at Conjeevaram provision may be made for two Śivabrāhmaṇas performing worship and four Śivabrāhmaṇas performing parichāraka work, he directed the person that was looking after the temple affairs (Kōyil-Śrīkūryam) to make the nimandas. In the nimanda that was actually made in pursuance of this order, instead of 'Brāhmaṇa-ūrgaḷ' as at first mentioned, we find the 'sabhās' of the five villages Śīrukachchippēḍu, Uttamaśōla-chaturvēdimāṅgalam, Parāntaka-chaturvēdimāṅgalam, Miḷalaimāṅgalam and Aparāyita (Aparājita)-chaturvēdimāṅgalam. The substitution of the 'sabhās' of these five villages for 'Brāhmaṇa-ūrgaḷ' makes it plain that the sabhā was the functioning body in Brāhmanical villages. This class of constituency, as indeed any other such as ūr, nagara, etc., was not a promiscuous jumbling of varied interests as one finds at present. Unless one confounds ancient institutions with modern ones, no different and contrary view could be validly put forth. The different appellations such as ūr, nagara, sabhā, etc., by which the administrative bodies of villages were called, show the different nature of their constitution. If the village was one of Veḷḷāṇ landlords with the necessary families of farmers, artisans, barbers, potters, washermen, doctors, etc., it had the assembly of the ūr, the members of which body were Veḷḷāṇ landlords. If the village was one of merchantmen, traders and men engaged in manufacture and industry, it was subject to the assembly of the nagara. And if it was a Brāhmanical village having in it mostly Brāhman landlords with such families of farmers, etc., as were necessary for the well-being of the village and the cultivation of the lands in it, it had the sabhā for its management. The very formation of the different kinds of villages and the different appellations by which the functioning bodies, viz., ūr, nagara and sabhā, were chosen to be so termed sufficiently indicate that there was no admixture of all classes of men in any one of them. Some of the functions discharged by the various assemblies might be similar and even identical; but it cannot account for a medley of members in any one of them. To judge from the transactions that have come down to us it seems that each one of the functioning bodies known by the different names which they bore, was a pure and unadulterated assembly functioning for a particular group or constituency. It will be unreasonable to think that in the council of the ūr or the sabhā, the landlords were represented by the potter, barber, washerman and the ryots who cultivated their lands and did some kind of work or other receiving the vṛitti assigned therefor. Though in the generality of cases, a village is described as being situated in a sub-division of a district there were some which were directly under a district. These villages appear to have been considerably big towns having in them several large quarters and hamlets subject to the control of various constitutional bodies; they may be likened to Presidency towns like Madras, Bombay, etc. Even here, the different bodies functioned for different classes.

Though the inscription under publication does not throw light on the political history of the time to which it relates, the information which this and the allied records cited above furnish, viz., that the class of villages going by the name-ending Chaturvēdimāṅgalam consisted exclusively of Brāhmaṇ land-owners and had an administrative body known by the special term sabhā, has been shown above to be of great value. The further information contained in the inscription that the donees who numbered one thousand and eighty were reputed for knowing 'with meaning' the Vēdas and Śāstras and were capable of expounding them, and this especially in the century that preceded the advent of Śāyana, is sure to be welcomed by scholars. We need hardly say that by Śāstras are meant the subjects forming the Vēdāṅgas.¹ Had the inscriptions cited above not stopped with mentioning the fact that the Chaturvēdimāṅgalams referred to therein were divided into shares and given to the number of Brāhmins specified, viz., 1080, 108 and 60 who had studied the Vēdas and Śāstras and were vyākhyātās of them, but had furnished also their names, we would be in a position to know their attainments. The Tanḍantōṭtam plates,¹ though incomplete, besides saying that the chief Dayā mukha after duly informing the Pallava king Nandivarman Pallavamalla² got the village which acquired the name Dayā mukhamāṅgalam granted to no less than 308 Brāhmaṇa scholars of Vēdas and Smṛitis, give us the names of the donees. The list of persons,³ though only partially preserved, gives the names of 108 Chaturvēdins, 28 Trivēdins, 24 Shaḍaṅgavids and about ten Kramavids, all of whom must have known the meaning of the hymns. It will be strange if a Shaḍaṅgavid did not know the import of the mantras for the very object of the Niruktabhāṣya, one of the Shaḍaṅgas, was to fit a student to easily grasp the sense of the hymns.⁴ As the first part of the name of each one of the villages of this class is a sure indicator of the name of the king or chief that founded the village and thus points also to the time when it came into being, and as the second part testifies to the attainment in the Vedic lore of the donees of the village, we are enabled to say from the names of Chaturvēdimāṅgalams preserved in inscriptions that in different parts of South India there were large numbers of Vedic scholars from the 7th century down to the 13th. The names Sinhavishṇu-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,⁵ Mahēndravarma-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,⁶ Naraśiṅga-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,⁷ Paramēśvara-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,⁸ Śivachūlāmaṇi-māṅgalam,⁹ Vijayāṅkura-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,¹⁰ Avaninārāyaṇa-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,¹¹ Ēkadhīra-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,¹² Vayiramēga-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,¹³ Mārapidugudēvi-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,¹⁴ Vidyāvinīta-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,¹⁵ Pallavaṇmahādēvi-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,¹⁶ *Aparājita-chaturvēdimāṅgalam*¹⁷ and others establish the patronage extended by the Pallava kings to men of Vedic learning from the 7th to the 9th century A.D. That the same spirit animated the Chōlas who were the political successors of the Pallavas, accounts for the foundation and grant of villages and cities going by the names Viśaiyālaya-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,¹⁸ Kōḍaṇḍarāma-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,¹⁹ Parāṇ-taka-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,²⁰ Jananātha-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,²¹ Gaṇḍarāditya-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,²² Aṇiṇigai-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,²³ Śōlamārttāṇḍa-chaturvēdimāṅgalam,²⁴ *Rājāsraya-chaturvēdimāṅgalam*²⁵ and those that were called after the Chālukya-Chōlas that followed Adhirājendra, and for the continuance of the study of the Vēdas and Vēdāṅgas from the eighth century to the thirteenth, patronised as it was by the kings and chiefs who had high regard for it.

⁴ The selection of ṛiks for comment is supposed to have been made with such care that with a perfect understanding of their significance and with a thorough grasp of the lucid etymological explanation of the words occurring in them as furnished by the author of the Nirukta, it was believed that the student of the Vēdas would be able to know the meaning of other mantras without difficulty. The hymns and words treated in the Nirukta and the comment offered on them were considered sufficient to form a ready reference for other mantras. Ētēshu parijñāteshu śakyatē mantrārthaḥ parijñātum tē ēva jñāpakā bhavanti. In some cases, the term Chaturvēdimāṅgalam seems to have been contracted into Maṅgalam and such are those that had for their functioning body the sabhā. As instances may be cited Varaguṇamaṅgalam, Triyamhakamaṅgalam, Kaṭṭāraimaṅgalam, Paraśumaṅgalam, Māramaṅgalam, Avanipaśēkaramaṅgalam and Kaḍuṅgōmaṅgalam mentioned in a Pāṇḍya grant of the time of Varaguṇa II.¹ All these places were in the Tinnevely District and their foundation by Pāṇḍya kings takes us from the sixth to the ninth century A.D., when Kaḍuṅgō, Māravarman, Varaguṇa and Śrīmāra flourished. The Pāṇḍya king Parāntaka Neḍuñjaḍaiyan (A.D. 770) is said in the Vēlvikuḍi plates to have founded Śrīvaramaṅgalam,² so termed after one of his surnames. Maṅgalam was further contracted into Maṅgai as in Varaguṇamaṅgai and Śrīvaramaṅgai.

If we carefully study the constitution of Dayāmukhamaṅgalam as detailed in the Tanḍantōṭṭam plates of Nandivarman Pallavamalla³ of the 8th century A.D. and compare it with what is said about the constitution of the villages as described in the mediæval Pāṇḍya inscriptions cited above, we can clearly see that the principles followed were the same both in the 7th and 13th centuries A.D.

i. The newly constituted village was, in each case, divided into a number of shares, the number being some more than the number of donees intended to be provided for. In the Tiruppūvaṇam plates, the principal donees numbered 1,080 and the shares made were 1,200. In the grant of Ravivarman-chaturvēdimāṅgalam, the principal donees numbered 48 while the actual number of shares made were 65. In the case of Vikramapāṇḍya-chaturvēdimāṅgalam, the principal donees numbered 108 and the actual number of shares made were 147. In the earlier Tanḍantōṭṭam plates it was intended to provide chiefly for 308 persons but extra shares are actually mentioned.

ii. The donees in all the grants of Chaturvēdimāṅgalams (or simply Maṅgalams in the earlier grants) were Brāhmins well versed in the Vēdas and Sāstras. While some of the mediæval Pāṇḍya records speak of the donees as Vēdamum Sāstramum pōy vyākhyātāḷkaḷāy irukkum, others add the word poruṭpaḍa before pōy. In place of this description, we have in the earlier Tanḍantōṭṭam plates: Vēda-traya-smṛiti-jushām vidushām dvijūnām.⁴ In the list of donees, we notice there were more persons styled Chaturvēḍi than Trivēḍi or Shaḍaṅgavid.

iii. All the records state that the villages had temples in them, or contemplate the construction of temples in them, meant for the use of the donees and make provision for them.

iv. In the Tiruppūvaṇam plates, the extra shares, numbering 120, are stated to be for dēva-dāna-panīsey-virutti-paṅgu. Here dēvadāna may either be taken independently or as qualifying the next panīsey. The phrase may be construed in two ways, viz., (i) 'shares meant for the dēvadāna and shares for the maintenance of those who had to render service or (ii) shares for the maintenance of those that had to render service pertaining to the dēvadāna'. The former meaning is obtained by taking dēvadāna and panīsey-virutti as separately qualifying paṅgu, and the latter is obtained by considering dēvadāna as qualifying panīsey-virutti which qualifies paṅgu. As it is seen from the other records cited above that the extra 'shares' were meant both for the temple and for the various kinds of servants, we think it better to adopt the former view. The grant of Ravivarman-chaturvēdimāṅgalam provides 12 shares for 12 Bhaṭṭas who had to recite the Vēdas in the temple of Uḍaiyār Tirunelvēli-uḍaiyār and two shares each for the temples of Śrī-Rāma-Viṇṇagar-Ālvār and Paṇḍimādēvīśvaramuḍaiyār and one share for Toṇḍaimān-Viṇṇagar-Ālvār. The earlier Dayā mukhamaṅgalam grant provides five shares for Tiruvaḍigal, i.e., Viṣṇu, and two shares for Mahādēva.

v. The grant of Vikramapāṇḍya-chaturvēdimāṅgalam provides three ṛittis for the teachers of the Vēdas, one for the teachers of the Sūtras, one and three-fourths for two doctors, half for ambāḍiyas, half for village accountants, one-fourth each for drummer, potter, blacksmith, goldsmith and washerman, half for carpenter, three-eighths each for irāṅkolli and barber, three-fourths for village watchman and one-eighth for veṭṭiyāṇ. The earlier Tanḍantōṭṭam plates provide one share each for the reader of the Mahābhārata and the drummer, one share for each of the three madhyasthas, two shares for a doctor, three shares for the maintenance of the head-sludge and the village reservoir, besides some shares allotted to a number of persons who appear to be servants and performers of worship in temples.

vi. Other ṛittis such as those for doctors, watchmen (or police), library, etc., provided for in the constitution are of wider interest meeting as they do the requirements of health, education, police, etc.

To an earlier date belong the Kūram plates of the Pallava king Paramēśvaravarman I. The village of Kūram in the Chingalpet District bore the surname Vidyāvinīta-chaturvēdimāṅgalam¹ evidently so named after the donor Vidyāvinīta, a Pallava chief and subordinate of Paramēśvaravarman I. The same chief built the Śiva temple of Vidyāvinīta-Pallava-Paramēśvara in the centre of the village of Kūram and requested the king to make a grant to it. In compliance with this request, Paramēśvara I made the gift of the village of Paramēśvaramāṅgalam divided into 25 shares of which 20 shares were given to 20 Brāhmaṇas versed in the four Vēdas, 3 shares to two persons who had to perform the divine rights and look after the temple repairs, one share was set apart for supplying fire and water to a maṇḍapa and one share for the reading of the Bhārata in that maṇḍapa.² Though the grant relating to the constitution and gift of the village of Vidyāvinīta-chaturvēdimāṅgalam has not come down to us, yet a reference found in the Paramēśvaramāṅgalam grant, which was issued in the reign of the same king, i.e., Paramēśvaravarman I, indicates that it was bestowed on 108 families of Brāhmaṇas that were studying the four Vēdas.³ The Udayēndiram plates of Nandivarman register the grant of the village of Udayachandramāṅgalam to 108 Brāhmaṇas: In it provision is made for a physician and for one that had to perform worship (in temple).⁴

The foundation of the numerous Chaturvēdimāṅgalams and the grant of them as brahma-dēyas, or agrahūras by successive generations of kings of various dynasties that held sway in South India, as evidenced by the names of villages noticed above, though the grants relating to them have not yet come to light, are sure indications of the progress of the Vedic culture and testify to the increase in the numerical strength of the Vedic exegetes from the end of the sixth century to the end of the thirteenth,—the three Pāṇḍya grants of the reign of Jaṭavarman Kulasekhara I (A.D. 1190-1215), Maṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya II (A.D. 1235-1251) and Jaṭavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I (A.D. 1251-1271) taking us almost to the time of the advent of Śāyaṇāchārya, the prodigious commentator on all the Vēdas, and reflect on the mass of material that must have been available in his day and the number of scholars that must have existed then.

⁴ S. I. I., Vol. II, pp. 372-3.

Besides the grant of brahmadēya villages of the description given above, the kings and chiefs also provided richly for colleges wherein the Vēdas were taught.¹ Rural administrative assemblies and even private individuals were not wanting in making contributions, according to their might, to the cause of Vedic learning.² The charities of the Vaiśya Dāmaṇṇ Mādhavaṇ recorded in the Tirumukkūḍal inscription of Virarājendra included provision for the teaching of the Vēdas. One of the early epigraphs of Uttaramallūr,³ which is partially built in, makes provision for a Bhaṭṭa-vṛtti by a lady named Saṅgaichehāni also called Uttaramallūr-Naṅgai, stipulating that the holder of the vṛtti must be one that has no share in the village but is well versed in at least one of the Vēdas, in the Vyākaraṇa and the two darśanas of the Mīmāṃsā as well as the Nṛtta (Nirukta)-bhāṣya and is capable of expounding the Vyākaraṇa, Nyāya-bhāṣya with vārtikas, and Vaiśeṣika with Tīkā, and that he must remain in the maṭha erected by that lady on the bank of a tank which she had caused to be dug. The inscription also speaks of an examination to be held at the end of a course of three years. There is thus room for thinking that all through the Hindu period of Indian history, the study of the Vēdas and Vēdāṅgas and their exposition must have been pursued zealously.

We have now to consider how many of the mediæval Pāṇḍya kings bore the name Jaṭāvarman Kuḷaśekhara and settle also which one among them is the king represented in the larger Tirup-pūvaṇam plates. During the past several years, a large number of inscriptions belonging to this period have been collected and noticed in the Annual Reports on South-Indian Epigraphy. None of them gives any genealogy: most of them give only the regnal years and not the corresponding years of any known era. It is mainly due to the efforts of the late Professor Kielhorn, Swamikannu Pillai and Sewell in verifying the astronomical details found in some of them that epigraphists have been able to register the important facts and events revealed in inscriptions about these kings in some chronological order.⁴ The fact that several members of the family had been ruling at one and the same time and over the same tract, besides swelling the number of kings that could possibly cover a given period of years, has made it difficult to attribute particular achievements to particular kings. If we leave out the mere texts of some of the inscriptions of these mediæval Pāṇḍya kings published in the volumes of the South-Indian Inscriptions (Texts), the records of almost all of them remain still to be critically edited. The notices made in the Annual Reports on the Madras collections are our only guide. But these reports, however valuable they are, cannot be substitutes for full texts of inscriptions, as they could not furnish all the information the inscriptions contain.⁵ At present, two kings of the name Jaṭāvarman Kuḷaśekhara are taken cognisance of and they are assigned the accession dates A.D. 1190 and A.D. 1237. To the first king of that name all records commencing with the introductions Pūvīṅkilatti, Pūṭalamaḍandai and Pūṭalavanitai are being assigned. The second rests purely on the results of the astronomical calculations. The reasons for the assignment of the three different introductions to Jaṭāvarman Kuḷaśekhara I are not known. We need not concern ourselves with ascertaining as to when this idea started and why all the three introductions were ¹ See above, Vol. XXI, pp. 222-3. The Bāhūr plates (S. I. I., Vol. II, pp. 513ff.) provide for a Vidyāsthāna. See also An. Rep. on Epigraphy, Madras, for 1918, part II, pp. 145 ff.

² See Nos. 312 and 316 of S. I. I., Vol. VI.

³ Ibid., No. 322.

⁵ For instance it is beyond the scope of the reports to give the names with other details of the numerous officials and chiefs figuring in the inscriptions and it is needless to say how such information would be of immense help in the critical publication of any single inscription of a particular king. The geographical items occurring in inscriptions are also too numerous to mention in such a publication.

attributed to the same sovereign. It is proposed first to examine the correctness or otherwise of such an assignment. For this purpose, it is highly necessary to have separate lists of inscriptions of the three different introductions, and we present underneath such lists. They are not exhaustive but are sufficient to serve our need. If the result of our examination prove that the introductions belong to more kings than one, a fresh endeavour will have to be made to separate the facts known about each king from the Annual Reports on South Indian Epigraphy which have been putting them under the single head of Jaṭavarman Kulasēkhara I.

683/16	13th year+2,312 days.

By a glance at list A, it will be observed that six of the inscriptions, which are dated after the 4th year and perhaps also another, single out the 4th year of reign and count fresh regnal years or days from that date. And in going through list B, it will be seen that the year 3 is singled out in almost all the inscriptions. Similarly a glance at the dates of the inscriptions in list C will show that the years 3, 9 and 13 are marked years. In the last list, all the inscriptions after the 3rd year up to the 9th year are marked as 3 plus, those after the 9th up to the 13th year are marked 9 plus, and the rest dated later than the 13th are marked as 13 plus. The special treatment, which these years get in the respective introductions, seems strongly to point out that the kings represented in them might be different. Secondly, there is not much in common in the three introductions. In fact, nothing of importance is recorded in any of them. It is further worthy of note that the latest regnal years in the three introductions are different. The first, i.e., Pūlala-maḍandai extends to 15 years, the second, i.e., Pūtalavaṇṭai to 11 years, and the third, i.e., Pūvīṇṭai to 28 years. Again, these lists show that there is no room for considering that a single king employed one of the introductions up to a certain year of his reign, then adopted the second and lastly the third. Neither could it be said that in a particular locality preference was given to one or the other of the introductions, for we find that in the same place more than one of the introductions are used. All the reasons recorded above indicate clearly that the kings who used them must be different. Can palaeography be adduced as a ground for ascribing the three introductions to one sovereign? That ground is of little value in a case where there were more kings than one ruling at the same time and over the same tract: and after all it can at best show only a period of time and no fixed years. As far as I am able to judge, there is a gradual development in characters from the inscriptions with Pūtalamaḍandai introduction through Pūvīṇṭai to Pūtalavaṇṭai. The difference between the first and the last only is somewhat marked, but may be due to the skill of the scribes or other causes.

We shall now see whether the evidence of the astronomical details furnished in the above collection and their verification support or controvert the finding we have arrived at above or remain neutral. In the collection of 16 epigraphs with Pūtalamaḍandai introduction there is but a single one that supplies us with details of date fit for calculation, while there are at least three in the Pūtalavaṇṭai group and 6 in the Pūvīṇṭai epigraphs. All of them except one of the Pūtalavaṇṭai group have been examined and their equivalents determined as noted under:—

No. 297/27-28 Pūtalamaḍandai. 9th year, Mīna, dvitīyā, Saturday, Rōhiṇī. This date was calculated for Jaṭavarman I of Pūvīṇṭai introduction with A.D. 1190 as the date of accession and equated to A.D. 1199, February, 27, Saturday, with the remark that Rōhiṇī was not current on the day. The date is irregular.

No. 370/16 Pūtalavaṇṭai. 3+7th year, Mārgaḷi 20 tēdi, Sunday, saptaṁī, Uttara-Bhādrapadā. 7th Year is given in the inscription as 2,690 days. This date correctly works out to Sunday, 16th December, A.D. 1246 and it was 20 Mārgaḷi. The note of the late Mr. Swamikannu Pillai against this is "The Epigraphist says that the introduction is that of Jaṭavarman Kulaśekhara I, but the day of solar month which is a characteristic indication points only to the later reign, that of Jaṭavarman Kulaśekhara II of A. D. 1237".

No. 720/16 Pūtalavaṇṭai. 2nd year, Mīna 22, śu. 10, Wednesday, Pushya. "On Wednesday, 16th March A.D. 1239 (=22 Mēsha), śu. daśamī ended at .53 and Pushya at .19 of day. This was the 2nd year of the same Jaṭavarman Kulaśekhara as the above."

No. 301 of S. I. I., Vol. V (Pūtalavaṇṭai)—2nd year, Tulā, ba. 6, Thursday, Mṛigaśīrṣhā. Not calculated. See below, p. 82 for equivalent.

No. 80/28-29. Pūvīṇṭai. 13th year, Āṇi 19, śu. trayōdaśī, Tuesday, Mūlam. "Probably A.D. 1250, June 14, Tuesday; f.d.n. .39. The tithi was, however, chaturdaśī which was current till .85 of the day."

No. 337/16. Do. 3+4th year, Karkaṭaka, 13 tēdi, śu. 12, Monday, Jyēsthā=A.D. 1196 (which was the 7th year of the reign of Jaṭavarman Kulaśekhara who ascended the throne in A.D. 1190), Monday, 8th July (=13 Karkaṭaka) on which day śu. 12 ended at .89 and Nakshatra Jyēsthā at .44 of day.

No. 545/22. Do. 13+5th year, Kanni 9, śu. 14, Thursday, Śatabhishaj =A.D. 1207, September 6, Thursday; .97; .44.

No. 313/23. Pūvīṇṭai. 9+3rd year, Vṛiśhika 27, Friday, dvādaśī, Śōdi=Friday, 23rd November, A.D. 1201. As pointed out by Swamikannu Pillai (An. Rep. on S. I. Epigraphy for 1924, p. 88), the solar month-date is Vṛiśhika 27 according to the Sūrya-Siddhānta. The framer of the inscription must have obtained it from a Pañchāṅga calculated according to that system. There are instances of this kind.

No. 322/23. Pūvīṅkilatti. 13+13th year, Karkāṭaka 25, ba. 10, Tuesday, Kārttigai=A.D. 1215, July 21, Tuesday. The tithi ba. 10 commenced at .97 of the day and the Nakshatra Kārttigai ended at .86 of day.

The Large Tiruppūvaṇam plates. Pūvīṅkilatti. 13+12th year, Dhanuṣ 4, ba. 11, Saturday, Svāti. Saturday, 29th November, A.D. 1214. (Kielhorn's Southern List, No. 890.)

In the above, it will be noted (i) that the particulars of date furnished in the Pūṭalamaṇḍai collection do not work out correctly for Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara I whose reign commenced in A.D. 1190, (ii) that the two dated inscriptions of Pūṭalavaṇitai group examined so far work out correctly for Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara II who began his reign in A.D. 1237, and are incorrect for Kulaśekhara I whose accession fell in A.D. 1190, and (iii) that all the dated inscriptions in the Pūvīṅkilatti group have correct equivalents for the king with the initial year 1190. Apparently under the belief that the three different introductions belonged to one king, i.e., Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara I, the Epigraphist informed the calculator that the introduction of No. 370 (Pūṭalavaṇitai) is that of Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara I. Having considered this information also, the late Swamikannu Pillai noted that the day of the solar month—which is a characteristic indication—points only to the later reign, i.e., Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara II of A.D. 1237. Thus, the evidence of the astronomical details leaves no doubt as to the introduction Pūṭalavaṇitai being one of Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara II, and is positively against the earlier king whose accession fell in A.D. 1190 and who had the introduction Pūvīṅkilatti. The late Swamikannu Pillai's calculations and our finding that the records of Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara with the introduction Pūṭalavaṇitai belong to a later reign is still further supported by two other inscriptions as we shall presently show. In the latter part of a Pūṭalavaṇitai record of Tenkarai whose text is given in the South-Indian Inscriptions, Volume V, No. 301, are given the details 2nd year, Tula, ba. 6, Thursday, Mṛigaśīrṣhā. For Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara I, whose accession took place between 8th April and 29th November, A.D. 1190, we cannot find a suitable date answering to these details in A.D. 1191 or 1192 which were respectively the current and expired 2nd year of his reign. But for Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara II, whose reign commenced between 24th July and 16th December, A.D. 1237, and whose 2nd year fell in A.D. 1238, the details work out correctly. In A.D. 1238, Tula, ba. 6 ended at .90 and Nakshatra Mṛigaśīrṣhā at .35 of day on Thursday, September 30. Like the two records calculated by Swamikannu Pillai, this one also proves that the introduction Pūṭalavaṇitai belongs to Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara II and not to the first of that name. The other inscription which supports our finding is part of a triple record with Pūṭalavaṇitai introduction and is dated in the 3+7th year of reign and mentions Vikrama-Chōla.¹ Vikrama-Chōla figuring herein could be no other than the Koṅgu Chōla prince, who, a few years later, ascended the throne in A.D. 1255. That princes of other dynasties who were related to the Pāṇdyas were staying with and serving the Pāṇdyas before the time of their own accession is amply borne out by some of the inscriptions noticed in this paper.

It remains now to determine to which other Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara the introduction Pūṭalamaṇḍai belonged. An inscription from Tirupputtūr in the Ramnad District of Tribhuvanaśakravartin Kulaśekharadeva without the title Mājavarman or Jaṭāvarman, is dated in the year opposite the fourth and furnishes astronomical details—Karkāṭaka 27, Rōhiṇi, Saturday. This date was calculated by the late Swamikannu Pillai and found to agree correctly with A.D. 1166, 23rd July, Saturday.² From the method of dating of the record alone, it may be said that it is one belonging to the reign of Jaṭāvarman Kulaśekhara with Pūṭalamaṇḍai introduction for, as had been observed by me already, the inscriptions of his reign had that characteristic feature, viz., of counting fresh regnal years after the 4th. Thus, it is now clear that the three different introductions belong to three different kings who bore in common the title Jaṭavarman and the name Kulaśekhara. The earliest of these kings was the one that had the Pūṭalamaḍandai introduction, the middle one adopted the Pūvīṅkiḷatti introduction, while the last used the Pūṭalaravṇitai introduction. The first counted his regnal years from A.D. 1162 and had a reign of at least 15 years as at present known extending up to A.D. 1176-77, a special event in his career marking out the end of the fourth year of his reign (=A.D. 1166-7). This year the students of Pāṇḍya history know to be the year of commencement of the civil war in the Pāṇḍya country. There is thus no doubt that this must have been the Kulaśekhara who killed Parākrama-Pāṇḍya and waged a prolonged war against his son Vira-Pāṇḍya and the allied forces of the Sinhalese generals sent by Parākrama-Bāhu of Ceylon. The importance of the year is brought out by the fact that the members of the assembly (Mūlapariśad) of Tirupputtūr in the Ramnad District wished to pay their respects to His Majesty the Pāṇḍya sovereign and utilised the amount realised in making tax-free, a land given to the temple in order to meet the expenses of their journey to Madura, the capital of the empire.¹ It is not unlikely that other villages also sent in their representatives to the capital for the same purpose. Perhaps it was then that Kulaśekhara launched on the momentous programme of war against Parākrama, laid siege to the city of Madura with a view to capture it, and forced Parākrama to sue for help to the king of Ceylon. We learn from the Mahāvamsa that the first event in this war was the siege of Madura by Kulaśekhara-Pāṇḍya. There is an echo of the fact in a lithic record of the South Koṅgu king Rājakesarivarman Kulōttuṅga (A.D. 1149-83) who, it may be said, was interested in the welfare and success of Kulaśekhara, that young king being his sister's son. This lithic record which comes from Neruvūr² states that the Koṅgu king, set out on an expedition against Madura with the express object of capturing it for his nephew (marumagan) Kulaśekhara-Pāṇḍya, and that on the said occasion directed the sabhā of the place to make a brahmadēya gift of some lands in Maṇimaṅgalam, which had been his camping ground, as a yātrādāna to his purōhita Ālvār Śrībalidēva. The year of this important record is specially worthy of note. It is dated in the 17th year of the reign of Rājakesarivarman Kulōttuṅgaḍēva corresponding to A.D. 1166-7, the very year of commencement of the Pāṇḍyan civil war and one that was marked 4+1st year of the reign of Kulaśekhara. Thus, the evidence of all sources, viz., those furnished by the Mahāvamsa, the Neruvūr and Tirupputtūr inscriptions and the computation of astronomical details with the solar day, which the calculator regards as a characteristic indication, occurring in an epigraph dated in the 4+1st year, which kind of dating, we note, is a characteristic feature of the inscriptions with Pūṭalamaḍandai introduction, bear out the particular importance of that year and single out the Kulaśekhara of the Pāṇḍyan civil war. If more evidence is needed to further corroborate the identity of Jaṭavarman Kulaśekhara of Pūṭalamaḍandai introduction with Kulaśekhara of the civil war, it is supplied by a Tenkarai inscription with that identical introduction, dated in the 3rd year of reign, telling us that the chief Śōḷap Śilambaṇ alias Virachōḷa-Laṅkēśvaraḍēva, a sāmanta of prince (Perumāḷ) Virachōḷaḍēva of Teṇ-Koṅgu was already in the vicinity of Madura.³ Koṅgu-Chōḷa inscriptions leave no doubt as to Virachōḷa being a prince of that dynasty that eventually succeeded Rājakesarivarman Kulōttuṅga noticed above. And the year of the inscription, which is A.D. 1164, shows that the chief was there immediately prior to the commencement of the war and the purpose is evident: and the Neruvūr inscription explains it by telling us as to what followed. It speaks of the premeditated action of Kulaśekhara.

Before proceeding further, it may be advantageous to consider here the relationship of some of the mediaeval Pāṇḍya kings found in inscriptions. Tamil epigraphs, when they intend to convey definite relationship, use appropriate and unambiguous terms to denote them. We meet with terms like *tiruttagappanār*¹ or *ayyar*² for father, *aṇṇāl*³ or *aṇṇar*⁴ for elder brother, *akkaṇ*⁵ for elder sister, *dēriyāṇ*⁶ for queen, *maṇṇār*⁷ or *piḷḷaiyār*⁸ for son, maḷalār or *peṇ-piḷḷai*⁹ for daughter, *marumagaṇār*¹⁰ for nephew or sister's son, *maittuṇṇār*¹¹ for brother-in-law, *ammūṇ*¹² for uncle, *ap-pāḷḷar*¹³ for great grandfather, etc. To denote simply a predecessor, be he distant or near, or any elder or senior member, deceased or living, the terms periyavar, periyadēvar or periyāṇṇayāṇār are employed. In dealing with the Tinnevely inscription of Māṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya II, I pointed out, by two telling instances, that periyadēvar or periyāṇṇayāṇār cannot definitely indicate a father.¹⁴ One of the inscriptions found at Puravari near Nagareoil, dated in the 16th year of the reign of the Pāṇḍya Māṇavarman Śrīvallabhadēva speaks of a son of the king by name Kulaśēkharadēva¹⁵ and another inscription found at Kōṭṭaikkaruṅḷam in the Tinnevely District, dated in the 2nd year and 600th day of the same king's reign, states that the Virēśvaramuḍaiyār was re-named Kulaśēkhara-Īśvaramuḍaiyār after the name of the king's father, thus letting us know that Māṇavarman Śrīvallabha's father was also called Kulaśēkhara.¹⁶ Here, therefore, there are two Kulaśēkharas, one being the grandfather of the other. Both of them may be tentatively assumed to have borne the title Jaṭāvarman from the fact that the middle member Śrīvallabha was styled Māṇavarman. One other fact that is known is that Māṇavarman Śrīvallabha flourished about the middle of the 12th century A.D. being a contemporary of Viraraviṇṇavarman-Tiruvāḍi, in all probability a ruler of Vēṇāḍu, for whom a date Kollam 336 (A.D. 1161) has been discovered.¹⁷ There is thus every possibility of Māṇavarman Śrīvallabha's son being that Kulaśēkhara in whose reign, in about A.D. 1166-7, the civil war in the Pāṇḍya country commenced. As we have already shown that the war must have been started in the reign of Jaṭāvarman Kulaśēkhara who had the introduction Pūṭalamaḍandai, our assumption that Māṇavarman Śrīvallabha's son Kulaśēkhara might be a Jaṭāvarman becomes strengthened and his ancestry also settled. With this information before us, we cannot but assign the Kallaḍakurieli inscription,¹⁸ dated in the 2nd year of the reign of Jaṭāvarman Tribhuvaneśhvaravartīn Kulaśēkharadēva, which mentions periyāṇṇayāṇār Śrīvallabhadēva, to Jaṭāvarman Kulaśēkharadēva with Pūṭalamaḍandai introduction, and regard the Śrīvallabha referred to therein as being identical with Māṇavarman Śrīvallabha of A.D. 1161, the father and predecessor of king Jaṭāvarman Kulaśēkhara with Pūṭalamaḍandai introduction.

With the materials available to us from inscriptions and other sources we have shown the significance of the end of the 4th year of the reign of Jaṭāvarman Kulaśēkhara that started the civil war and noted that it marks the day of triumph of Kulaśēkhara over his adversary Parākrama-Pāṇḍya, who, it is said, had been put to death even before the arrival of the forces from Ceylon.

The year under consideration is thus the last year of the reign of Parākrama-Pāṇḍya. While Kulaśekhara is represented by inscriptions, there is every reason to expect the records of his adversary also. And I think there could not be any possible objection to say that the ill-fated Parākrama-Pāṇḍya is the Māravarman Parākrama-Pāṇḍya with the introduction Tirumagaḷ-puṇara. In this connection, it may be noted that no other Parākrama-Pāṇḍya with a different introduction assignable to this period has at all come to light. So far as is known at present, his reign extends to 12 years, and if the year A.D. 1166 marks the end of his rule, his accession must be placed in A.D. 1154. The late Rao Bahadur Krishna Sastri expressed the view that Māravarman Parākrama-Pāṇḍya must have been a predecessor of or co-regent with either of the two Śrīvallabhas, and, judging from the position which the introduction of Māravarman Śrīvallabha occupied in a record belonging to the time of Māravarman Parākrama-Pāṇḍya found at Kuruvitturai,¹ he said it was evident that the latter was a predecessor of the former.² The conclusion we have arrived at above, viz., that Māravarman Parākrama-Pāṇḍya reigned from A.D. 1154 to 1166 well establishes this inference. The Mahāvamsa tells us that Parākrama had a son named Vira-Pāṇḍya who was set up on the Pāṇḍya throne by the Sinhalese generals according to the instructions given to them by their king Parākrama-Bāhu. Inscriptions of the reign of Kulōttuṅga III refer to an unnamed son of this Vira-Pāṇḍya and say that he fought along with his father against the Chōḷas and shared his defeat more than once. It is a question if the setting up of Vira-Pāṇḍya on the Pāṇḍya throne by the Sinhalese generals could be taken seriously, and whether it was at all recognised by the people, even if it were a fact. For all that we see Vira-Pāṇḍya had not the usual coronation ceremony. Neither are there any inscriptions attributable to his reign. From the moment of his father's death he had been contesting with Kulaśekhara for kingdom and crown. And so long as the reign of Kulaśekhara lasted, Vira-Pāṇḍya's rule may be said not to have commenced. Since we know from the records with the introduction Pūtala-maṇḍana that Kulaśekhara held the reins of government till at least A.D. 1176, it may be said that Vira-Pāṇḍya commenced his rule in this year. To this end, the information furnished in two inscriptions of Rājādhirāja II, both dated in the 12th year and 157th day, i.e., the 13th year also leads us. The records under reference come from Tiruvālaṅgāḍu in the North Arcot District and Tirumayānam in the Pudukkōṭṭai State and are almost exact copies. Though the latter record is fragmentary, Mr. Venkatasubba Aiyar has, by carefully comparing it with the damaged portions of the former inscription, been able to fill in certain lacunae in it. He tells us that the Pāṇḍya king Kulaśekhara, ignoring the good deeds done to him, proved a traitor, made an alliance with the king of Iḷam and conspired with him against the Chōḷas. And some letters and presents despatched to the officers of Kulaśekhara, hinting that the Sinhalese king was an ally of their master, were intercepted by the Chōḷa king who directed the chief Pallavarāyan to re-instate on the Pāṇḍya throne Vira-Pāṇḍya, the son of Parākrama-Pāṇḍya, the former protégé of Ceylon.³ Vira-Pāṇḍya's reign which thus commenced in and synchronised with the fall of Kulaśekhara in A.D. 1176, did not last long, for we know from the Tirukkolāmbūdūr inscription that by A.D. 1182 he drove Māravarman Vikrama-Pāṇḍya to the necessity of suing for help to the Chōḷa king Kulōttuṅga and this cost him his own crown and kingdom.⁴ We have no direct information as to who this Māravarman Vikrama-Pāṇḍya was, but, as had been assumed, he might be the son of Kulaśekhara.

We now pass on to notice another clear relationship mentioned in the inscriptions of the mediaeval Pāṇḍya kings. Numerous epigraphs of Jātavarman Śrīvallabha with the introduction

Tirumaṇḍaiyūm are registered in the Annual Reports on South Indian Epigraphy. Four of these mention Sundara-Pāṇḍya as the king's son, and the fifth states that a royal order was issued by Sundara-Pāṇḍya without specifying his relationship to the king.¹ They are dated in the 4th, 17th and 19th years, the last being of the 9th year of reign. Knowing the fact that Jaṭavarman Śrīvallabha had a son named Sundara-Pāṇḍya, there is a possibility of taking Māravarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I, in whose 9th year record, a copy of a grant made in the 3rd year of the reign of Jaṭavarman Śrīvallabha is registered,² to be this prince. If this were the case, Jaṭavarman Śrīvallabha would have to be assigned to the period A.D. 1193 to 1216, as the highest regnal year furnished for him in inscriptions is 23.³ This is very unlikely to judge from the contents of some of the inscriptions of Jaṭavarman Śrīvallabha. That he was not far removed from the time of the Chōḷa king Kulōttuṅga I can be inferred from the fact that a chief of Adaḷaiyūr-nāḍu⁴ by name Mummudiśōḷan Virasēkharar figures both in a 4th year inscription of his and in a 49th year record of Kulōttuṅga.⁵ That he must have been quite near in point of time to Māravarman Parākrama-Pāṇḍya is made evident from the fact that a certain chief named Śēramān Tōḷaṇ figures in the epigraphs of both these sovereigns. It is said that at the instance of this chief Parākrama-Pāṇḍya made a gift of the village of Seṅguḷam alias Viraiyaviṭṭanallūr to the Mūlasthāpam-uḍaiyār temple at Kaṭṭikkallūr : ⁶ and he figures as a signatory in a grant of Jaṭavarman Śrīvallabha.⁷ It is further worthy of note that a grant made by the same chief is mentioned as a past transaction in a record of the 9th year of Jaṭavarman Kulaśēkhara with Pūṭalamaṇḍai introduction. Thus, Jaṭavarman Śrīvallabha appears to have ruled not long after Kulōttuṅga I, and immediately following Māravarman Parākrama, either as co-regent with or slightly before Kulaśēkhara of the civil war. Further, it is found that the chief Kālīṅgarāyan was one of his principal advisers as well as of Jaṭavarman Kulaśēkhara I (Pūviṇkilatti).

From what we have discussed above it will be clear that there were the following lines of Pāṇḍya kings in the mediaeval period :—

- (i) the line of Māravarman Śrīvallabha headed by Kulaśēkhara-Pāṇḍya. To it belonged Jaṭavarman Kulaśēkhara whose inscriptions have the Pūṭalamaṇḍai introduction, the king that was principally concerned in the civil war. His accession took place in A.D. 1162. On his side were the kings of the two Koṅḡus and the Chōḷas. Māravarman Vikrama-Pāṇḍya was probably his son and successor. The termination of Kulaśēkhara's rule was brought about by the Chōḷa Rājādhirāja II in A.D. 1176, on his proving a traitor to the cause of his benefactor ; and in the short period from this date and A.D. 1183, the date of accession of Māravarman Vikrama-Pāṇḍya, Virapāṇḍya, the son of Parākrama-Pāṇḍya, ruled.

- (ii) The line of Parākrama-Pāṇḍya which counted himself, his son Vira-Pāṇḍya and the latter's son whose name is not revealed in Chōḷa inscriptions. There are strong grounds for supposing that this unnamed son must be Māravarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I.

The attitude of this king, even at the very first year of his accession to throne, not only towards the Chōlas but also towards the kings of the two Koṅgu countries, who had all along been the allies of Kulaśekhara and Vikrama and formed formidable obstacles in the way of Vira-Pāṇḍya and his supporters, presupposes a chapter of enmity between them; and his deeds are a rehearsal in the reverse order of what had passed in the past. He kept both the kings of Koṅgu in prison and in chains and led them on to his capital to do honour to his triumphant return to the city. The humiliation which he caused to the Chōlas was no less.

- (iii) In the line of Jaṭavarman Śrīvallabha, there was his son Sundara-Pāṇḍya who was old enough to be associated with him in the government of the country. This prince perhaps never succeeded to the throne, and if he did, he must have had a very brief reign in which he did not leave any inscriptions. Who his successor was, it is not possible to determine at present. But it appears certain that there was another Jaṭavarman Śrīvallabha.

We cannot be sure if Jaṭavarman Kulaśekhara with Pūiṅkilatti introduction belonged to any one of the three lines noticed above or came of a different line. In dealing with the Tinnevely inscription of Māvarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya II,¹ I pointed out that it is not absolutely certain that Jaṭavarman Kulaśekhara I and Māvarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I had a common father in Māvarman Vikrama-Pāṇḍya.

The simultaneous existence of more than one king reigning over the Pāṇḍya country leads us to think that one among them must have held the chief power and that the rest were subordinate to him, though independent in their own spheres. What determined the claim for the prime position in the kingdom, we are yet to learn. All that we could gather from the account of the civil war is that there was some fixed principle followed in the choice of or claim for the position of honour. It has been shown above that when the civil war commenced, i.e., in A.D. 1167, Kulaśekhara, one of the claimants to the throne at Madura, had completed four years of his reign and Parākrama-Pāṇḍya, the other claimant, had reigned for 12 years. The Sinhalese chronicle and the Chōla and Koṅgu inscriptions lead us to think that the throne of the premier ruler at Madura fell vacant in A.D. 1167 and the succession to it was disputed by the rivals. For aught we see, most of the kings of the mainland supported the cause of Kulaśekhara while the other received succour from the neighbouring island. It still remains to be known who it was that ruled in Madura till A.D. 1167. If seniority among the rulers determined the succession to the throne, there could not have been rival claims. Though Parākrama had reigned for 12 years on the date in question, it was Kulaśekhara that was supported by most of the kings in the south. This suggests that the principle was different. Future researches alone can enlighten us on the issue.

Now about the length of the reign of Jaṭavarman Kulaśekhara I and about his successor. The highest regnal year² furnished for Jaṭavarman Kulaśekhara I in inscriptions is 30 which takes us to A.D. 1219-20. In about A.D. 1218-19, as will be shown presently, he seems to have fallen seriously ill and much concern was felt about his recovery. An inscription discovered at Kaṇṇanūr (in the Tirumeyyam Taluk of the Pudukkōṭṭai State) states that, on the representation of Piḷḷaiyār Aḷagapperumāḷ, king Māvarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I issued an order in the 3rd year of his reign reducing the royal share of taxes due from two villages in

Turumā-nāḍu in Kāṇa-nāḍu for the welfare and recovery from illness of Ulaguḍaiya-Nāyaṇār.¹ The question is who are meant by Aḷagapperumāḷ and Ulaguḍaiya-Nāyaṇār. At first sight it might appear that Aḷagapperumāḷ must have been the son of Māṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I and that by the term Ulaguḍaiya-Nāyaṇār, Māṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya himself must be meant. This is wrong. Since Aḷagapperumāḷ figures in the large Tiruppūvaṇam plates with the prefix Piḷḷaiyār, there is reason to take him to be the son of Jaṭavarman Kuḷaśēkhara I. He might have been continued to be called Piḷḷaiyār in later days also. In the plates, his high status is indicated by his having had under him an official bearing the designation 'adigāram.' As Jaṭavarman Kuḷaśēkhara I was living at the time of the Kannaṇūr inscription, we think the term Ulaguḍaiya-Nāyaṇār must refer to him and not to Māṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I. The concern of the prince about the father is natural. Another important fact that the inscription under reference reveals is that Māṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I, whose accession took place in A. D. 1216 and who appears to have been issuing records in his own name only from the 3rd year of his reign had been nominated already during the time of Kuḷaśēkhara I and he might be said to have had a share in the government of the country even before his nomination. As we have no inscription dated later than the 29th year for Jaṭavarman Kuḷaśēkhara I which, by the way, is the same as the third year of the reign of Māṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I, he must have succumbed to the disease referred to in the Kannaṇūr record. The Sanskrit verse at the beginning of the plates under publication tells us that the king was apprised of the fact of completion of the formation of the village of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam by Sundarēśa (Sundarēśād-avagata). From the facts just noticed, it seems likely that by Sundarēśa is meant here Māṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I. Sundara's war against Kuḷōttuṅga III must have been conducted under the standard of Jaṭavarman Kuḷaśēkhara I or at least it must have been countenanced by him. In this connection, it may be noted that some of the persons that held offices under Kuḷaśēkhara figure also in the records of Sundara. On the whole the reign of Jaṭavarman Kuḷaśēkhara I appears to have been a prosperous one, undisturbed by any wars except in the closing years. The king seems to have had good regard for Vedic learning and patronised the scholars proficient in it by founding big villages and granting them as brahmadēyas provided with all facilities for good living. Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam is one of the biggest villages that was ever founded. To some extent the peace in the reign of Jaṭavarman Kuḷaśēkhara I must be attributed to the decline of the Chōḷa power which may be said to have commenced in the last decade of the 12th century A. D. not long after the interference of Kuḷōttuṅga III in Pāṇḍyan affairs ending in the accession of Vikrama-Pāṇḍya Māṇavarman, when the Chōḷas lost their hold on Conjeeveram, the second great city of the empire. In the latter part of the reign of Kuḷōttuṅga III there were several factions in the Chōḷa country and though the heads of these factions recognised in a way the supreme authority of the Chōḷa emperor there is not much doubt that the peace of the country was greatly disturbed by the part played by the parties. The differences among them, which remained unremoved for a long time, contributed largely to the rapid weakening of the empire and gave the enemies of the Chōḷas, who had suffered seriously before, an opportunity to wreak their vengeance. The time was favourable for the Pāṇḍyas to muster their strength and resources to try final issues with the Chōḷas in order to wipe out their disgrace. Just three years before the end of the reign of Jaṭavarman Kulasekhara I, the Pāṇḍyas under the lead of Māvarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I, won laurels in the field against the Chōlas and the kings of the two Koṅgu countries, and this practically brought the civil war to a culmination.¹ That this war was directed against the Chōla and Koṅgu kings prevents any possibility of taking Jaṭavarman Kulasekhara I and Māvarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I to be the descendants of Kulasekhara of the civil war with Pūtalamaṇḍai introduction.

Now we come to the consideration of the geographical names. The inscription under edition mentions a good number of districts and sub-divisions. They are : (1) Miḷalai-kūrṇam, (2) Muttūrṇu-kūrṇam, (3) Kēraḷaśiṅga-vaḷanāḍu, (4) Madurōḍaya-vaḷanāḍu and (5) Śōḷapāṇḍiya-vaḷanāḍu among Districts ; and (6) Māḍakkulam, (7) Aḷaiyapāṇḍiyakkulam, (8) Rājaśiṅgaṅkulam, (9) Vaḍatalai-Śembi-nāḍu, (10) Poḷiyūr-nāḍu, (11) Karuṅguḍi-nāḍu, (12) Puṇapparaḷai-nāḍu, (13) Tiyaṇḍaikkūḍi-nāḍu, (14) Kīṭ-Śembi-nāḍu, (15) Paṇaṅgalūr-nāḍu, (16) Kāñai-Irukai, (17) Kīraṇūr-nāḍu, (18) Tiruvāvaṇam, (19) Mēṇkuḍi-nāḍu and (20) Kaḷavaḷi-nāḍu among sub-divisions. The villages under No. 1 are Parāntakanallūr and Taṇḍalai. No. 2 had Kappalūr, No. 3 Veḷiyāṇṇūr, No. 4 Madurai, No. 5 Śīṅu-Paśalai, No. 6 Madurai, No. 7 Māṇūr, Śīṅukulattūr, Veḷlūrkuṇuchchi and Veḷlūr, No. 8 Rājendiram and Tiruppūvaṇam, No. 9 Āyḱkuḍi, No. 10 Aruṅgulam and Poḷiyūr, No. 11 Kīḷ-Neṭtūr alias Kīrtiviśālaiyanallūr, No. 12 Puttūr, Kaḷḷikkūḍi and Miḷagaṇūr, No. 13 Kīṭ-Paśalai alias Dāṇaviṇḍanallūr, Mēṇ-Paśalai alias Śrīvalla-bha-chaturvēdimaṅgalam and Māṇavīramaṅgalam, No. 14 Mālaṅguḍi, No. 15 Adikarai, No. 16 Iruṇchiṇai and Mittiravēli, No. 17 Viḍattal alias Mānābharaṇa-chaturvēdimaṅgalam, Veḷlūr, Nakkamaṅgalam, Vāgaikuḍi, Tiruvāvaṇam, Tuttiyūr and Kiruṅgākkōṭṭai, No. 18 Marudūr and No. 19 Mēṇkuḍi and Aṇṇalvāy.

Of the Districts, Miḷalai-kūrṇam and Muttūrṇu-kūrṇam have a separate history which is worth noting and which, owing to the formation of modern districts, has been badly misconceived. As regards the position of these two ancient territorial divisions, whether they were in the Chōla country or not, we have to know the southern limit of the Chōla country which would determine at once the northern boundary of the Pāṇḍyan kingdom.² It is stated in the Tamil *Śōḷamaṇḍalaśatakam*³ that the boundaries of the Chōla country were the river Veḷlāru in the north and south, Kōṭṭaikkarai in the west and the sea in the east. A verse attributed to the Tamil poet Kambar calls the northern boundary Ēṇāṭṭu-Veḷlāru⁴ and thus distinguishes it from the other Veļļāru which formed the southern boundary of the country. Students unacquainted with the ancient Indian morality of warfare, which in most cases left the territories unaffected by the results of war, might think that the boundaries given above only represent what they were at the time when the author of the Śōlamayadalaśatakam and Kambar flourished, and as such, cannot be taken as true for earlier times. This notion is not correct. One can indeed see positive proof afforded by the statements of the two authorities, who were removed from each other in point of time and yet described in identical terms the boundaries, thus showing that the limits given were those in the past ages, not of their own. Annexation of territories did occur but they were rare. Whether rare or frequent, it must be further noted that such instances did not affect the geography of the place; and this will be made clear as we proceed. Another fact that is likely to mislead the student is the ancient practice of naming conquered territories after the names or surnames of the victor. It might be said that the fresh names given to places did not wipe out the older ones but were added on to them as later surnames to indicate, by the mere mention of the name with its surname, to whom or to which country the places originally belonged and who acquired it or re-named it in later times. Thus, in the double names such as Kōṅg-āṇa Viraśōla-maṇḍalam, Gaṅga-maṇḍalam-āṇa Nigariliśōla-maṇḍalam, Toṇḍai-nāḍ-āṇa Jayaṅgoṇḍaśōla-maṇḍalam, Rājarāja-Pāṇḍināḍu, etc., one is clearly enabled to know what the ancient name of the district or province was in spite of its passing into other hands in later days. Here it might be added that it is the original name that survives in each case at the present day and not the later ones. For example, though the Pallavas ceased to be a ruling power after the Chōla Āditya I conquered their country in the 9th century A.D. and Rājarāja I gave that country the new name Jayaṅgoṇḍaśōla-maṇḍalam, it is the ancient name Toṇḍai-nāḍu or Toṇḍai-maṇḍalam that persists. Similarly, in the case of the Pāṇḍya country, which was first conquered by Parāntaka I in the 10th century A.D. and was re-named Rājarāja-Pāṇḍināḍu in the 11th century, the name Pāṇḍi-nāḍu or Pāṇḍi-maṇḍalam exists even today. The conquerors themselves carefully minded preserving the original names. Thus in the stamp of double names impressed on the places in inscriptions, there is sure indication as to what ancient dominion the places at first belonged.

³ The verse runs as follows : it is given here for easy reference :—

Veļļāru being the southern limit of the ancient Chōla dominions, the territory lying to the south of it must have belonged to any other kingdom than Śōnāḍu or Śōla-maṇḍalam. That it was actually so is proved both by inscriptions and by the Tamil literature as will be seen in the sequel. Now we shall take up that portion of the Arantāṅgi Taluk which lies to the south of the Veļļāru river, and therefore clearly outside the Chōla dominion, and see to what country it belonged. Roughly, this tract is something like a triangle with one of its points turned southwards ending in Tiruppunavāśal and having its base in the north running from west to east along the course of the river Veļļāru as it flows into the sea just at the north of Maṇamēlkūḍi and east of Taṇḍalai. Out of this triangle, a portion on the north-western side falls in the Puḍukkōṭṭai State. It will be observed that the line $79^{\circ} 5'$ cuts this triangle almost into two halves, one in the east and the other in the west. The portion on the eastern side forms the seaboard and extends from the mouth of the Veļļāru in the north to the mouth of the Pāmbāru in the south. The western portion adjoins the Puḍukkōṭṭai State and the Rāmnāḍ and Śivaganga Zamindaries and in this region the river Pāmbāru is seen to mark the western boundary of a portion of the southern part of the modern Arantāṅgi Taluk. Almost the whole of this tract of land was included in Miḷalai-kūṛṅgam. This Miḷalai-kūṛṅgam is a natural division, an island formed by the rivers Veļļāru and Pāmbāru and the sea. Over it there reigned in early times a chieftain named Veḷ-Evvi, of ancient stock, and famous for the munificence of gifts which he made.¹ He was the immediate ancestor or a near relation of Vēl-Pāri who, like him, had earned a similar renown which made the Śaiva saint Sundaramūrti-Nāyanār celebrate him in one of the Tēvāram hymns.² Vēl-Evvi is said to have been defeated by the Pāṇḍya king Talaiyālaṅgānattu-śeruvēṇṇa-Neduñjeliyan.³ Vēl-Pāri's liberality was such that he is said to have presented away all the 300 villages over which he was lord.⁴ If there is truth in these statements, the family of Evvi and Pāri should have ceased to exist as a ruling power in or immediately after the time of the Pāṇḍya Neduñjeliyan and the tract of country formerly subject to them, of which the principal one was Milalai-kūrṇam, should have passed into the hands of the Pāṇḍyas and included in their dominion, i.e., Pāṇḍimaṇḍalam. It is quite in agreement with this that the inscriptions refer to Mīlalai-kūrṇam as a district of the Pāṇḍya country. This ancient district of Pāṇḍimaṇḍalam had three divisions named after the directions in which they lay, viz., Kīl-kūrṇu, the eastern division which adjoined the sea, Mēl-kūrṇu, the western division which included in it the villages adjoining the river Pāmbāru, and Naḍuvir-kūrṇu, which lay between these two. There are enough geographical references to the various divisions of this ancient district and the villages situated in them; but they lie scattered and unrecognised in the vast number of South Indian epigraphs. A mere collection of the references found in lithic records of past ages, arranged and classified under the three divisions named above, followed by the identification of the places mentioned therein and spotting them in a map is sure to remove much of our ignorance and misconception relating to this district and prove to be of value in locating easily fresh places that future discoveries might bring to light. The popular idea that all places included in the modern District of Tanjore must have belonged to the Chōlas or, in other words, that the Tanjore District represents the ancient Chōla dominion is wrong and must account for the misconception that Milalai-kūrṇam with its sister district of Muttūrṇu-kūrṇam should have been in the possession of the ancient Chōlas and included in their dominion. From what has been said above, it will be clear that excepting perhaps a small portion to the north of the Veḷḷāru river, the rest of the Arantangi Taluk lay outside the Chōla dominion and that this tract was first subject to the rule of Vēl-Evvi and subsequently passed into the hands of the Pāṇḍyas and was ever afterwards geographically included in Pāṇḍimaṇḍalam and formed a major portion of two of the divisions of the ancient district of Milalai-kūrṇam. The following is almost an exhaustive list of the villages in Mīlalai-kūrṇam found in the inscriptions of the South Indian epigraphical collection.⁵ They are noted under the respective divisions to which they belonged and in such an order as would admit of easy identification.

⁴ Puṇam 110. The relevant portion runs thus:—

Munnūr-ūrttē taṇ-Paṇambu-nan-pāḍu

In an inscription, Tiruvāḍavūr is said to have been situated in Ten-Paṇambu-nāḍu, a subdivision of Pāṇḍimaṇḍalam. (No. 423 of S. I. I., Vol. VIII.)

⁵ There is a valuable contribution in the Koṅṅumalar (Vol. IV, pp. 80f.) by Mr. K. S. Vaidyanathan on 'Vēl-Evvi and his country' where he has collected together most of the references to Milalai-kūrṇam and Muttūrṇu-kūrṇam found in inscriptions and Tamil classical works and has successfully established that these two Districts originally belonged only to Vēl-Evvi.

The villages are arranged from north to south in the above list to dispense with the necessity of a map.

If the southern portion of the modern Arantangi Taluk is divided into two halves by drawing a vertical line north-south one can find without any exception all the places of the Kīl-kūrru in the eastern half which adjoins the Bay of Bengal, and all the places of the Naḍuvir-kūrru on the western half, with the exception of Parāntakanallūr alias Kulōttuṅgaśōlanallūr. tioned place is now changed in name and is called Irumbānāḍu. It is in the Pudukkōṭṭai State and the inscriptions of the place show that it bore the name Parāntakanallūr. The places noted above under Mēl-kūrū, also called Vaḍa-Pāmbāru-nāḍu, do not fall in the Arantangi Taluk. Three of them, viz., Mālavarmāṇikkam, Śendamāṅalam and Eṇāṅgaḷūr are in the Pudukkōṭṭai State. The finding of so many of the villages of Mīlalai-kūrām in South Arantangi Taluk and the adjacent part of Pudukkōṭṭai State convincingly proves that this was the region subject to the rule of the Vēḷ chieftain Evvi in the first instance. That this Kūrām is invariably stated in inscriptions from the time of Parāntaka I, i.e., from the beginning of the tenth century¹ downwards as being situated in Pāṇḍimaṇḍalam shows that it was acquired by the Pāṇḍyas from Vēḷ-Evvi and included in that territory. It is particularly worthy of note that even though the Chōḷas obtained possession of the Pāṇḍya territory later in the days of Parāntaka I as is clearly indicated by the existence of the Chōḷa inscriptions, traces of the inclusion of the Kūrām originally in the Pāṇḍya country did not disappear but were on the other hand preserved and there is every reason to hold that the Vēḷ chieftain must have been subordinate to the Pāṇḍya king. Else the district would not have been termed as one in Pāṇḍimaṇḍalam. It would simply have been called Mīlalai-kūrām just like Urattūr-kūrām. All that the Chōḷa conquest meant was that the Chōḷa suzerainty was acknowledged by the Pāṇḍya king and his subjects. Some of the places of Mīlalai-kūrām have a history of their own which every student of Tamil literature must be aware of even though he may not know where the places themselves are. This history affords another strong proof that the region comprising the South-Arantangi Taluk was in early days included in the Pāṇḍya country. Maṇamēḷkuḍi is the place of nativity of Kulachchirai-Nāyanār, the prime-minister of the Pāṇḍya king Nēlvēḷi-pōr-venṇa-ninraśir-Neḍumārān (i. e., Neḍumārān who acquired lasting fame by the conquest in the battle of Nēlvēḷi), the king that was converted to the Śaiva faith by the efforts of Saint Jñānasambandha, the contemporary of Śiruttōṇḍa who was the general of the Pallava king that conquered Vātāpi which event we know as having taken place in the first half of the 7th century A.D. There is no room for thinking that the minister might have come from any other country than the Pāṇḍya. Speaking of him, Śēkkilār, the author of the Tamil Periyapurāṇam and the minister of the Chōḷa king of his day, distinctly states that Maṇamēḷkuḍi was in the Pāṇḍya country and the minister hailed from there.² Inscriptions testify to the correctness of his geographical description.³ Similarly, Āvuḍaiyārkkōyil is connected with the history of Māṇikkavāchaka, another Pāṇḍya minister.

Now about Muttūrū-kūrām, which like Mīlalai-kūrām was subject to the rule of the Vēḷ chief Evvi and was included in the Pāṇḍya country. The very fact that the two districts were subject to the sway of one ruler suggests at once that Muttūrū-kūrām must lie adjacent to Mīlalai-kūrām, which, as shown above, occupied South-Arantangi Taluk and parts of Pudukkōṭṭai State and Rāmnād District. In determining the region in which this district lay and for knowing to which kingdom it belonged in early days, nothing will be so valuable as a collection of the epigraphs which refer to this district and identifying the places mentioned therein. The inscriptions which mention Muttūrū-kūrām are not many, but even the few that we have, are sufficient for locating it, since we know that it was contiguous to Mīlalai-kūrām. The earliest inscription which mentions the district as being in the Pāṇḍya country is a record of the Chōla king Parāntaka I.¹ A few others call the province, in which Muttūrru-kūrām was situated, by the names Pāṇḍi-maṇḍalam² and Rājarāja-Pāṇḍi-nāḍu.³ The villages mentioned in the inscriptions as being in Muttūrru-kūrām are Kaṭṭivayal,⁴ Añjukōṭṭai,⁵ Kappalūr⁶ alias Ulaḡaṇḍaśōḷanallūr, Aḍaḡārimaṇḡalam,⁷ Muttūr⁸ alias Uyyakkonḍaśōḷanallūr, Arayattūr,⁹ Sundarapāṇḍiya-chaturvēḍimaṇḡalam,¹⁰ Māvalūr,¹¹ Kuruvaḍimidi¹² alias Jīṇḍramaṇḡalam, Tittānam,¹³ Tenralai,¹⁴ Tiruppunavāyil,¹⁵ and Andanūr-Śirukambūr.¹⁶ The Taluk that adjoins the southern portion of Arantangi, in which we have traced most of the places of the various divisions of Mīlalai-kūrām, is Tiruvāḍānai of the Rāmnād District. On the north-eastern side of the Tiruvāḍānai Taluk runs the river Pāmbāru which separates Rāmnād District from Arantangi Taluk of the Tanore District. Just as expected, we actually find almost on the western bank of this river, the villages Kaṭṭivayal, Añjukōṭṭai, Kappalūr, Muttūr, Aḍaḡāri and Andanūr-Śirukambūr.¹⁷ Tiruppunavāyil (Tiruppunavāśal) is in the extreme south of Arantangi Taluk itself and adjoins the sea.¹⁸ We have also the testimony of the Chōla minister Śēkkiḷār to the fact that Tiruppunavāśal was included in the Pāṇḍya country.¹⁹ If there was room for misconception in the case of Mīlalai-kūrām on account of its inclusion in the Tanjore District, there is none in the case of Muttūrru-kūrām. Tiruvāḍānai Taluk of the Rāmnād District could never have come under the early Chōla dominion. It is in this Taluk and in the Tirupattūr Taluk that the river Pāmbāru flows, on whose banks we have traced most of the places included in Muttūrru-kūrām.

Muttūrru-kūrām is believed by some to have been taken by the Pāṇḍya king Neḍuḷjeliyan from Iruṇḡōvēl. We shall now consider the question if this District could ever have been included in the territory of Iruṇḡōvēl, who, like Vēl-Evvi and Pāri flourished in early days and was one among the chieftains defeated by the said Pāṇḍya. Tamil literature and inscriptions both bear evidence to the fact that the territory over which Irūṅḍōvēl-chiefs ruled was called Kōṇāḍu¹ and that its capital was Koḍumbālūr.² The question reduces itself to this 'Could Muttūrru-kūrram have been included in or was even adjacent to Kōṇāḍu?'. Kōṇāḍu is situated in the modern Pudukkōṭṭai State. A geographical analysis of the inscriptions of that State will show that Kōṇāḍu and its several divisions and sub-divisions occupied the whole of the Kuḷattūr Taluk and the northern portion of the Tirumeyyam Taluk. The southern part of the Tirumeyyam Taluk which is the southernmost part of the Pudukkōṭṭai State, had in it another ancient district called Kāṇa-nāḍu and this Kāṇa-nāḍu³ is stated to be a division of Pāṇḍimaṇḍalam. It was contiguous to Kēraḷaśiṅga-vaṇaṇāḍu. So then, between Kōṇāḍu which is reputed to be the territory of Irūṅḍōvēl chiefs and Muttūrru-kūrram, there lay the two ancient districts of Kēraḷaśiṅga-vaṇaṇāḍu and Kāṇa-nāḍu, both belonging to Pāṇḍimaṇḍalam. This analysis will convincingly establish that the distant Muttūrru-kūrram which we have located in the north-eastern part of the Tiruvāḍānai Taluk of the Rāmnāḍ District could never have been included in or was contiguous to Kōṇāḍu, the territory over which Irūṅḍōvēl held sway, intercepted as it was by two other districts of the Pāṇḍya country.

Geographical analysis of the inscriptions of the Pudukkōṭṭai State.

Kōṇāḍu—

- (a) Anṇalvāyil-kūrram :—Irumbāli, Madinūr, Teliṅgakulakālapuram (in Ten-Kōṇāḍu) alias Kulōttuṅgaśōlapaṭṭiṇam and Viśalūr,—all in Kuḷattūr Taluk.
- (b) Kūḍalūr-nāḍu :—Panaiyūrkuḷam, Śēvalūr, Sirraiūr,—all in Tirumeyyam Taluk.
- (c) Kunriyūr or Kunriśūl-nāḍu :—Kaḷanivāśal, Mēl-Maṇalūr, Parambaiyūr, Punnanguḍi, Śikhānallūr, Tirunalakkunram,—all in the Kuḷattūr Taluk.
- (d) Ollaiyūr-kūrram :—Āṅkuḍi alias Āmanallūr, Iḍaiyārrūr, Kāraiūr, Kīḷa-Taṇiyal, Koraiyūr, alias Uttamaśōlapuram, Neriṅjikkūḍi, Ollaiyūr alias Madurai, Ollaiyūrmaṅgalam (Oliyamaṅgalam), Rājendraśōlapuram, Śāttanūr, Sundaraśōlapuram alias Deśiyugandapaṭṭiṇam (Sundaram), and Viṇṭūkki alias Rājendraśōlapuram,—all in Tirumeyyam Taluk.
- (e) Urattūr-kūrram (Vaḍa-Kōṇāḍu) :—Ālattūr, Koḍumbālūr, Kūḷai-kuḷattūr, Mēnelvēli, Nīrpalanī, Payyūr, Pudukkūḍi, Śārapaṭṭaṇam alias Vikramaśōlapperunderu and Tiruviraiyāṅkuḍi (Tiruvilāṅguḍi),—all in the Kuḷattūr Taluk.
- (f) Vaḍa Śiruvāyil-nāḍu in (e) :—Ilaijāvūr, Kīranūr, Kumāramaṅgalam,—all in the Kuḷattūr Taluk.
- (g) Vayalaga-nāḍu :—Pulvayal and Vayalagam. Both are in Kuḷattūr Taluk.

Kāṇaṇāḍu—

- (a) Kāṇa-nāḍu :—Ādanūr, Andanūr, Kōṭṭaiyūr, Malayakōyil, Mēlūr, Muniyandai, Pēraiūr, Perundurai, Peruṅkaraikkūḍi, alias Tiruvaṇaṅḷanallūr, Pulivalam, Śōlapāṇḍi-yapuram, Ten-Kāṭṭūr, Tirumeyyam, Tulaiyānilai, Viraiyāchchilai. These villages are in Tirumeyyam Taluk.

³ Tirumeyyam in Kāṇa-nāḍu has one of the eighteen famous Vaiṣṇava temples of the Pāṇḍya country. This also shows that Kāṇa-nāḍu was in the Pāṇḍya territory.

(b) Seṅguṇṇa-nāḍu :—Ālaṅguḍi, Āṅguḍi, and Mēlanilai.

(c) Turumā-nāḍu :—Ānamandai, Kaṇṇanūr, Tirunāvalūr and Turumā,—all in Tirumeyyam Taluk.

*Kēraḷaśiṅga-vaḷanāḍu*¹ and *Madurōdaya-vaḷanāḍu*² mentioned in the plates are two other districts of the Pāṇḍya country. The former covered a very large portion of the Tirupattūr Taluk of the Rāmnād District, a part of the Pudukkōṭṭai State and seems to have extended also into the Śivaganga Zamindari. It had several sub-divisions of which six are known, viz., (1) Kalvāyil-nāḍu, (2) Śōlapāṇḍya-vaḷanāḍu,³ (3) Kiḷ-Kuṇḍāru, (4) Tēṇāṇṇuppōkku, (5) Tiruttiiyūr-Muṭṭam, and (6) Adaḷaiyūr-nāḍu. Of the villages of (1) Kalvāyil-nāḍu, viz., *Nelvāyil*⁴, *Pullamaṅgalaṃ*⁵, Kulaśēkharapuram,⁶ and Sundarapāṇḍiyapuram,⁷ are in the Pudukkōṭṭai State while Ilaiyāttakuḍi alias (or near) Kulaśēkharapuram,⁸ Iraniyūr,⁹ *Korṇamaṅgalaṃ*¹⁰ and *Kuṇṇattūr*¹¹ are in the Tirupattūr Taluk. The villages in (2) are *Kārai*yūr,¹² Tirukkōṭṭiiyūr,¹³ Śōlamārttāṇḍa-chaṭurvēdimaṅgalaṃ,¹⁴ i.e., Śivapuri, Kaṇṇamaṅgalaṃ,¹⁵ Karuṅḷattūr,¹⁶ Mēlūr,¹⁷ Pūḍikkūḍi,¹⁸ *Śirudai*yūr¹⁹ and Śirudai.²⁰ The village Aḷagāpuri,²¹ was situated in (3). In the sub-division of Tēṇāṇṇuppōkku was the village *Niyamaṃ*²² (Nēmaṃ). Tiruttiiyūr-Muṭṭam had two divisions; in the eastern division (Kiḷai-Tiruttiiyūr-Muṭṭam) were the villages Śiṇuvayal,²³ Aṇṇiyūr,²⁴ Dēsaṅḷaḷam,²⁵ Koḍuṅḷaḷam,²⁶ Vēppaṅḷaḷam,²⁷ and Vēṇṇiyūr,²⁸ while Mēlai-Tiruttiiyūr-Muṭṭam had *Pāgaṇṇēri*²⁹ in it. The village of *Tirukkunṇakkūḍi*³⁰ (Kuṇṇakkūḍi) was in Adaḷaiyūr-nāḍu in which passed the river *Tēṇāṇṇu*³¹. The villages of *Ilai-Kaḍambaṅḷaḷam*³² (modern Śaṇṇavaram), *Piḷar*³³ and *Korṇamaṅgalaṃ*³⁴ were in Tiruttiiyūr-Muṭṭam: but it is not known whether they belonged to the eastern or western division.

³ Though the term vaḷanāḍu is usually employed to denote a district, it indicates a sub-division here. Owing to the large size of Kēraḷaśiṅga-vaḷanāḍu, it seems to have been split up into two parts in later days.

The sub-divisions of Madurōdaya-vaḷanāḍu and the villages situated in them are noted below :—

- (1) Kāñai-Irukkai which had in it Uḷakkuḍi,¹ Iruñchirai,² Koṭṭakīrti,³ Velāṇēri,³ Karpakīrti² and Irāśiṅganallūr.³
- (2) Māḍakkulakkīl which had in it Koḍimaṅgalam,⁴ Madurai,⁵ Śiruveṅkuṇṇam⁶.
- (3) Velūrkulakkīl, with Kundadēvi-chaturvēdimaṅgalam.⁷
- (4) Rājaśiṅgaṅkulakkīl which had in it Rājēndiram,⁸ Tiruppūvaṇam,⁹ Ambalattāḍi-chaturvēdimaṅgalam.¹⁰
- (5) Karunilakkuḍi-nāḍu which had in it Tiruttaṅgāl.¹¹
- (6) Iḍaikkuḍi-nāḍu which had in it Mēlai-Śeḷuvaṇūr¹² alias Śatrubhayaṅkaranallūr.
- (7) Veṇbuḷa or Veṇbīl-nāḍu which had in it Kumārapavitra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam¹³ and Śēnkāṭṭirukkai-Iḍattuvaḷi.¹⁴
- (8) Puṇappaṇalai-nāḍu which had in it Puttūr,¹⁵ Kaḷḷikuḍi,¹⁶ Mīḷagaṇūr¹⁶ and Nirmaḍaiyūr.¹⁷
- (9) Kallaga-nāḍu which must have had at least two sub-divisions as the name Ten-Kallaga-nāḍu is applied to one of them which contained the villages Dēśipaṭṭaṇam alias Vikramaśōḷapuram¹⁸ (Vikramaṅgalam), Śēndaṇēri-Kaṭṭikaḷlūr (Tenkarai)¹⁹ and Parākramaṇḍiyapuram.²⁰

It will be noted that four of the sub-divisions given in the Tiruppūvaṇam plates without mentioning the district to which they belonged were actually in Madurōdaya-vaḷanāḍu. These are Māḍakkulakkīl, Rājaśiṅgaṅkulakkīl, Puṇappaṇalai-nāḍu and Kāñai-Irukkai.

A word of explanation is necessary for treating as sub-divisions geographical terms ending in 'kuḷakkīl', of which we have as many as four instances. In mentioning villages, inscriptions usually give first the district, then the sub-division and lastly the village. Districts generally have the suffix vaḷanāḍu and the sub-divisions end in nāḍu. Sometimes in place of vaḷanāḍu, the term kūṇṇam is employed; and if it had not any sub-divisions with distinct and different names, it is itself divided into two or more divisions according to the directions in which they lay, such as east, middle and west, north and south, etc. This is also the case even with regard to some sub-divisions which are large enough to be so apportioned. For instance the district of Mīlalai-kūrṇam had no separate sub-divisions: in the place of the latter, we have Kīl-kūrṇu, Naḍuviṅ-kūrṇu and Mēl-kūrṇu, i.e., the eastern, middle and western portions. Similarly, the sub-division Śembi-nāḍu had Vaḍatalai-Śembi-nāḍu, Kīl-Śembi-nāḍu, etc., i.e., the northern and eastern portions of Śembi-nāḍu. Districts are sometimes omitted in inscriptions and villages are mentioned with the sub-divisions to which they belonged. From the fact that the geographical items Māḍakkulaḱkīl, Rājendraśiṅgaṅkulaḱkīl, etc., immediately follow a vaḷanāḍu or district and are followed in turn by villages, they have to be treated as sub-divisions. It will not be right to take the terms ending in “kuḷakḱīl” to mean “to the east of any particular tank”. In these items the particle kīl does not mean ‘east’ as opposed to ‘mēl’ ‘west’ but stands for “under or in”. Hence we have inserted the four items ending in kuḷakḱīl as sub-divisions and assigned them their places under the districts to which they belonged. In this connection, it is worthy of note that we have not come across even a single instance where a village is stated to be situated to the west, north or south of Māḍakkulaṁ, Rājendraśiṅgaṅkulaṁ, etc.

Of the other sub-divisions mentioned in the plates, Vaḍatalai-Śembi-nāḍu in which Āyḱkuḍi alias Aḷagiyapāṇḍiyanallūr was situated, is seen from other inscriptions to have had the villages Iyamanīśvaram,¹ Mēlai-Koḍumaḷūr² or Koḍumaḷūr alias Uttamapāṇḍiyanallūr, Kīlai-Koḍumaḷūr³ alias Madurōḍayanallūr, Māvilaṅgai,⁴ Nallūrkuṇuchchi,⁵ Peruṅgirinallūr⁶ and Deyvachchilainallūr otherwise called Paṇṇaṅkulaṁ. Except Iyamanīśvaram (Emanīśvaram) which is in the Paramakuḍi Taluk, the rest are found in the Mudukulaṭṭūr Taluk of the Rāmuḍ District. The name of the division shows that Śembi-nāḍu had other divisions. In fact, inscriptions refer to Kīl-Śembi-nāḍu in which were the villages Āṇaikuḍi,⁷ Kaḷari alias Kaidayanallūr⁸, Kaḍambaṅguḍi,⁹ Nallāṅkuḍi,⁷ Maruvāy alias Śrīvallaḅbanallūr,⁷ Pavittiramāṇikkapaṭṭinam,⁸ Nallirukkai alias Virapāṇḍiyanallūr,⁷ Tiruppullāṇi⁷ and Śembiyan-Pērāmbūr;⁷ Śrīdēśam which had in it Tiru-Uttarakōśamaṅgai, as other divisions of Śembi-nāḍu. Most of these villages are in the Rāmuḍ Taluk.

Kaḷavaḷi-nāḍu was divided into two parts North and South. In Vaḍa-Kaḷavaḷi-nāḍu were Aḷagamānagar,⁹ Kōḍaipirāṭṭinallūr,¹⁰ Kuṇṇattūr¹¹ and Purkuḷi.¹² Ten-Kaḷavaḷi-nāḍu had in it Muḍiḱoṇḍapāṇḍiyanapuram¹³ and Pullūrri¹⁴ alias Śrīvallaḅbanallūr. That Kaḍambaṅguḍi was a village in Kaḷavaḷi-nāḍu and bore the name Malayarāyaṅkōṭṭai is learnt from two inscriptions.¹⁵ Ārāḷaiyūr was another village in the same division.¹⁶

In the lists given above, some official designations are prefixed to a few names of persons. These are : Tiruvāyikkēḷvi, Sāṃudāyam, Māḷigaittaṇam, Adigāram, Vaḷanāḷu-kāiyam-ṣeygga, Āṇaittaṇam and Meyppū. Their connotation may easily be determined from the terms themselves. The compound word Tiruvāyikkēḷvi consists of tiru 'sacred', vāy 'mouth' and kēḷvi 'hearing' and means 'what is heard from the sacred mouth (of the king)', i.e., 'any royal oral order'. As an official designation applied to persons it means 'one who hears the royal oral order'. In ancient times, among the king's retinue there were some who bore this designation. And it seems that the duty of this class of officials was to put in writing the oral orders of the king and communicate the same to the Department of the State concerned for being given effect to. In the case of almost all royal orders this becomes the first original document; and on this are based the subsequent orders issued in pursuance of it. Very often we meet with the statement 'nam kēḷi tara-chchoṇṇōm' meaning 'we directed the issue of our kēḷvi (oral order put in writing)'. The word 'kēḷvi' is seen sometimes substituted by 'ōlai' (written palm leaf). The receiving officers out of regard for the king termed it tirumanāṇāḍōlai where tiru (Skt. Śrī) denotes 'His Majesty's', mandua 'council' and ōlai 'document or order'. Thus, its equivalent is 'the order of His Majesty in Council'. It is exactly the same as tiruvāyikkēḷvi. The word sāṃudāya means 'gathering, crowd or a body of people'. From it comes Sāṃudāya : one of the members of the sāṃudāya. This body may consist of one class of people or be of different classes. In temples also there existed such a body. Probably it was composed of different kinds of servants employed in it. The term Māḷigaittaṇam may have been used to denote the official in charge of the management of the king's household. It may be rendered into 'Palace-Manager'. Adigāram may be taken to mean 'one who exercises power, a maintainer of law', 'Prakriyā w=adhikāraḥ' and the explanation 'vyavasthā-sthū anīyasya' well bring out the sense. Vaḷanāḷu-kāiyam-ṣeygga means 'the administrative head of a district'. The sense of the term Āṇaittaṇam is well brought out in lines 207-210 of the larger Leiden plates. It denotes the person who, when the boundaries of a village or villages are being circumambulated by the assemblies of the nādu (district or subdivision) in company with the kaṅkāṇi (Superintendents); had to go with them mounted on the elephant (āṇai) and to point out the boundaries. Meypu is somewhat difficult to explain definitely. It is not known whether the first letter me is long or short. If long it may indicate that the person who bore this designation was in charge of the feeding of the elephant; and if short, it may denote a police officer. In the name Pōrru Aravamūḍaiyāṇ Villi (No. 76 of Appendix A), the word Pōrru may denote some duty or office which is not possible to be definitely defined now.

³ In this inscription, wherever rua occurs, v is doubled.

⁴ The letter da of darē seems to have been inserted in the space between du and rē. It looks like the length sign of ū.

⁶ There is a marked preference for the final consonant in this inscription. See also abhavat (l. 1), tat-suta (l. 2) and talsarē (l. 4).

⁷ In place of s=tata imē, A. S. S. I. reads punarātō (7).

⁸ The syllables sy=āghāṭa-kṛiptim have been read as syū(vadhī)kṛiptim in A. S. S. I. There is no doubt about the reading given in our text. The letter kṛi is rare and looks like kara as it must; but it cannot be taken for lā, for the length sign is clearly distinguished in this inscription from ra by the latter being given a tube at the bottom.

⁹ The letter di is corrected from ti.

¹⁰ Vanta is the reading in A. S. S. I. The bottom letter t is slightly damaged.

¹¹ Mīśai is the reading in most inscriptions, but in No. 417 of S. I. I. (Texts), Vol. V, it is replaced by migai.

¹² The reading in S. I. I., Vol. V, Nos. 412 and 417 is ēḷ. In this inscription, the letter ḷu is clear.

¹³ Though niḷaṅga is the reading found in Nos. 412 and 417 of S. I. I., Vol. V, our inscription uses niḷaṅ both here and in line 12: the short and long i are clearly distinguished. In No. 302 of S. I. I., Vol. V, niḷaṅga is followed by irunkō instead of śenkō.

² Instead of this phrase, viḷaṅgiya kadiṇ-ol occurs in No. 302 and viḷaṅgiya alone in Nos. 412 and 417 of S. I. I., Vol. V.

⁴ The reading nālu in A. S. S. I., is wrong. The mistake increases the number of days by four.

⁶ The e sign of ne is engraved at the end of the previous line.

¹⁰ The reading Śirungā given in A. S. S. I. is wrong.

¹⁴ The word kuruchchi is in some cases spelt kurichchi. See lines 77, 166, 236.

¹⁵ This word may also be read ppēyaṇ. As there is no i sign over the letter r, the reading ppēriyan given in A. S. S. I. must be considered wrong.

² The ē sign of nē is entered at the end of the previous line.

⁴ Pukai given in A. S. S. I. is incorrect.

⁵ Kuḍa, the reading in A. S. S. I., is not right. The word occurs again with the spelling kuḍi.

⁶ Here and in many more places the letter ṭu is shaped exactly as the e sign. It is due to the indifference of the scribe.

⁷ This word has been read Uḍumavandai in A. S. S. I.

⁸ At the beginning of this line, the A. S. S. I. has kudī of which there are no traces. The first letter is certainly yu.

¹⁰ By mistaking na for ā, Kaṇṇāri has been made out in A. S. S. I.

¹¹ Read āṇ. Perhaps the writer uses ī in place of rā.

¹² There is nothing to suspect the letter to be śa as has been done in A. S. S. I.

² The ē sign of Mē is entered at the end of the previous line.

³ The reading ṇam Sēmbāṇēri given in A. S. S. I. is hardly possible. At the end of the line, the letter ṇā is very clear. Owing to scratches over the penultimate f, it seems to have been mistaken for m. As the loops of ṇ are fully developed in this inscription, there is no doubt about the first letter of the next line being lē and not ṇē. I have accordingly taken the word to be Śṭṭaṇēri.

⁴ This word has been wrongly read as tiru in A. S. S. I. Tirappu occurs again in lines 52 and 68 where it has been correctly read.

⁵ Here again, we have pṇṇāy-ē. The engraver appears to have incised the i sign over r and erased it.

⁷ Here the loop for long i is wanting.

⁸ For Mē the engraver has written pē.

¹⁰ The reading pāṭṭaṇṇā-ē of A. S. S. I. is not admissible.

¹¹ The last letter ra is missing, the plate being broken at the corner.

¹² In place of ppār, the A. S. S. I. has Maḍār.

¹³ Instead of paṇḍalai and Pulla, we have Pirasa and Yulla in A. S. S. I. The engraver has written ppu as a group and the group symbol actually resembles yu.

² The syllables dēva have been read as Tōja in A. S. S. I.

³ The letters nn are expressed by a group.

⁵ The ē sign of revē is at the end of the previous line.

⁸ Read Chēdi.

⁹ The letters ppa are expressed by a group.

¹⁰ Vaḷaivēli is taken as the name of the village in A. S. S. I.

³ The length stroke of lā is written at the commencement of the next line and is damaged.

⁷ Read utpaḍa. The letter ḍu resembles the secondary e symbol.

⁸ The last three letters are Āḍuvā. The length sign of vā, which is written at the beginning of the next line, is damaged and looks like śa. The reading Kēśava given in A. S. S. I. is inadmissible, for ā and va are clear.

⁹ Instead of Śikayilāya, the A. S. S. I. has Sidayil-Araya.

¹⁰ After yaṇu, there is only one m and the trace of the vowel ē following it. As such, the reading m Māraṇ of A. S. S. I. is inadmissible. Against the reading it has also to be noted that there is too much space for the length sign of Mā.

¹¹ Valliyaṇ is the reading in A. S. S. I. It is inadmissible as it disregards the i sign over v and the length symbol after y.

TRANSLATION.

(Verse 1)—Hail ! Prosperity ! There was at first this water. In its centre (lit. inside), there lay, on the serpent (Śeṣha)-couch, Hari. From his navel came forth a lotus ; and from it, by himself, the creator of the universe (Viśvasṛiṭ) came ; from him Atri ; and from the cavity of his eyes, the Moon ; his son was Budha ; from him was born Purūras ; and thence came these Pāṇḍya lords.

(Verse 2) —Hail ! Prosperity ! Having ascertained the (proper) time from Sundarēśa, (king) Rājagambhīradēva, in the twenty-fifth year of his reign, on the day of Svāti combined with Saturday (Ārkki-vāra) in the dark fortnight, and on the tithi of Kanakapati (i.e., ēkādāśī), when the hot-rayed (Sun) was in the sign Dhanus, ordered to conduct immediately the female elephant to fix the boundaries of the village called after his own name.

(Line 5) The goddess of the flower (i.e., Lakshmi) lovingly taking her seat and the goddess of the earth lawfully uniting with him ; the goddess of war resting on his victorious shoulders ; the goddess of the great arts shining on his tongue ; the moon-light of his fame shedding its lustre in the twice-four quarters; the path of the Vēdas (maṭai) expanding; the path of Manu clarifying the six righteous doctrinal ways and spreading out; the fish (emblem of the Pāṇḍyas) securely seated on the golden mountain, driving off the forest tiger (emblem of the Chēra); the white parasol (of his) affording shade to the seven seas and the seven sporting gardens surrounded by the eight hills; his righteous sceptre swaying; the fierce Kali (age) concealing itself with tremour in long caverns; the Villavar (i.e., the Chēra), Śembiyar (i.e., the Chōla), Virāṭar, Varāṭar and the Pallavar, paying due obeisance in regular succession with (their) tributes; his single wheel rising aloft over the two globes; the sweet and nectar-like īyal, iṣai and nāṭakam (i.e., prose, poetry and drama) steadily increasing; wearing the crown and sitting on the mountain-like high lion throne,—his eulogy being sung by able masters of arts,—along with his queen Avanimuluduḍaiyāl, who resembled the swan in gentle gait and who was praised and bowed to by queens of kings; the glorious king Jaṭavarman alias the Emperor of the three worlds, the illustrious Kulaśēkhara-dēva reigned.

Whereas, while the king was pleased to be seated on the reclining couch called Malavarājan in the hall of his palace at Madurai situated in (the sub-division) Māḍakkulaṭṭai of Madurādaya-vaḷanāḍu, he had ordered that a village consisting of one thousand and two hundred shares should be formed and given as brahmadēya, with effect from the eleventh year opposite the thirteenth,—one thousand and eighty shares to one thousand and eighty Brāhmaṇas learned in the Vēdas and Śāstras and capable of expounding them, and one hundred and twenty shares as dīvādāna and for those who had to do servile;

(Ll. 69-72) and whereas the village of Rājagambhīra-chaṭurvyēḍimaṅgalam, called (as such) after the sacred name of the king and included in Rājagambhīra-vaḷanāḍu, was formed in pursuance of this said order by taking up the undermentioned villages, excluding from them the lands which formed old dēvadānas, paḷḷiechandam and kāraṇmai, and including the rest,—and removing their previous owners, old names and the classification under veḷḷāṇ-vagai, as well as the prior holdings,—and bringing them all under one village with one puravu and one nāḍu,

(Ll. 72-74) and whereas the king had been pleased to say that the four boundaries of this (new) village may be circumambulated with the female elephant in the presence of the superintendents appointed for the purpose, and, for the boundaries thus passed through, a deed may be drawn up and given, the following is recorded on the thirteenth year and four thousand and three hundred and sixtieth day.

(Ll. 19 to 69) The villages and lands taken up are:—

(1) In Kiraṇūr-nāḍu,—the villages of Nakkamaṅgalam and Vāgaikuḍi, (the latter) a dēva-dāna of Uḍaiyār Tiruppūvaṇamuḍaiyār; (2) including the above (two villages), the villages of Tiruvāvaṇam, Tuttiyūr, and Kiruṅgākkōṭṭai (with its lands called) Kāḍuvēṭṭi, Muṭṭam, Korraṇēri, Taḍaiyālī-Tiyāgi-ēmbal, Veḷḷattaivenṇān-ēmbal, Pagavadi-ēmbal, Naḍuvirkōṭṭai and Kūḍan-Eṭṭi-kuṛuehi; (3) in Paṇaṅgalūr-nāḍu,—the villages of Adikarai, Mittiravāli, Vēlaṅṅaṁ with its land Omalagiyan-ēmbal, Sōlaiyēri, Kuḍaṇjādi, Aruvurai-Pudukkuḷam, Kiṭ-Chūrai, Mēṭ-Chūrai, Piḍarikūḷam, Panaṅgalūr alias Paṇḍitapaṇjāranallūr, Seyyakulattūr with its land Śiṅganēriyudaiyān-kūṇipparru, Vaṇjiyūr, Karkuṛuehi, Ariyānkuṛuehi, Araikkūḷam with its lands Aṟugaśādi, Viragaṅgappērayan-ēmbal, Virapāṇḍiyappērayan-ēmbal, Molaiyan-ēmbal, Ambalakkūṭṭan-ēmbal, Śittan-ēmbal and Pannirāyirappērayan-ēmbal, Uvaniyamaṅgalam and its land Pudaichehāṅkuḷiy-ēmbal; (4) in Tiyandaikuḍi-nāḍu,—the villages of Ugaray and Kōṭṭai with the lands Śivigaiyāṅkuḷi and Uḍumbandai, Ulagaraṇi, Karaiyūr, Kumpēli, Maṭṭaḍakkiyēri with its lands Saṅgappērayan-ēmbal, Puttēmbal, Kalaiyanēri, Seṅkuḷi and Orukkoṇṇānēri, Kaḷvā-yḷmaṅgalam, Pullaṇēri, Sēndaṇēri, Nakkāṇēri, Pārkuḷam with its land Uyyāṇ-Sūriyaṇ-ēmbal,

(Ll. 139-195) The eastern boundary (as it came to be determined) on the day of Svātī corresponding to Saturday and the eleventh tithi of the second fortnight and the fourth (solar) day of the month of Dhanu in the twelfth year opposite the thirteenth of (the king's) reign, lies to the west of the line commencing from the eastern extremity of Uḍaikuḷam, also called Kīṭ-Chūrai, which lies to the north-east of this village (of Rājagambhira-ehaturvēdimāṅalam), passes southwards and crosses the road going to Kaḍambaṅguḍi from Seyyakulaṭṭūr, runs in a south-easterly direction, then southwards and then in south-easterly direction and crosses the road leading to Vēmbaṅguḍi from Māṇavīramadurai, and then passes eastwards and crosses the high road leading to Mūvaraiyarkōṭṭai from Seyyakulaṭṭūr, and then keeping to the right (the pit called) Pudaichechāṅkuḷi, passes south-east along the veṭṭipperuvali (the big path of the veṭṭis) which meets the said road (at the said pit) and crosses the road leading to Māṇavīramadurai from Mūvaraiyarkōṭṭai; further, proceeding from this road in a south-easterly direction and crossing the high road which runs westwards, and then going in a south-easterly direction crossing the road leading to Mānavīramadurai from Piḷāyūr and then passing in a south-easterly direction and reaching the eastern extremity of the tank of Karaiyūr and from its bank passing in a south-easterly direction, it lies to the west. And crossing the channel which carries water to the tank at Kunnēli, it lies to the west. Proceeding from the channel in a south-easterly direction on the eastern boundary of Śaṅgappērayan-ēmbal, then going southwards and then in a south-westerly direction and crossing the road leading from Neṭṭūr to Mānavīramadurai and then going southwards along the nīr-rakkal of the tank at Chandranallūr and reaching the southern extremity of Chandranallūr, it lies to the west. Further, proceeding from here in a south-westerly direction along the way leading to Vaigai alias Śrīvallabhappērāru, it lies to the west. Then going southwards from this way along the sevvai on the eastern boundary of Śēṅkuli, then proceeding westwards on the southern boundary of the said Śēṅkuli and afterwards going southwards along Karkuḷam which forms the eastern boundary of Orukkorraṇēri, it lies to the west. Then proceeding in a south-westerly direction on the southern boundary of the said Orukkorraṇēri and getting into the Vaigai alias Śrīvallabhappērāru it lies to the west. Then going along this Śrīvallabhappērāru (first) in a north-westerly direction and then in a westerly direction, it lies to the west. Then getting up the southern bank of this river and proceeding in a southerly direction and crossing the channel which carries water to the tank of Kīṭ-Pāsalai alias Dāṇavinōdanallūr and the tank of Mēr-Pāsalai alias Śrīvallabha-ehaturvēdimāṅalam and getting up the bank of this channel and proceeding southwards along the.....ridge of the half vēḷi and two mā of land in Araśipparru and going up the northern extremity of the tank of Māṇavīramadurai, it lies to the west. Then, proceeding westwards on this bank and then going southwards on the eastern boundary of the three vēli of land, as measured by the pāṭṭakkāl,—which had been added to Rājagambhira-chaturvēdimaṅgalam out of the lands that were being cultivated as pāṭṭam on the eastern side of the channel which carries water to the tank at Marudūr and which lay within the abovesaid tank of Mānavīramadurai,—and getting up the south bank of this tank and (then) reaching the channel which carries water to the tank at Marudūr, it lies to the west. Further, proceeding along the east bank of this channel in a south-easterly direction and then in southerly direction and reaching the old excavation in the south extremity of the kuḍiyiruppu of Vānagaṅgappēraiyaṅ, it lies to the west. Proceeding again eastwards along this excavation, and going on the ridge (first) in an easterly direction and then in a north-easterly direction along the southern ridge of the field in the south extremity of Mānavīramadurai in the agavāy of the old tank of Marudūr, and getting up the eastern extremity of the said old tank of Marudūr, it lies to the west. Then, proceeding westwards along this bank, and then going southwards along (the channel called) Divākara-vāyakkāl which forms the eastern boundary of Marudūr and the western boundary of Mānavīramadurai, till where this channel ends, then passing by this western ridge of (the land called) Divākara-vayakkal, and then proceeding eastwards along the southern ridge of the field and then passing south along the sevrāi which has the western ridge of Sundaravayakkal and then going along the line which forms the northern boundary of Saṅkaramaṅgalam and the southern boundary of Mānavīramadurai, (first) in an easterly direction and then in a north-easterly direction and getting up the northern extremity of Saṅkaramaṅgalam and reaching the channel which carries water to the tank of Mēṟ-Paśalai alias Śrīvallabha-chaturvēdimaṅgalam and to the tank of Kīṭ-Paśalai alias Dānaviṇḍanallūr, it lies to the west. Then, proceeding in a south-easterly direction on the western bank of this channel, and crossing the (other) channel which, branching off from this channel, carries water to the tank of Mēṟ-Paśalai alias Śrīvallabha-chaturvēdimaṅgalam, and then going (successively) in south-easterly, easterly and southerly directions on the western bank of the channel which carries water to the tank of Kīṭ-Paśalai alias Dānaviṇḍanallūr and reaching the western embankment of the tank of the said Dānaviṇḍanallūr, and then getting down the grassy bank of that tank and proceeding southwards on the eastern bank of the channel which carries water to the tank of Mēṟ-Paśalai alias Śrīvallabha-chaturvēdimaṅgalam and reaching the northern extremity of the tank of the said Śrīvallabha-chaturvēdimaṅgalam, then proceeding (successively) in south and south-east directions along the Iḍukkāru (flowing) from the maruvāy of this tank, and reaching the path leading to the nattam of Nelvēli, it lies to the west. Then, getting up at the eastern extremity of the tank of the said Nelvēli and reaching (the channel called) Paṟalaikkāl, and proceeding southwards on the western bank of that channel and crossing the path leading west from Nakkapēri, (it lies to the west).

(LI. 195-267) The southern boundary: Going westwards along the road forming the southern boundary of Nelvēli and the northern entrance to the nattam of Eṭṭiyēri and reaching the western end of the said nattam of Eṭṭiyēri, thence proceeding westwards and reaching the old temple-site in the middle of this Eṭṭiyēri and Nelvēli, then going south-west and crossing (the river) Paṟalaiyāru, it lies to the north. Proceeding (successively) in south and south-west directions on the western bank of this river, and then crossing the channel which carries water to the tank of Niram-baiyūr and (also) forms the eastern boundary of Sōmūttūr, and proceeding southwards on the western bank of this channel and reaching the middle boundary between Sōmūttūr and Śīruvāgai in the vicinity of Kaḷlikkuḍi, it lies to the north. Further, passing west and south-west along the ridge which commences at the middle of this boundary, and getting into the tank at Śīruvāgai at the north end of it, then passing on the southern boundary, of Aravaṅkuḍi and crossing the channel which carries water to the tank of Kaḷlikkuḍi, then going westwards and then in a south-westerly direction along the road leading to Vēlāṇēri from Aravaṇkuḍi and reaching the eastern boundary of Vēlāṇēri, it lies to the north. Again proceeding in a north-easterly direction along the eastern bank of the channel, which runs along the said village of Vēlāṇēri and carries water to Puttūr, and crossing this channel and getting up the western bank, it lies to the north. Further, going westwards along the boundary which forms the northern boundary of Vēlāṇēri and the southern boundary of Karuṇkuḷam, and then going westwards along the north bank of Sūṇṇivaśakkal-ūraṇi of Vēlāṇēri, it lies to the north. Then going along the ridge in the middle of the boundary and proceeding north along the eastern ridge of Ādichchavaśakkal of Vēlāṇēri, and then going north along the northern ridge of this land, it lies to the north. Further, going north on the eastern ridge of Karundaḍi of Vēlāṇēri, and then westwards on the ridge which is to the north of this land and the nūṇṇaṅkāl of Ādichchavaśakkal and of Perrāṇvaśakkal and reaching the eastern ridge of Dayānti-vayakkal in Sēṇēri which adjoins Kaḷḷikkūḍi, it lies to the north. Again, proceeding northwards on this ridge and reaching the ellai-vāyḱkāl (i.e., the boundary channel), and then going (successively) in north, north-west and north directions along the said channel, and afterwards going in a westerly direction on the northern ridge of Mālār-mukkaṇi of Sēṇēri, and then again going in a north-western direction on the eastern ridge of Sōmidēvi-vayakkal belonging to Dayānti Ariyaṇ alias Arundaṇa-Viḷupparaiyaṇ, then going northwards along the eastern ridge of the land of Dayānti Mūṇavīraṇ consisting of several taḷis (in extent), and then proceeding northwards on the eastern ridge of the vayakkal of Uyyakkonḍāl and then westwards of the northern ridge of this field and reaching the northern bank of the tank of Sēṇēri, it lies to the north. Then going in a north-westerly direction along the grassy bank of this tank and reaching the big road leading to Dēvakōṭṭai from Kaṇṇaṇūr, and going westwards along this big road, it lies to the north. Then, leaving to the left the tamarind tree standing at the northern entrance of Pūdaṇēri-nattam, and passing westwards and getting into the tank called Taḍāppirai at its southern extremity, it lies to the north. Then passing in a north-westerly direction in the nīr-nakkal of this tank, and then going in a north-westerly direction in the nīr-nakkal of (the tank called) Kāñehiraṇkuḷam and reaching the northern extremity of this tank, and then passing westwards on the south bank of the channel which carries water to this tank and getting up the (bank of the tank called) Pullaṇērikuḷam at its southern end, it lies to the north. Then going northwards in the nīr-nakkal of this tank and reaching the northern extremity of this tank, then going westwards on the south bank of the channel which carries water to this tank and reaching the big road leading to Kaṇṇaṇūr, it lies to the north. Then going northwards along this road, and then going westwards of the śevvai having the northern ridge of Muttaraiyaṇ-karuñchey of Kaṇṇaṇūr-Piḍāri-ēri which forms the northern boundary of Kaṇṇaṇūr and the southern boundary of Narimaṇṇam and reaching the kuḷappariṇṇu of Maḍalaikuruchehi, and going northwards within this tank to the extent of ten kōl, it lies to the north. Proceeding westwards along this tank and crossing the channel which carries water to the tank at Kaṇṇaṇūr and passing northwards, leaving to the right the tamarind tree standing to the east of Kāṇavāru which flows northwards, and going westwards and getting up the bank of (the tank called) Uḍaikuḷam in Kiṭ-Śeḷi, and going northwards on this bank and reaching the southern boundary of Miṇṇēri, it lies to the north. Further, going westwards along the channel which had been dug to carry water to the tank at Kiṭ-Śeḷi and which forms the northern boundary of the said tank of Kiṭ-Śeḷi and the southern boundary of this Miṇṇēri, then getting into the channel and getting up at the breach (known as) Malaiyaṇuḍaiṇṇu, proceeding then on the bund of this tank and getting down the agavāy of this tank, then going (successively) in southerly and south-westerly directions on the eastern boundary of the dry land belonging to Miḷagaṇūr and reaching the road leading to Koṭṭakūṭi in Kāñai-Irukkaḱai from Miḷagaṇūr, it lies to the north. Then going north-west along the channel which carries water to the tank of Kaḍambaṅguḍi, which channel formed the northern boundary of the said Koṭṭakīrti and passed in the middle of the northern boundary of Vēlānēri in Kāñai-Irukkai and the southern boundary of Mīḷaganūr, then getting into this (i.e., the said) channel and going north to the karai-parippu, which is at the southern extremity of Mēr-Śēli and forms the northern boundary of the dry land attached to Vēlānēri, then going in a north-westerly direction, and then again in a westerly direction along the southern boundary of the dry land belonging to Śōraṇ Mūkkāṇ of Mīḷaganūr, then going in a northerly direction along the ella-parippu in the middle of the eastern boundary of Karpakīrti in Kāñai-Irukkai and the western boundary of Mēr-Śēli adjoining Mīḷaganūr and reaching the southern boundary of the dry land of Sundaṇ-Ālvāṇ of Mīḷaganūr, it lies to the north. Further, going in a westerly direction midway between the southern boundary of this dry land and the northern boundary of Karpakīrti and reaching the eastern boundary of the dry land of Karpakīrti, it lies to the north. Then going (first) in a northerly direction and then in north-westerly direction, along the vēli-pparippu in the middle of this dry land and the dry lands belonging to Mīḷaganūr, and afterwards going in north and north-westerly directions midway between the eastern limit of Karpakīrti and the boundary at the western limit of the dry land that was being cultivated by Rāmaṇ Aḷagan of Mīḷaganūr, and then crossing the road leading to Mīḷaganūr from Iruūchirai and reaching the end of the southern extremity of Śīrukiḷ-ātti adjoining Mīḷaganūr, and going in a north-westerly direction along the karai-parippu of this tank and reaching the northern bank of the tank of Karpakīrti, it lies to the north. Then going north-west along the grassy bank of this tank and then in a north-westerly direction along the channel, which carries water to the tank of Śīrukiḷātti and passes midway between the southern limit of the dry lands of Puvapinallūr and the bank of Karpakīrti, and crossing the kaḷai-lombu of the tank of Karpakīrti, it lies to the north. Then, leaving to the right the kaḷar-parippu, which lies to the south of Valaiyan-ūraṇi (and also) to the south of the fields of Puvapinallūr, and going in a westerly direction, and then again in a north-westerly direction along the southern boundary of the dry lands cultivated by the shepherd Irāśiṅga-kōṇ, the resident of Puvapinallūr, which lands are situated to the north of Kāpakarai which carries water to the tank of Śīrukiḷātti and reaching the channel which carries water at the western end of the tank of Karpakīrti, (it lies to the west).

(Ll. 267-316) The western boundary: Proceeding northwards along the eastern bank of this tank, and then going northwards along the eastern bank of the channel, which carried water to the tank of Karpakīrti and formed the eastern boundary of Pudukkuḷam, that was given in exchange for Mīḷaganūr which was included in Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaigalam, then going in northerly and north-easterly directions along the eastern bank of the channel, which carried water to the tank of Karpakīrti and formed the eastern boundary of Māṅankīrti which was also given in exchange for the said Mīḷaganūr, and then passing this channel, it lies to the east. Further, proceeding northwards and reaching the western end of the tank of Mīḷaganūr, it lies to the east. Then getting into the agarūy of this tank and going northwards, then again going north along the bank of (the tank called) Minṇēri which forms the eastern boundary of Kuvaḷaivēlipparru given in exchange for Mīḷaganūr and reaching the southern boundary of Nerkuṇram, it lies to the east. Then going in a north-westerly direction along the karai-parippu, which forms the eastern boundary of this Kuvaḷaivēli and the western boundary of Nerkuṇram, and reaching the southern end of the nattam of this Nerkuṇram, it lies to the east. Then going in a north-westerly direction along the southern āśarudī of this nattam and reaching the western extremity of the tank of the said Nerkuṇram, then going northwards along the eastern end of Kuvaḷaivēli through the nīr-nakkal of this tank and reaching the bank of Mēlsēri, then going northwards along the kuḷapparippu of Mēlsēri and getting up at the southern end of Kaṭṭikuḷam and descending into the agarūy of this tank and then going northwards on the eastern boundary of Kaḍambamaigalam which was given in exchange for Mīlagaṇūr and reaching the bank of Perrāṇ-ēmbal, it lies to the east. Then going northwards and crossing the channel which carries water to Kaṭṭikuḷam, and going eastwards along the southern boundary of Tirumāliṇṇōlai in Achchaṅkāṭṭirukkai which is a tax-free dēvadāna of Tirumāliṇṇōlai-Ālvār and the holding (kāṇi) of Pullāṇi Mādēvaṇ alias Nuḷambādarāyar, the headman of Mālaṅguḍi, and then leaving to the left the tiruvālikkal (i.e., disc-bearing stone) planted on the southern boundary of this Tirumāliṇṇōlainallūr and going in east and south-east directions and reaching the tiruvālikkal planted at the south-east corner of Tirumāliṇṇōlainallūr, and then going northwards on the western bank of the channel which carries water to the tank at Mīlagaṇūr which was added to Rājagambhūra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam and reaching the tiruvālikkal planted on the eastern boundary of Tirumāliṇṇōlainallūr, and then going northwards on the western bank of this channel and reaching the tiruvālikkal planted at the north-eastern corner of this Tirumāliṇṇōlainallūr, it lies to the east. Then going in westerly and north-westerly directions on the south bank of the channel, which carries water to the tank of this Mīlagaṇūr and forms the southern boundary of Vāgaikuḍi and the northern boundary of Tirumāliṇṇōlainallūr, and crossing the channel which carries water to the tank of this Tirumāliṇṇōlainallūr and reaching the tiruvālikkal planted at the north-west corner of this Tirumāliṇṇōlainallūr, and then going north-west along the south bank of the channel of Mīlagaṇūr, which forms the northern boundary of Śīrakuḍi alias Virakāmugamaṅgalam in Aḷagiyaṇḍiyakkulakkīl and the southern boundary of Vāgaikuḍi, and then going northwards on the west bank of the channel of Mīlagaṇūr which forms the eastern boundary of Veḷḷūrkuṇṇuchi in Aḷagiyaṇḍiyakkulakkīl, the dēvadāna of Uḍaiyār Tiruppuvaṇamuḍaiyār and the western boundary of Vāgaikuḍi, and crossing this channel and reaching the southern boundary of Viḍattal alias Māṇābharaṇa-chaturvēdimaṅgalam in Kiraṇūr-nāḍu, it lies to the east. Then going eastwards on this boundary along the kaḷar-parippu and reaching the northern extremity of the tank of Vāgaikuḍi, it lies to the east. Then going eastwards along this bank and descending this bank and going eastwards on the boundary ridge, which forms the northern boundary of Vāgaikuḍi and the southern boundary of Māṇābharaṇa-chaturvēdimaṅgalam, and leaving to the right the temple of Māṇābharaṇa-Īsaramuḍaiyār at Vāgaikuḍi and going eastwards on the boundary ridge and reaching the boundary channel flowing eastwards from the tank at Vāgaikuḍi, then going eastwards along the northern ridge of this channel, and passing this channel and going eastwards on the ridge, which is to the north of Ariyāl-vayakkal in Vāgaikuḍi-ṇaṇṇu and to the south of Uyyavandāl-vayakkal in Māṇābharaṇa-chaturvēdimaṅgalappaṇṇu, and reaching the channel which carries water to the tank of Nakkamaṅgalam, and then going (successively) in north, north-west and north-east directions on the western bank of this channel and approaching the western extremity of the tank of Tuttiyūr and going on the western bank of this channel (successively) in north, north-east and north-west directions, and then going westwards on the boundary ridge, which forms the southern boundary of the land called Araimākkūṇṇu in Tiruvāvaṇam and the northern boundary of Māṇābharaṇa-chaturvēdimaṅgalam, and reaching the bank of the tank of Māṇābharaṇa-chaturvēdimaṅgalam, it lies to the east. Then going northwards along the grassy bank of this tank and reaching the bank of Śīrēmbal of Araimākkūṇṇu, then going westwards on the southern bank of this ēmbal and crossing the channel which carries water to the tank of Mīlagaṇūr, and going (successively) in north and north-west directions on the western bank of this channel and getting into this channel and then getting up the eastern bank of this channel and then going northwards along the nir-nakkal in the ēmbal of Araimākkūṇṇu and crossing the channel which was carrying water to the tank of Tuttiyūr, and going northwards on the western ridge of Kaṇavadi-vayakkal, which forms the eastern boundary of Veḷḷūrkuṇṇuchi in Aḷagiyaṇḍiyakkulakkīl, a dēvadāna of Uḍaiyār Tiruppuvaṇamuḍaiyār, and the western boundary of Tiruvāvaṇam, and leaving to the right Vāykaṭṭātturavu in the north-western corner of this Kaṇavadiṇayakkal and crossing the channel of Tiruvāṇam, and going northwards on the boundary, which is to the east of Veḷḷūrkuṛuēchi and to the west of Tiruvāṇam, and descending into the Vaigai alias Śrīvallabhappērāru, (it lies to the east).

(Ll. 317-338) The northern boundary: Going eastwards along this Vaigai alias Śrīvallabhappērāru and getting up the northern bank of the channel carrying water to the tank of Paṇaṅgalūr, then going eastwards along this bank and descending into (the river called) Kaḷavaḷināḍaṇ-āru and going northwards along this river and reaching the road leading to Vēmbaṅguḍi from Iḍaikkāṭṭūr and getting up the eastern bank, it lies to the south. Then going in a north-easterly direction along this road and crossing the channel which carries water from this Kaḷavaḷināḍaṇ-āru to the tank of Seyyakulattūr, then going in a north-easterly direction along this road and getting up the bank of the tank of Adikarai, and then going in a north-westerly direction along this bank and reaching what forms the northern extremity of this tank and the southern boundary of Āykuḍi, it lies to the south. Then going eastwards along this boundary and reaching the northern entrance of the nattam of Vēlaṅguḍi and further on reaching the western extremity of the tank of this Vēlaṅguḍi, it lies to the south. Going from this in a north-easterly direction and reaching the western boundary of Kuḍaṇjāḍi, and then going in north and north-easterly directions along this boundary and reaching the kombu on the western extremity of the tank of Kuḍaṇjāḍi, it lies to the south. Going from this in a north-easterly direction and then in east and south-east directions on the nīr-naḱkal of the tank which forms the southern boundary of Śunḍankuruechi and the northern boundary of this Kuḍaṇjāḍi, and crossing the channel which flows from the eastern extremity of this tank, and then going in a south-easterly direction and crossing the big road leading from Iḍaikkāṭṭūr of Veḷḷūr-Śirukuḍi to Vēmbaṅguḍi and then going eastwards, then going again eastwards on the agarāy of Uḍaikuḷam, which is called by the names Kāṭṭuttēyṁ and Piḍārikulam, and getting up the eastern extremity of this tank and going south-east, and then leaving to the right the dry lands ploughed by Śemberumāṇ, a neighbouring resident of Kīraṇūrnāḍāḷvāṅkōṭṭai, and going in east and south directions and crossing the road leading from Seyyakulattūr to Vēmbaṅguḍi, then going eastwards and crossing the channel that was caused to be dug by Muttan Ālvān alias Sundarapāṇḍiyan-Mārāyan for feeding the tanks of Seyyakulattūr, then going east and north-east, and (afterwards) passing eastwards along the agarāy of the Uḍaikuḷam of Mēṭ-Chūrai and then going eastwards along the agarāy of the tank of Kiṭ-Chūrai and getting up the eastern extremity of this tank, the she-elephant stopped (having come to the place) where she originally started.

NO. 12.—TIRUPPUVANAM SUPPLEMENTARY PLATE.

By K. V. SUBRAHMANYA AIYER, B.A., COIMBATORE.

This is a single plate which bears writing on both the sides, the first having 17 lines and the second, 15 lines.

Excepting the last two and a half lines, the writing on both the sides bears close resemblance to that on the Tiruppūvaṇam plates of Jaṭavarman Kuḷaśekhara I edited above. The sign of visarga is used as a punctuation mark in lines 1 and 15. This and the employment of the symbol resembling ya to denote ppa (l. 11), the preferential use of r before hard consonants, t in ūṟṟaḷiṟ-t° (ll. 2 and 17), taviṟtu (ll. 4 and 19) and pāṟtu (ll. 3 and 8), ch in aruḷār-ch° (l. 27), and k in sabhai-yāṟku (ll. 2 and 16), as well as the general shape of all the letters point to the fact that the writer of this plate must be identical with the one that incised the previous set of eleven plates. In the above examples, sabhaiyāṟku, taviṟtu and pāṟtu are instances of wrong spelling.

There are, strictly speaking, two inscriptions on this plate. Lines 1 to 15 register an order issued by king Tribhuvanachakravartin Kōṇēriṇmaikoṇḍāṇ to the assembly of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalaṁ, while lines 15 to 32 purport to emanate from the temple of Tiruppūvaṇam to the same assembly. The subject in both is practically the same as will be seen in the sequel. The first contains the date "11th year (of reign) and 108th day" but mentions the king only by the general title Tribhuvanachakravartin Kōṇēriṇmaikoṇḍāṇ. The second states the name of the king to be Sundara-Pāṇḍya 'who presented the Chōḷa country'; eleventh year (of reign) occurs in the body of the record.

In the Tiruppūvaṇam plates of Jaṭavarman Kuḷaśekhara I, we are informed that in constituting the new village of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalaṁ, three of the dēvadāna properties of the temple of Tiruppūvaṇamuḍaiyār, viz., Vāgaikuḍi in Kiranūr-nāḍu (l. 20), Muttūranāroṭṭai in Mēṟkuḍi-nāḍu (ll. 59f.) and Śirukilāṅkāṭṭūr in Purapparaḷai-nāḍu (l. 68), were taken up and included in it. It is usual in such cases to give other lands in exchange. The Tiruvālaṅkāḍu plates evidence such a practice. And even in the large Tiruppūvaṇam plates we find it stated that in place of Mīḷagaṇūr which, like the dēvadāna lands of the Tiruppūvaṇam temple, had been taken up and included in Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalaṁ, a number of lands were given and they were formed into a fresh village called Rājendraśūṅgaṇallūr which was placed in the Division of Aebehaṅkāṭṭīrukkai (ll. 111f.). But it is not stated in those plates what was done to compensate the Tiruppūvaṇam temple for the loss it sustained in being deprived of certain properties. What is not stated there forms the subject of this supplementary plate.

The first inscription on this plate states (1) that the villages of Vāgaikuḍi, Muttūranāroṭṭai and Śirukilāṅkāṭṭūr, which were among the dēvadāna properties of the temple of Tiruppūvaṇamuḍaiyār, had been taken away and added to Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalaṁ; (2) that up to the tenth year (of the reign of Sundara-Pāṇḍya I), after annual crop examination, the lands of the said three villages had been regularly paying kaḍamai to the temple of Tiruppūvaṇam; (3) that this payment was then put a stop to and in its place, it was settled that an amount of twenty-five kāṣu in all,—ten kāṣu for Vāgaikuḍi, ten kāṣu for Muttūranāroṭṭai and five kāṣu for Śirukilāṅkāṭṭūr,—had to be paid every year from the eleventh year onwards to the temple of Tiruppūvaṇam and that in paying this, half must be given in kāṣu and the other half in paddy, on the basis of a never diminishing (i.e., permanent) investment; (4) and that on this settlement being recommended to the king by his brother-in-law Aḷagapperumāl, he ordered the issue of kēḷvi to that effect, and directed also the engraving of the same on stone and copper. It bears the date '11th year and 108th day' and is signed by three officials.

The second inscription calls the first document a piṭipāḍu issued by Sundara-Pāṇḍya 'who presented the Chōḷa country' to the assembly of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalaṁ, recites its contents and lays down the procedure to be adopted in making the payment, settled therein. It says that the agreed amount of money (kāṣu) must be paid and the quantity of paddy measured out, every year, in the premises of the temple kitchen, and for the payment thus made, receipts must be obtained from the temple signed by the accountant and the kaṇmi. The signatories to this inscription are a Śaivāchārya, two Śivabrāhmaṇas and Mūdal-Kaṇakku (the treasury accountant). At the end, it is said that the document was caused to be made by Śāstra-Bhaṭṭāraka, son of Jaṭādhara the ornament of the village of Aṅgārakamaṅgalam. It must have been on this occasion that the large Tiruppūvaṇam plates, wherein the inclusion of the three dēvadāna villages in Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam is specified, must have been engraved and kept along with the supplementary plate as its mūlasāsana. Hence, it is that we find that all the plates are written in the same hand and are in the possession of the Tiruppūvaṇam temple.

Ordinarily the State did not interfere with temple properties. This is made plain by such statements as “ivv-ūrgaḷiṟ=paḷan-dēvadānam paḷlichechandam.....nēkki” found in the large Tiruppūvaṇam plates.¹ It is also clear from the fact that the Tiruppūvaṇam temple, in spite of the inclusion of three of its dēvadāna lands in the newly formed brahmadēya, had been regularly getting the kaḷamai from them from the date of the grant of the brahmadēya, which, as we know from the large set, was the eleventh year opposite to the thirteenth year of the reign of Jaṭavarman Kuḷaśēkhara I (A.D. 1204) till the tenth year of the reign of Māṇavarman Sundara-Pāṇḍya I (A.D. 1226). When, owing to any special reasons, dēvadānas had to be taken away and turned to other purposes—here for forming the brahmadēya—the original incumbrances were not deprived of their income but were adequately compensated. The king's brother-in-law Aḷagapperumāl must have been appointed to hold an enquiry and settle the compensation to be awarded to the dispossessed owner of the resumed dēvadāna. The result of his enquiry is embodied in this inscription.

The first inscription being a State document is signed by State officials, and the second, being one issued by the temple, bears the signatures of temple officials. The temples in those days had regularly constituted bodies of their own to see to their management. These bodies were known as uṇṇāḷigaiyār or uṇṇāḷigai-sabhaiyār.² I have referred to the constitutional character of the bodies known as Paṇ-Māhēśvaras in the case of Śiva temples and Śrī-Vaiṣṇavas in the case of Viṣṇu temples elsewhere.³ Here we may note some of the numerous officers that were employed in temple bodies.⁴ They are (1) Kaṇakku-Mūdal or Mūdal-Kaṇakku, (2) Kaṇakku, or Karaṇattāṇ, (3) Dēvakaṇmi, (4) Śthānāchārya or Śaivāchārya, (5) Pūjikkum-Nambi and other Nambis, (6) Kōyil-Nāyakam, (7) Tiruvilaicheṇṇai-kaṇkāṇi, (8) Poṟ-Paṇḍāri, (9) Śādana (Śāsana)-Paṇḍāri, (10) Śrī-Māhēśvara-Kaṇkāṇi, (11) Śrīkāryam-ṣeyvār, (12) Śrīkōyil-Vāriyam-ṣeyvār or Vāriya-Perumakkaḷ, etc.

In transactions in which the temple is concerned, some of these officials affix their signatures. In a record of the time of Kulōttuṅga I five temple officials, viz., Māhēśvara-Kaṇkāṇi, Śivabrāhmaṇa, Pūjikkum-Nambi, Karaṇattāṇ and a Paṇ-Māhēśvara have attested.⁵ Another record gives ten of the different officials noticed above.⁶ A third document is addressed to Śrīkōyil-vāriyam-ṣeyvār, Dēvarkaṇmis, Paṇḍāris and Karaṇattāṇ.⁷ It is consistent with this custom that the second document issued by the temple of Tiruppūvaṇam to the assembly of Rājagambhīra- chaturvēdimaṅgalam in pursuance of the royal order, was signed by the Śaivāchārya, Śivabrāhmaṇas and the Mudal-Kaṇakku, besides Śāstra-Bhaṭṭāraka, son of Jaṭādhara.

A few terms that occur in this plate deserve to be noted. These are kēlvi, piḍipāḍu, aḍuk-kaḷaiṭṭuppuram, kaḍamai and vāḍā-kkaḍamai. Kēlvi is the noun derived from the root, 'kēl' to 'hear'. It is used in inscriptions to denote both 'an office' and 'a royal order'. Among the official attendants on the king, some were called 'kēlvi' and the duty of the kēlvi officers seems to be 'to communicate to the Department concerned any order of the king just as they heard it said by him'. In communicating such oral orders, they stated the occasion when, and the attendant circumstances under which the king gave them. Besides meaning the class of officials, the term kēlvi came to be applied to the document containing the royal oral order put in proper form and signed by the State officials.² This term is sometimes re-placed by (nam-ōlai) 'Royal order'. It is worthy of note that in this plate kēlvi and piḍipāḍu are made to refer to the same thing. In the Vēlvikuḍi plates we meet with the expression *kēlvi-andaṇālar*³ which conveys the same sense as śrōtriya-Brāhmaṇa. The term piḍipāḍu consists of the roots piḍi 'hold or bind' and pāḍu 'terms or sources' and means 'a deed of support, a letter of authority embodying the conditions to be fulfilled and authorising the possession of a thing or property', or 'a title-deed'. It is of such a general nature that it could be applied to any kind of document. The following extracts will make its application clear :—

"ṣiriya iṭṭa paḍikkku eṇṇum iḍu piḍipāḍāga"⁴ meaning "for having given it back, this shall be the deed of support"; "iṇv-āṇḍu kār-mudal kaḍamai irukkumiḍattu mātṭāl nellu paḍin-kalamāga pū oṇṇukku nellu... kuḍuttu iṇar kaiyāl taravu koḷvōmāgavum ippaḍi sammadittu piḍipāḍu kuḍuttōm"⁵ meaning "agreeing to pay ten kalam of paddy on each mā of land at each harvest and to obtain receipt therefor we gave this piḍipāḍu (i.e., deed evidencing the terms of holding)". It will be seen that this passage is almost similar to the one in the Tiruppūvaṇam supplementary plate, and that the record belongs to the time of Jaṭavarman Kuḷasēkhara I.

Another inscription which registers a tax-free gift of land, with its previous owners removed, as a naṇḍavaṇappuram, i.e., for the maintenance of a flower garden, uses the words "ippaḍi nam ōlai piḍipāḍāga koṇḍu chandrādityavar śelvadāga".⁶ Here the word piḍipāḍu means 'a deed embodying the terms and authorising the holding of the land as a tax-free gift'. As in the present plate, the royal order (nam ōlai) is termed a piḍipāḍu.

Kaḍamai means 'assessment on land'. The fact that the temple of Tiruppūvaṇam was getting from the three dēvadāna properties kaḍamai annually, after crop examination, shows that they must have been assigned by the State and the temple was entitled to all the dues which it was previously entitled to. The fresh settlement by which the sabhā of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimaṅgalam was made to pay annually twenty-five kāṣu, half in money and the other half in paddy, must be equal to the value of the kaḍamai which the temple was receiving. The word kaḍaṇ being not much different from kaḍamai, vāḍā-kaḍamai may be equated with vāḍā-kaḍaṇ. This is quite appropriate in this case where the temple had been realising kaḍamai on lands and the lands had been given over to the brahmadēya. The term *vāḍā-kaḍamai*¹ is used in other inscriptions also in the sense of 'permanent assessment on lands'. As applied to debts, vāḍā-kaḍaṇ means a loan in which fixed interest had to be paid, the capital remaining unchanged or undiminished. This is the case in all permanent endowments. Sometimes it is even stated that the debtor should not at any time offer to pay up the capital and free himself from the binding to pay interest. Fuller expression for such debts is mudal-vāḍā-kaḍaṇ.² *Aḍukkaḷaippuṇam*³ means 'for the requirements of the kitchen, i.e., for offerings'. All gifts to temples are dēvadānaś. According to the purpose for which the gifts are made, they fall under different heads such as tirunandarappaṇṇam, tirunālaippuṇam, aḍukkaḷaippuṇam, tiruviḷakkuppuṇam, etc.

TRANSLATION.

(Lines 1 to 15) Hail ! Prosperity ! From the Emperor of the three worlds Kōṇṇēriṇmai-koṇḍāṇ to the assembly of Rājagambhīra-chaturvvedimaṅgalam in Rājagambhīra-vaḷanāḍu.

⁷ The Sanskrit verse at the end covering the latter part of line 29 and the subsequent two and a half lines is engraved in a different hand. Perhaps Śāstra-Bhaṭṭāraka himself wrote it and the engraver incised it.

As Vāgaikuḍi, Muttūranāroṭṭai and Śirukiḷāṅkāṭṭūr which were among the dēvadāna villages of (the god) Uḍaiyār Tiruppuvaṇam-uḍaiyār and which, up to the tenth year (of Our reign), had been subject to (annual) crop examination and payment of kaḍamai (to the temple of Tiruppuvaṇam), had been included in your village, this (payment of kaḍamai) had been made to cease, and as Our brother-in-law Aḷagapperumāl had told Us that (an amount of) twenty-five kāṣu,—ten kāṣu for Vāgaikuḍi, ten kāṣu for Muttūranāroṭṭai and five kāṣu for Śirukiḷāṅkāṭṭūr,—had been determined to be paid as oṭṭu, for every year from the eleventh year (onwards), and that out of this amount, (one) half had to be paid in kāṣu and (the other) half in paddy, We have ordered the issue of kēḷvi to the same effect.¹ You may have this engraved on stone and copper so as to last till the Moon and the Sun (endure). This is the signature of Araiyaṇ Ādiehahadēvaṇ alias Yādavarāyaṇ of Achchutavayal in Śevvirukkai-nāḍu. The year 11 and days 108. This is the signature of Araiyaṇ Kariyamāl alias Adigaimāṇ of Veṅkāṇūr in Vaḍatalai-Śembi-nāḍu. This is the signature of Mandari² Rāmaṇ alias Pallavarāyaṇ of Perumaṇalūr in Aṇḍa-nāḍu.

(Ll. 15ff.) Hail! Prosperity! This is the permanent edict, which was the cause of creation, protection and destruction of all the worlds, of (the god) Śambhu residing in the glorious Pushpavana. To the assembly of Rājagambhīra-chaturvēdimāṅalam in Rājagambhīra-vaṇa-nāḍu.

Whereas, after (annual) crop examination, We³ have been receiving, up to the tenth year of (the reign of) Our son⁴ Sundara-Pāṇḍyadēva who had presented the Chōḷa country, kaḍamai from Vāgaikuḍi, Muttūranāroṭṭai and Śirukiḷāṅkāṭṭūr which were among the villages attached to Our kitchen and which had been included in your village, and whereas this (payment of kaḍamai) had been made to cease and (in its place) We had declared that an amount of twenty-five kāṣu in all—ten kāṣu for Vāgaikuḍi, ten kāṣu for Muttūranāroṭṭai and five kāṣu for Śirukiḷāṅkāṭṭūr—should be paid to Us as oṭṭu on the basis of a permanent investment, every year from the eleventh year (onwards), (therefore), in accordance with the piḍipāḍu issued to you in this wise by Our son⁴ Sundara-Pāṇḍyadēva, (the amount of) paddy and kāṣu should be measured out and given to Our accountants and *kaṇṇi*s (servants) at the premises of Our kitchen and receipt taken. By order,⁵ this is the signature of the Saivāchārya Pāḷarāvāyaṇ alias Aḷagiyadēva-Bhaṭṭaṇ of the Bhāradvāja-gōtra. By order, this is the signature of Tiruppuvaṇamuḍaiyaṇ Viḥṇēśvaraṇ alias Viṇāyaka-Bhaṭṭaṇ. By order, this is the signature of Pāḷarāvāyaṇ Ammaidēvaṇ alias Aḷagiyānāyaka-Bhaṭṭaṇ, a dēvakaṇṇi among the Sivabrāhmaṇas of this god. By order, this is the signature of Kēśavaṇ Kshētrajāṇ alias Brakma-Pallavaraiyaṇ, a Kāṇyapa and one of the challār (students). By order, this is the signature of the treasury accountant⁶ Dānaviṇōḍa-Mūvēndavēḷaṇ.

(Ll. 29ff.) The illustrious Śāstra-Bhaṭṭāraka, who was the lord of the lady Learning, who was famous as the sole forehead-mark of Aṅgārakamaṅgala, who was the son of Jaṭādhara and who was foremost among scholars, had this permanent grant, properly fixing the boundaries, written at Rājagambhīraka, the best of villages.

² This word may stand for mantrin 'minister'. But as in all places where it occurs, both here and in the previous inscription, it is consistently spelt Mandari, there is strong suspicion that it may form part of the proper name of the individual.

³ 'We' here refers to god.

⁴ The king is called the son of the god.

⁶ The term mudal may also be taken as 'chief, head or first'.

No. 13.—KODURU GRANT OF ANA-VOTA-REDDI: ŚAKA 1280.

By H. K. NARASIMHASWAMI, B.Sc., MADRAS.

The set of plates containing the inscription edited below was discovered in the village of Kōḍūru in the Guḍivāḍa taluk of the Kistna District by the villagers while ploughing a field. The plates are now in the possession of Vidvān Pūrṇakuṣumba Rao of Guḍḷavallēru, from whom I secured them during my tour in the district in November 1936. The inscription has been reviewed in the Annual Report on South Indian Epigraphy for that year (Appendix A, No. 4) and I now publish it with the kind permission of the Superintendent for Epigraphy.

The set consists of five plates strung on to an oval ring $3\frac{1}{2}$ " by $4\frac{1}{2}$ " and weighs together with the ring 287 tolas. The ring does not bear any seal. The plates measure 10" by $4\frac{1}{2}$ " each and are inscribed on both the sides including the first and the last. The writing is in an excellent state of preservation. The inscription is in the Telugu script of the medieval period. The alphabet does not call for any special comment except that the letter bha is written with or without the mark of aspiration at the bottom, as in nābhēr in l. 6, gagan-ēbha in l. 28, etc., but it invariably occurs without it when the vowel signs ā or ū are attached to it or when it occurs in a conjunct consonant, e.g., bhāga (l. 2), bhū-dāna (l. 9), bhūpaḥ (l. 18), etc., and °d=bhayaarasō (l. 21), viprēbhyaḥ (l. 32), etc. The letter ri is written like the modern bhu without its lower stroke of aspiration but with an additional kommu or u sign attached to it (ll. 36, 39, 41, etc.). The whole record is written in Sanskrit verse and prose, except the portion specifying the boundaries of the village granted, which is in Telugu (ll. 57 to 72). Lines 1 to 32 consist of fourteen verses in different metres while lines 33 to 56, in which the donees with their respective shares are specified, are in prose. The inscription ends with the usual imprecatory verses and a verse which gives the name of the poet who composed the grant (ll. 72 to 77). In respect of orthography the following points may be noted :—(a) The use of the anusvāra instead of the class nasal and the unnecessary doubling of the following consonant as in jagamūti for jaganti (l. 1), °vanūtau for °vantau and rathāmga for rathānga (l. 4), etc.; (b) doubling of the consonant after the rēpha as in kīrtti (l. 12), °r=vvībhinnā (l. 15), Yajur-vvēdī (l. 42), etc.; (c) incorrect omission of the aspirate as in Pārtta for Pārtha (l. 15), and the sonant for the surd as in tiḍhau for tithau (l. 29), Radhītara for Radhītara (l. 50). In rya the r is always written in full and the secondary form of ya attached to it as at present.

The grant belongs to the time of king Ana-Vōta of the Redḍi dynasty of Koṇḍaviḍu. The inscription opens with a verse in praise of the Boar incarnation of Viṣṇu. The subsequent nine verses which are identical with those of the Pachchani-Tāṇḍiparṇu grant of Ana-Vēma¹ recount, in order, the praise of the Sun and the Moon (v. 2), the birth of the fourth caste, i.e., that of the Śūdras from the lotus-feet of Viṣṇu and the birth in it of Prōlaya-Vēma who constructed the flight of steps leading to Śrīśaila, made all the gifts enumerated by Hēmādri, performed various meritorious deeds and who defeated several hostile kings (vv. 3-7). To him were born Ana-Vōta and Ana-Vēma who were in splendour, like the Sun and the Moon (v. 8). The next three verses are devoted to the description of the might and valour of Ana-Vōta, the donor of the grant, who instilled fear into the hearts of his enemies by the very sound of his war-drums (vv. 9-12). In the Śaka year 1280 (expressed by the chronogram gagana 0, ībha 8, and sūrya 12) in the month of Pauṣa, on darśa, Tuesday, during the solar eclipse, king Ana-Vōta granted to sixty-one Brāhmins of different gōtras and sākḥās, the village of Kōḍūru renamed Annavōtapuram, on the bank of the Malāpabā, along with the eight kinds of aishvarya and bhōga. The English equivalent of the date according to the Indian Ephemeris of L. D. S. Pillai is A.D. 1358, January 9, Tuesday, on which day amāvāsya commenced at 51 of the day. The solar eclipse, however, is shown to have occurred on the next day, i.e., Wednesday, on which day amāvāsya lasted till 43 of the day.

The composer of the grant is Bālasarasvatī, a name which sounds very much like a title probably acquired by the person on account of his profound scholarship. Besides the Pachchani-Tāndiparru grant already referred to, he is the composer of two other inscriptions of Ana-Vēma, of which one is a copper-plate record,¹ and the other a stone inscription at Śrīśailam². In all these records Bālasarasvatī calls himself the Vidyān of the king's court and he seems to have held this position up to Śaka 1299, in which year he composed the Śrīśailam inscription mentioned above; for, in the next year, i.e., Śaka 1300, we find Trilohanañchūrya figuring as the court-poet of Ana-Vēma and composing a copper-plate grant of the king.³

Attention may be drawn here to an unpublished fragmentary copper-plate inscription of Ana-Vōta recorded in the Elliot Collection of *Telugu Inscriptions*⁴, which furnishes us with some important facts. One of the donees figuring in it is a certain Mallu-bhaṭṭa who is called a Vidyādhikārin. We know that the famous poet Śrīnātha was the Vidyādhikārin in the court of Kōmaṭi-Vēma.⁵ Probably he succeeded Mallu-bhaṭṭa in this office. Of the duties of a Vidyādhikārin nothing is known from inscriptions, but that it must have been a responsible and high office is evident from the fact that so eminent a poet as Śrīnātha held it.⁶ Unfortunately nothing is known of his predecessor Mallu-bhaṭṭa. Another donee figuring in the Elliot Collection record is a certain Errāya-pregaḍa. His gōtra, however, is not mentioned as in the case of the other donees, but he is introduced in respectful terms and is stated to be a recipient of an exclusively large share of land. It is therefore likely that this person is identical with the famous poet Errā-pregaḍa, who belonged to the Śrīvatsa-gōtra and who is reputed to have completed the Andhra-Mahābhārataṃ which was left unfinished by the previous authors, and who dedicated his work Harivaṃśamu to his patron Prōlaya-Vēma. A certain Redḍi-Vēma is known to have granted several agrahānas to Vennalaganṭi Sūranṇa.⁷ The late Rao Bahadur Viresalingam Pantulu who identifies this Redḍi-Vēma with Prōlaya-Vēma believes that Sūranṇa could not have had a place in Vēma's court as long as Errā-pregaḍa held his position there; and therefore, in as much as Sūranṇa was patronised by Redḍi-Vēma, Errā-pregaḍa must have died during the time of Prōlaya himself.⁸ This supposition of the author is untenable, as instances of more than one poet patronised by kings in their courts are not uncommon. The present reference to the poet is therefore important in establishing that he lived in the court of Ana-Vōta also. Besides the Mahābhārataṃ and the Harivaṃśamu, Errā-pregaḍa is the author of two other works, the Rāmāyaṇamu, and the Nṛsiṃhapurāṇamu, of which he dedicated the former to Mallā, a brother of Prōlaya-Vēma and the latter, known also as the Ahobala-māhātmyamu, to the god Narasimha, the presiding deity of Ahobalam, the well-known place of pilgrimage in the Kurnool District.

The chief interest of the present grant lies in the fact that it is the only copper-plate inscription¹ of the king so far discovered. Stone inscriptions of Ana-Vöta known till now number only five and range in date from Saka 1275 to 1283.² The earliest date known for his father Prölaya-Vëma is Saka 1254,³ and an inscription from Mallavaram in the Ongole taluk of the Guntur (formerly Nellore) District gives for him the Saka year 12[7]7, which, if correct, would be his latest date.⁴ But the reading of the latter date appears to be wrong for reasons cited in the foot-note below and may have to be equated with Saka 1267.⁵ An inscription of this king from Tripurantakam is dated in Saka 1268⁶ and this is the latest date so far known for him. His son Ana-Vöta also figures in this record, probably as the crown-prince. That he was a juvarāja in his father's reign is referred to in a verse in Harivamsamu also.⁷ He may therefore be presumed to have succeeded his father some time between Saka 1268 and Saka 1275. The record bearing the Saka date 1283 quoted above refers to the reconstruction of the Amarësvara temple at Dharāṇikōṭa by Vëma-Chāmūpati, the son of Mallinātha who was the minister of Ana-Vöta.⁸ As the renovation was made for the increase of the life, health and prosperity of Ana-Vöta, it may be reasonably presumed that he was ruling in Saka 1283. His defeat at the hands of Māda and Ana-Vöta, sons of Śiṅga, a general, probably, of the Kakatiya king Pratāparudra, is referred to in the Velugōivāri-Vaṁśāvali, and this incident has been assigned to Saka 1283.⁹ Ana-Vëma is said to have succeeded his brother Ana-Vöta after the latter's death.¹⁰ We do not know of any record of Ana-Vëma earlier than Saka 1293.¹¹

² The five records referred to above are (1) Nellore Inscriptions, Part III, p. 1037. This record, dated in Saka 1275, is included in Rangacharya's Topographical List of Inss. (Guntur No. 405) and it refers to Ana-Vöta's minister Mallinātha on whose death his brother made some grants. (2) No. 185 of 1903 of the Madras Epigraphical Collection, dated in Saka 1278. (3 and 4) Nos. 601 and 602 of 1909, both dated in Saka 1280 and (5) No. 258 of 1897. Another record (No. 250 of 1905) dated in Saka 1269 belongs to the reign of Annama Reddi. This has been assigned to Ana-Vöta by Sewell and Krishnāsvarī Ayyangar (Historical Inscriptions of Southern India, p. 191). But it is reasonable to ascribe it to Anna, a younger brother of Prölaya-Vëma, since the date falls within the period of the latter's rule.

⁴ Nellore Inscriptions, Part III, Ongole 73.

which date is nearly a decade later than Ana-Vōta's supposed defeat in Śaka 1283. Whether Ana-Vōta's reign ceased with his defeat at the hands of Śiṅga's sons, and his brother succeeded to the throne forthwith, we must leave for future discovery of fresh records to decide.

A few details about this king gathered from the Elliot Collection record referred to already¹ may be added here. The inscription begins, as usual, with the genealogy of the Redḍi chiefs commencing with Prōla and his sons Mācha, Vēma, Doḍḍa, Anna and Malla by his wife Annamāmbū. Here Vēma's two sons Ana-Vōta and Ana-Vēma are mentioned and the former's exploits recounted. His conquests are said to have extended as far as the banks of the rivers Kṛishṇā and Gautamī, a fact which is corroborated by a verse in the Viśṇupurāṇamu which refers to the defeat by Ana-Vōta of a certain Rāvutu-Kēsa on the banks of the Kṛishṇā before the very eyes of god Amarēśvara.² Ana-Vēma associates himself in this inscription with his brother Ana-Vōta in endowing lands to more than 180 Brāhmanas, amongst whom, besides the Viḍyādhikārin Mallu-bhaṭṭa already mentioned, the mention of Erraya-pregaḍa is of particular interest. Ana-Vēma, it must be noted, is here called Ana-Vēma-Bhūpati Mahārāju (the wording in the inscription is : yī rāju tammunḍu Ana-Vēma-Bhūpati Mahārāju). The date of this inscription is unfortunately lost; but it must have been executed some time prior to Śaka 1293, which is the earliest year known for Ana-Vēma, the successor of Ana-Vōta.

Of the place-names mentioned in the inscription under publication the following, viz., Saṅkanipalli, Vinnakōṭa, Kanumerla, Poṭṭipāḍu and Kalavapūṇḍi, may be identified respectively with the modern Saṅkarshaṇapuram, Vinnakōṭa, Kanumerla, Poṭṭipāḍu and Kaluvapūḍi—all in the Guḍivāḍa taluk of the Kistna District. Gurumajakōḍu may possibly be identical with Guṇṭa-Kōḍūru. The other villages, viz., Rājināyini Pālaparti, Kṛiṅkulamirtti or Kṛiṅkulamirru, Pālakōḍu, and Pulipāḍu, I am unable to identify. Alliguṇṭa may be a pond and Aluka-pannāsa, probably a field. Dāṅkēru and Vannēru must be two local streams. The village Kōḍūru is said to be situated on the banks of the Malāpahā; but there is no stream of this name anywhere in this locality now. The Drujjavaram grant of Ana-Vēma (Śaka 1293) refers to this river as situated in Kurtti-dēsa and the grant village Drujjavaram alias Anna-Vēmapurama situated on the banks of this stream.³ Drujjavaram is evidently the modern Juḷhavaram, which is 12 miles south west of Kōḍūru. Both these villages are situated close to the present Pullēru canal, which appears to be the present representative of the river Malāpahā referred to in the above copper-plate records.

TRANSLATION.

(Verse 1) May the tusk of the Boar-incarnation of the Supreme Being, bearing the earth on its extremity and looking most beautiful like the crescent which is kissed at its cusp by the clouds, protect the worlds.

(Verse 2) May the Sun and the Moon resting (respectively) on the western and eastern mountains during the full-moon evenings and displaying, as it were, (their) former act of being the wheels to the chariot, the earth, of Purāri (i.e., Śiva), dispel your darkness.

(Verse 3) From the lotus feet of the lotus-navelled god (i.e. Viṣṇu) was horn, for the good of the world, the noble fourth caste, virtuous, illustrious with rich life and divided hundredfold like the sacred Ganges rich with profuse water and split into a hundred branches.

(Verse 4) In that (caste) was born (a king) named Prōlaya-Vēma who constructed steps to Śrīśaila (mountain), who was expert in making gifts mentioned in the work on rituals (Kalpa) by Hēmādri and whose fame was established by his gifts of limitless lands.

(Verse 5) King Vēma made the Vṛisha (lit. bull; i.e., Dharma) which was one-legged on account of the evil of the Kali age and (so) was limping in his walk, steady in its course by the power of the Vēdas (being chanted with pada and krama) by the Brāhmins to whom agrahāra (villages) had been given.

(Verse 6) I fancy that the names spoken of in other yugas such as Dharmātmaja, Dāśarathi and Prithu are the sacred old names of king Vēma (himself).

(Verse 7) When the Nāga women were chanting his (i.e., Prōlaya-Vēma's) glory, the serpent king, being unable to see the beauty of their faces, which was the root of love, and at the same time listen to the musical composition (sung by them), could not hear (the reputation of) hearing through the eyes

(Verse 8) When he attacked (the enemy) kings in fight, the crest-jewels of his foes, split by the arrows of him who was (like) Pārtha in battle, scattered about as though they were the sparks of the fire of his valour.

(Verse 9) From this king Vēma were born as from the eastern mountain, two sons (viz.), prince Ana-Vōta and prince śrī-Anna-Vēma, the protector of the world—who were the receptacles of valour and great splendour, who were equal to the Sun and the Moon in lustre.

(Verse 10) When the hearts of the enemies were broken by the deep sounds of the war-drums of king Ana-Vōta, the sentiment of fear coming from some unknown quarter drove away the spirit of heroism which was there already. It is meet that a powerful (current) of new water drives away the old water.

(Verse 11) The fire lit to the military barracks during the attacks on the palace of the enemy kings, shining with sparks that are the thick drops flowing from the pavement made of gold, looks, by the heat of its great glow, like (lit. puts on the garb of) the golden mountain (i.e., Hēmādri) which is combined with its hill ranges and the golden streams and is covered with rows of stars.

(Verse 12) The shrewd (lit. who had wisdom as their support) ministers (of the enemy kings) advise their masters, who were repeating the names of Arjuna immediately after hearing the sound of his (i.e., Ana-Vōta's) war-drums which resembled the sound of thunder, that those military titles of him who was the Arjuna on the battle-field (i.e., Ana-Vōta) should (instead) be repeated always for their protection.

(Verse 13) In the Śaka year counted by gaganā (0), vha (8), and sūrya (12), (i.e., 1280), in the month of Pausa, on a Tuesday which had the darśa (tithi)—during the solar eclipse, king Ana-Vōta gladly gave to the Brāhmins the village Kōḍūru along with the eight aśvāryas and eight bhāgas.

(Verse 14) May the village by name Annavōtapuram situated on the banks of the river Malāpahā and given to the Brāhmins shine (supreme) as long as the Sun and the Moon (last).

(Lines 33 to 56) The names of the 61 donees with their gōlras and shares are enumerated (see list on pp. 140 ff.).

(Lines 57 to 72) The boundaries of the gift-village are specified in Telugu.

(Lines 72 to 77) Three imprecatory verses and a verse stating that the composer of the grant was Bālasarasvatī, the vidvān of king Ana-Vōta, are given here.

No. 14.—THREE COPPER-PLATE GRANTS FROM MAYURBHANJ.¹

By R. C. MAJUMDAR, M.A., Ph.D., VICE-CHANCELLOR, DACCA UNIVERSITY.

A.—Ādipur Copper-plate of Narēndrabhañjadēva.

This is a single plate measuring about 11" by 8½". It contains 41 lines of writing engraved on both sides. A circular seal, representing a full-blown lotus, is attached to the middle of the top of the plate. The seal has a diameter of 3½", and on its surface is engraved, in relief, inside a raised circular rim, the figure of a humped bull with that of a small crescent above it, and the legend 'Śrī-Narēndrabhañjadēvasya' below. There is a floral design underneath the legend. The seal bears a very close resemblance to that of Tribhuvana Mahādēvi of the Kara dynasty.²

The plate was discovered in 1927 by a Kōl peasant in course of digging a field near the village of Ādipur in the Pāñchpir Sub-division of Mayūrbhanj State, and is now preserved in the Mayūrbhanj State Museum at Bāripadā. Mr. K. C. Neogy, the Dewan of the Mayūrbhanj State, kindly sent the plate to me for decipherment, and I am editing it from the original.

The plate is in a fair state of preservation, except a small part of the reverse which is badly corroded, with the result that a few letters in the formal portion of the grant are not legible.

The alphabet belongs to the Northern type and resembles that used in the Pāla records of the tenth century A. D. It contains numerical symbols for 200, 90, 3 and 1.

The language is Sanskrit. With the exception of eleven verses, including the usual imprecatory verses, the inscription is written in prose. Some of these verses are, however, very faulty, and require addition or omission of letters to suit the requirements of the metre. The author's knowledge of Sanskrit was rather poor and there are many mistakes both in spelling and in grammar.

As regards orthography, ḍ and v are not distinguished; the anusvāra is represented in some cases by guttural ṇ (vaṇṣē in line 6), while the final dental n is represented by anusvāra (śatrūṇ in line 11, bhūpālāṇ in line 15). Consonants are usually doubled after r, but there are exceptions (kṛmīr=bhūtiā in line 29). Some other peculiarities seem to have been due to the ignorance of the author. Mention may be made of the use of ś for s (āśil in line 3, Śmāra in line 10, prasaśaktaḥ in line 13, śālila in line 20); of ṛi for r (kṛiyatē in line 32, śṛiyam= in line 34); of ī for i (Bhāīānīśah in line 2, āśil in line 3, śarīram= in line 31, kīrttayō in line 35); and of u for ū (purvīa in line 17).

As examples of the faulty knowledge of grammar may be mentioned mānīs=tyāgīr in line 6, uktañ=cha ddharmā-sāstrē in line 24, chēta in line 32, and vundu=llōlām in line 33.

The author's scanty knowledge of Sanskrit literature is best exemplified by the way in which the names of gōtras and pravaras are given, in lines 17-18.

The inscription records the grant of the village Vṛi(Bṛi)hat-Sārāi in Urṭti-vishaya in Khij-jiṅga by king Narēndrabhañja, son of king Vibhramatuṅga, and grandson of Kōṭṭabhañja. At the end of the record proper, there is a sort of postscript written in smaller characters, referring to a Grant in the same district by Mahārāja Raṇabhañjadēva, son of Vibhramatuṅga, and, therefore, a brother of Narēndrabhañja. The date, samvat 293, at the end of the record, evidently refers to this latter Grant. It appears at first sight that after the inscription recording the grant of Narēndrabhañja was engraved on the copper-plate, a small space remained vacant, and it was subsequently utilised for making a brief record of the other Grant, leading to the natural presumption, that Raṇabhañja was the younger brother of Narēndrabhañja and ruled after him. But some peculiarities in Inscription B, edited below, seem to point to the opposite conclusion.

The donee in the first Grant was Bhaṭṭaputra Śītaladēva-śarman belonging to Bahv-riṣha-charaṇa, Āśvalāyana-śākhā, and Vatsa-gōtra. The donee in the other case was Bhaṭṭaputra Trivikrama.

The inscription is of great historical importance as it furnishes new materials for the reconstruction of the history of the Bhañja dynasty. The kings mentioned in it, viz., Kōṭṭabhañja, his son Vibhramatuṅga, and the two sons of the latter, viz., Narēndrabhañja and Raṇabhañja, belong to what has been called the second group of Bhañja kings by Mr. R. D. Banerji.¹ This group is now known to us from the following eight copper-plate grants, though Mr. Banerji knew only the first three of them.

1. Bāmanghāṭi² plate of Raṇabhañja.³
2. Khaṇḍadēuli plate of Raṇabhañja.⁴
3. Bāmanghāṭi² plate of Rājabhañja.⁵
4. Ukhunda plate of Prithvibhañja.⁶
5. Kēśari plate of Śatrubhañja⁶ (re-edited below, C).
- 6-7. Two Ādipur copper-plates of Narēndrabhañjadēva (edited below, A and B).
8. Ādipur copper-plate of Durjayabhañjadēva.⁷

The first two Grants now edited (Nos. 6-7) closely resemble Nos. 1-4 and possess all the special characteristics which distinguish them from those of the other Bhañja kings.⁸ As a matter of fact the texts of the historical portion of all these Grants (except Nos. 5 and 8) seem to have been derived from a common draft, though slight modifications have been introduced here and there. No. 5 contains some important additions which are not to be found in others, while No. 8 omits altogether the traditional account of the origin of the family.

All these records (except No. 8) begin with a reference to Virabhadra, the Ādi-Bhañja or the First Bhañja, also called Gaṇadaṇḍa. He is said to have come out of an egg of pea-hen in the hermitage called Kōṭyāśrama and was brought up by the sage Vasiṣṭha.⁹ Only No. 5 adds a few more details, particularly that he was the lord of 88,000 villages.¹⁰ All the records (except No. 8) refer next to Kōṭṭabhañja who must be regarded as the first historical king of the family known to us. The names of the successors of Kōṭṭabhañja are, however, given differently in the different plates (Nos. 1-8).

³ Nos. 1 and 3 were originally edited by Babu Pratāpa Chandra Ghōṣa in J. A. S. B., Vol. XL, pp. 161ff., and subsequently re-edited by Babu Nagendranāth Vasu in the Archaeological Survey of Mayurbhanja, Vol. I, pp. 141ff. A stanza engraved on the pedestal of an image, now in the Khiching Museum, refers to a king called Rāyabhañja who may be the same as this king Rājabhañja (Ann. Rep. Arch. Survey, 1922-3, p. 128). But it contains no historical information. According to Mr. R. D. Banerji this Rāyabhañja was a different king (Orissa, p. 183).

⁹ Ins. No. 8 applies some of these epithets to Raṇabhañja.

¹⁰ Mr. Misra, who edits the plate, translates the passage as follows: "..... Virabhadra who formerly was busily engaged by 88,000 sages, and in view of their request Rāmadēva served him and then made him the lord of 88,000 villages". This meaning is very doubtful. The word read as 'muni' is probably 'sūnu'. Cf. C, edited below.

In No. 1 the genealogy is given as follows :—

Kōṭṭabhañja
|
Digbhañja
Raṇabhañja.

In No. 4 Raṇabhañja is said to have been born in the family of Kōṭṭabhañja, and no mention is made of Digbhañja. The son of Raṇabhañja is Prithvibhañja. The genealogy may therefore be described as follows :—

Kōṭṭabhañja
|
|
Prithvibhañja.

No. 5 gives the following genealogy :—

|
Durjayabhañja
|
Raṇabhañja
|
Śatrubhañja
|
(yuvarāja) Narēndrabhañja.

In No. 6 the genealogy is given as follows :—

|
Vibhramatuṅga

Raṇabhañja.

Narēndrabhañja.

In No. 7 we find the same genealogy, though the relationship of Raṇabhañja with the other kings is not clearly stated.

No. 8 gives us the following genealogy :—

Mahārājādhirāja Raṇabhañja
|

The genealogies given in Nos. 2 and 3 have been interpreted differently and a short discussion is necessary to explain the different points of view.

No. 2 mentions Kōṭṭabhañja, his son Digbhañja, and the latter's son Raṇabhañja, and so far it agrees with No. 1. But after Raṇabhañja it adds two more names in the following passage : tasya ch=ā(au)payī(i)k-ātmajaḥ śrī-Prithvibhañja-suta-śrī-Narēndrabhañjadēvō bhūtaḥ. In addition to the two emendations noted within brackets, MM. H. P. Śāstri, who edited the record, made a further emendation by omitting the visarga in 'ātmajaḥ'. He, therefore, translated the passage as follows :—

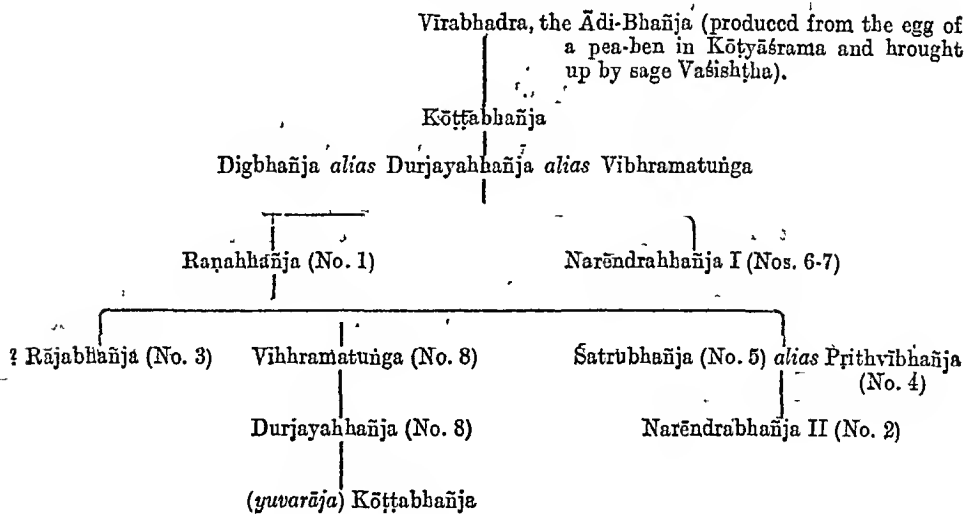

“ His reputed son Prithvibhañja, whose son Narendrabhañja was born. ”

At first sight, the different genealogical accounts seem to be hopelessly conflicting and any attempt to reconcile them may justly be regarded as a vain and fruitless task. But there are some points of agreement in the majority of records which might give us a clue to the ultimate solution of the problem.

All the records are unanimous, firstly, in their accounts of the origin of the founder of the family, Virabhadra, from the egg of a pea-hen in the hermitage of Vāsishṭha known as Kōṭyāsrama; and secondly, in regarding Kōṭṭabhañja as the first historical ruler. Here the unanimity ends. But with the exception of Nos. 3 and 4 all the other records represent Raṇabhañja as the grandson of Kōṭṭabhañja, and as the statement in No. 4 is not in conflict with this view, we may accept it as an established fact. The name of the father of Raṇabhañja is given as Digbhañja in Nos. 1 and 2, Durjayabhañja in No. 5, and Vibhramatuṅga in No. 6. There would thus appear to be three different kings bearing the same name Raṇabhañja. But on the other hand we should remember that all of them ruled in Khijjiṅga, and all of them evidently were contemporaries, being grandsons of the same king. This is specifically proved in respect of two of them as they issued Grants in the years 288 (No. 1) and 293 (No. 6). Three grandsons of the same king, bearing the same name, and ruling in the same locality at the same time (or at least within a few years of each other), may not be theoretically impossible, but must be regarded as very unusual indeed. We may, therefore, reasonably infer the identity of the three kings bearing the name Raṇabhañja. This would imply also the identity of Digbhañja, Durjayabhañja and Vibhramatuṅga, though it must be regarded as very unusual that the same king should have been referred to by three different names in the official records of the family.

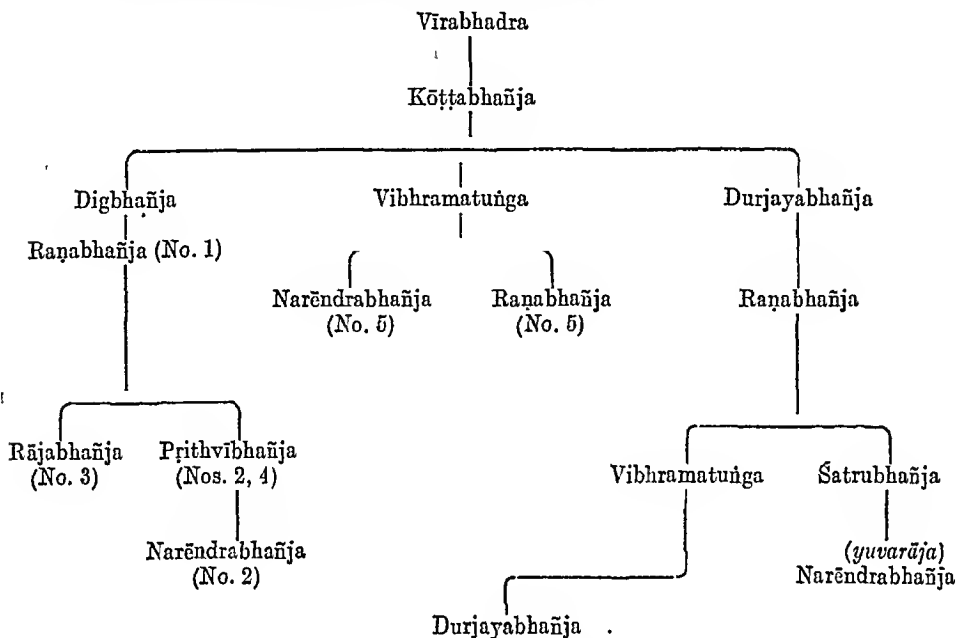

Then, again, according to Mā. Śāstri's interpretation of No. 2, Raṇabhañja had a son (aupayika or reputed) named Pṛithvibhañja and the latter's son was Narēndrabhañja. Now No. 4 confirms the first part of the statement, viz., that Raṇabhañja had a son called Pṛithvibhañja, and No. 5, the second part of the statement, viz., that he had a grandson called Narēndrabhañja. No. 5, however, gives Śatrubhañja as the name of the father of Narēndrabhañja, and the only way of reconciling Nos. 2, 4, and 5 is to identify Śatrubhañja with Pṛithvibhañja.

On the basis of the above hypotheses we may draw up the genealogy of the family tentatively as follows :—

Although this genealogy of the family cannot be regarded as finally settled, the above representations, I believe, the most reasonable inference that can be drawn from the data at present available to us.

If we reject the proposed identifications, and treat the kings with different names as so many different persons, the resulting genealogy would be as follows :—

It is unnecessary to discuss here the history of the other Bhañja kings known from copper-plate grants; no connection or relationship between them and the Bhañja kings discussed above has yet been established. The late Rai Bahadur Hiralal upheld the view that all the known Bhañja kings belonged to one single family,¹ but this theory has been shown to be untenable by Mr. R. D. Banerji² and Mr. C. C. Das Gupta.³

As to the status of these kings, the late Mr. R. D. Banerji laid much stress on the fact that the kings of this group bore no royal titles. "The absence of any title", says Mr. Banerji, "at a time when even petty kings had assumed the imperial titles of the Gupta period, is extremely significant. It proves that the second group of Bhañja kings were subordinates to some higher power".⁴ The title Mahārāja applied to Raṇabhañja in the two Grants (Nos. 6, 7) edited below, and the title Mahārājādhirāja applied to the same king (or another king of the same name) in Ins. No. 8, prove the erroneous character of Mr. Banerji's assumption. For he himself concluded, from the assumption of the title Mahārāja by Raṇabhañja of the first group, that he was an independent king.⁵ And we may, equally presume that Raṇabhañja of the second group was also an independent king. Indeed in this respect the fact that a ruler issues land grants with a distinctive royal seal of his own is a far stronger evidence in support of his status as a de facto independent ruler than mere assumption of royal or imperial titles. It would be more reasonable, therefore, to regard the Bhañja kings, who issued royal charters with their own seals, as independent rulers, at least for all practical purposes, irrespective of the question whether they assumed royal and imperial titles or not.

The Grant No. 5 refers to Virabhadra as Chakravarti-samah or 'like an emperor', gives the titles 'Mahāmaṇḍal-ādhipati-Mahārājādhirāja-Paramēśvara' to Śatrubhañjadēva, and calls him the lord of eighty-eight thousand (villages). This is also an indication of the power and independence of the Bhañja kings of this group.

As to the period when these kings flourished we have two specific dates of Raṇabhañja, viz., Samvat 288 (No. 1) and Samvat 293¹ (No. 6). The era to which these dates are to be referred is not easy to determine. Mr. B. C. Mazumdar held that the alphabets of the records could not be earlier than the tenth century A.D., and referred the year 288 to the Gāṅga Era, which began according to him in 778 A.D.² This view was accepted by Mr. R. D. Banerji³ and Mr. C. C. Das Gupta.⁴ Many scholars, however, now hold that the epoch of the Gāṅga Era is to be placed in the sixth century A.D. or at the close of the fifth century A.D.⁵ Accordingly, king Raṇabhañja has to be placed towards the close of the eighth or in the ninth century A.D. Mr. Binayak Misra refers the date to the Harsha Era.⁶ That would place Raṇabhañja towards the close of the ninth century A.D. The palaeographic evidence, as noted above, does not militate against this view.⁷

Assuming that the Harsha era was used, the date of the present Grant would be A.D. 899, and Raṇabhañja must have been on the throne during the years 894-899 A.D. The rule of the Bhañja dynasty of Mayūrbhanj from Kōṭṭabhañja to Narēndrabhañja II may thus be placed between 850 and 950 A.D.

Utkala or Orissa was conquered by Dēvapāla in the first half of the ninth century A.D. This must have brought about the political disintegration of the kingdom, and as soon as the Pāla power was weakened by the middle of the ninth century A.D., local feudal chiefs found a good opportunity to carve out independent kingdoms for themselves. The rise of the Bhañja family to power may be explained in this way.

The Capital of these kings was undoubtedly Khijjiṅga, modern Khiching (situated about ninety miles to the west of Bāripadā the present Capital of Mayūrbhanj) which contains extensive ruins and has yielded a large number of fine medieval sculptures. All the Grants, except Nos. 5 and 8, refer to Khijjiṅga as the place of residence of the king. The village granted in No. 5 is situated in Urtti-vishaya, and this district, according to the present Grant, was included in ¹ The numerical symbol used to denote 200 is 'lu'. Kielhorn, in his List of Northern Inscriptions, expressed a doubt about the correctness of this interpretation (Above, Vol. V, App. p. 88, n. 6). Buhler's chart, however, gives the value 200 for the symbol (Pl. IX, Col. XVIII). Subsequently, Kielhorn also changed his view and took the symbol as denoting 200 (Above, Vol. VI, p. 134). This is now generally accepted (History of Orissa, Vol. I, p. 181).

Khijjīṅga (Khijjīṅga-matibaddha). The villages granted by the records seem to indicate that the kingdom of this group of Bhañja kings corresponded roughly to the present states of Mayūrbhanj and Keonjhar which are still ruled by chiefs bearing names ending in Bhañja. The name Mayūrabhañja undoubtedly preserves the tradition that the Bhañja family originated from the egg of a mayūri (pea-hen), and the legends that the ancestor was born out of an egg of pea-hen and nursed by the sage Vaśiṣṭha are to be found in the records of the present ruling family.¹ It is, therefore, very probable that the present Bhañja chiefs are descended from the group of Bhañja kings referred to above.

An attempt has been made to connect this Bhañja family with the famous Maurya clan, and even to identify Virabhadra, the traditional founder of the family, with the Maurya emperor Chandragupta. The suggestion which rests mainly on the following grounds was first made by Mr B. Misra while editing No. 5² (re-edited below as C.).

1. The Mayūra-origin of the family really indicates an association with the Moriya clan, Moriya being the Prākṛit form of Mayūra.³

2. According to the Pāli Mahāvagga, the dominion of Bimbisāra embraced 80,000 townships. It is needless to say that the same dominion was included in the empire of Chandragupta. Evidently the lordship of Virabhadra over 88,000 villages (as recorded in No. 5) has some similarity with that of Chandragupta.

3. Gaṇadañḍa, the epithet of Virabhadra, means Republican Chief and signifies one whose army consisted of individuals combined for a definite object. If taken in this sense, Virabhadra may be supposed to have raised an army as Chandragupta did to overthrow the Nanda dynasty.

The arguments are wholly unconvincing. As regards the first, it refers merely to a totemic conception, and we need not necessarily find any historical allusion in it unless there are other valid grounds for doing so. As regards the second, the inference rests palpably on a very weak foundation. As to the third, Gaṇadañḍa has been interpreted by Rai Bahadur Hiralal as an officer of some Gaṇa or Hindu Republic. He takes it to be an abbreviated form of Gaṇadañḍa-nāyaka or Gaṇa-daṇḍapāla, i.e., either a minister or a commander of army.⁴ There is no justification for going further beyond this.

Of the localities mentioned in the inscription other than Khijjīṅga, Kōṭyāśrama, the reputed hermitage of Vaśiṣṭha where Virabhadra was born, has been identified with Kuting, thirty-two miles from Bāripadā.⁵ Urtti-vishaya may be identified with a village called Urti in the Keonjhar State, about twelve miles to the north-west of Khiching, on the right bank of the river Vaitarani. There is a village called Sorai near Urti,⁶ and this may represent either of the two villages, Bṛihat-Sārāi and Svalpa-Sarāyi mentioned in the Grant. It is not also impossible that both the names referred to two parts of the same village distinguished by the prefixes bṛihat and svalpa (i.e., big and small) and that this entire village is now represented by Sorai.

² I. H. Q., Vol. XIII, pp. 420 ff.

⁵ Above, Vol. XVIII, p. 300. But Mr. P. Acharya, the archaeologist of the Mayūrbhanj State, rejects this identification on the ground that there are no remains of antiquities in the place.

⁶ I am indebted to Mr. P. Acharya, the State Archaeologist of Mayūrbhanj, for the information about the discovery of Plates A and B and for the identification of villages mentioned in them.

The fact that the villages are situated on the right bank of the Vaitarani river, in the State of Keonjhar, is of great importance, as it proves that at least a part, if not the whole, of this state was included within the dominions of the Bhañjas of Mayurbhanj in the ninth or tenth century A.D. This in a way lends some support to the local tradition recorded by Hunter that Keonjhar originally formed part of Mayurbhanj and was formed into a separate state about two centuries ago.¹

The two copper-plates (Nos. 6 and 7) now edited being clearly engraved, enable us to correct some mistakes and remove some doubts about the reading and interpretation of the records of this group of Bhañja kings. MM. H. P. Śāstrī, while editing the Kbaṇḍadēulī plate claimed to have corrected some mistakes. "For instance," observed he, "my predecessors read Kōṭyāśrama, but my plate distinctly says Kauśāśrama. They read the same word Suladaṇḍa in one plate and Svarṇadaṇḍa in another, but it is really Galad-aṇḍa, the breaking egg". The present records confirm the reading Kōṭyāśrama and show beyond doubt that the other word is really Gaṇa-daṇḍa, which also seems to be quite clear on the estampage of the Kbaṇḍadēulī Inscription. In the three published records the adjective 'Khiṇṇiṅga-Kōṭavāsī' is applied to Raṇabhañja and it has been taken to mean that the king was usually resident in Khiṇṇiṅga. The corresponding expression in the present records is Khiṇṇiṅga-kōṭṭ-ādihivāsī meaning that the Grant was issued from Khiṇṇiṅga. This is the more usual expression used in land-grants, and there is hardly any doubt that it was the original form which was misconstrued in others.

TRANSLATION.

Om svasti. (Verse 1) May the omniscient Bhava (Śiva), who is the sole protector of all the worlds, the destroyer of the fear of re-birth, the lord of Bhavānī, and conversant with the rules of the various modes of meditation,—bring you prosperity.

(V. 2) There was a king called Gaṇadaṇḍa (an officer in a republic ?) Virabhadra, skilful in killing enemies, who burst out of an egg of a pea-hen in the great hermitage, called Kōṭyāśrama, and was brought up by the sage Vāśiṣṭha.

(V. 3) In the family of this first Bhañja (king) was born śrī-Kōṭṭabhañja, who was highly honoured, liberal, famous, brave, pure, and modest, and was averse to inflicting punishment (adaṇḍaka).

(V. 4) Then there was his worthy son śrī-Vibhramatuṅga, who was famous in the world, most excellent, and endowed with beauty ; who had numerous feudatories, and whose feet were worshipped by hundreds of kings.

(Vv. 5-6) His son śrīmān Narēndrabhañjadēva—who was like cupid (in appearance), strong, weighty, and brave ; who had acquired fame by defeating enemies ; who, like king Yudhiṣṭhira, was constantly engaged in protecting the earth, and was extremely fond of performing good deeds ; and whose sins were expiated by the worship of the feet of Hara ;—from his residence at the fort of Khijjiṅga says respectfully to the kings :

(Ll. 15-21) (There is) a village called Brīhat-Sārāi, in the district (vishaya) of Urtti, situated close to the city of Khijjiṅga. This village, the boundaries of which are already known, is granted by me, free of rent, for the sake of (the religious merits of) my mother, father, and myself, with libations of water, to Bhaṭṭaputra Śītaladēvaśarman an emigrant from Tilapudraka and belonging to Bahvricha-charaṇa, Āśvalāyana-śākhā, Vatsa-gotra, and having the five ṛishis as his pranaras (or the noble ancestors).

(Ll. 22-35 contain the usual imprecations.)

(L. 36) Written by the Rājakula Hēramba.

(Ll. 37-40) By Mahārāja-śrī-Raṇabhañjadēva, son of śrī-Vibhramatuṅga, the village of Svalpa-Sarāyī in the district (vishaya) of Uratti has been granted to Bhaṭṭaputra Trivikrama, after sprinkling water and by a copper-plate deed. So this should be upheld by the future kings.

(L. 41) The year 200 (and) 90 (and) 3 ; (the month) Phālguṇa ; the dark fortnight ; (the lunar) day 1.

B.—Ādipur Copper-plate of Narēndrabhañjadēva.

This is a single plate measuring about 10·6" by 8·8". It contains 38 lines of writing engraved on both sides. The engraver at first deliberately left a margin of about 3 inches at the top on the reverse side, but later, as the inscription could not be contained in the remaining part, he engraved the concluding portion in this space with the letters written in an opposite direction. This is a very natural and common method in letter-writing of the present day, but seems to be rather unusual in respect of engraving copper-plates. The original plate contained a circular projection at the middle of the top, and to this was later soldered a circular seal with a diameter of about 3". It bears the legend "Śrīmān=Narī(rē)adīabhañjadērāsya" in a single line. Above the legend are the figures of a crescent with a conch below, and underneath it is the figure of a humped bull above a floral design, resembling those in the Plate A noticed above. The edge of the seal is turned up so as to form a raised rim all round. A portion of the back of the seal had to be cut away, as otherwise some letters, already engraved on the reverse of the plate, would have been hidden by it. This is an important and interesting point. For, as in Plate A, this portion of the plate contains, like a post-script, a short record about the donation of king Raṇabhañja. It is obvious that it was not a later addition, but was already engraved before the royal seal was attached.

The plate was found in the possession of one Sira Dās of the Ādipur village, the same person from whom Plate A was obtained. According to the statement of Sira Dās it was found some eighty years ago, and kept concealed in a house which was washed away by the flood of 1927 and hence abandoned. It was again brought to light some six years ago while digging the earth in that deserted plot. The plate is now in the Museum at Bāripadā. The Curator of the Museum, Mr. P. Acharya, who supplied me with the above account, kindly gave me the plate on loan, and I am editing it from the original.

The plate is in a fair state of preservation, except that a small portion of the edge, on both sides, along the length of the plate has been corroded, with the result that some letters at the beginning and the end of a number of lines have been rendered indistinct or altogether effaced.

The language is Sanskrit and the alphabet closely resembles that used in Inscription A. As a matter of fact the record is a close copy of that record with a few modifications. The only important additions are: (1) some additional conventional concessions in the formal portion of the grant (ll. 16-17), and (2) one additional imprecatory verse (ll. 29-30). These are, however, well-known phrases and occur in other Orissa records and the verse occurs in another grant of this family (cf. C below).

The author's knowledge of Sanskrit was rather poor, though he has avoided some of the glaring mistakes of A. As the errors and orthographic peculiarities in the two records are very similar, these need not be noticed in detail.

The inscription records the grant of the village Śārapadraka in the Kērakēra-vishaya by king Narēndrabhañja whose genealogy is given in the same words as in A. The donee, whose name I doubtfully read as Bhaṭṭa Dēvadēvadāma¹, migrated from Ōḍra-vishaya and was evidently associated (in a manner which is not quite clear) with the village Rāmāparkaṭi in the Khijjiṅga-maṇḍala². The grant was made on the day on which the summer solstice began (Ravisankramana-vilāyām). The second record, at the end, refers to the grant of a village by Raṇabhañja. The name of the village may be doubtfully read as Pāḍēvā, but there may be another letter at the beginning.

Of these localities Kērakēra is still the name of a village in Ghoshdāpir in Ādipur Parganā, situated about twelve miles to the South-South-East of Khiebing. It is shown as Kerkerā in the Indian Sheet Atlas (Scale 1"=4 miles, sheet 73 G). Near by is a village called Soras in the same sheet and this may be the same as Śārapadraka. The village called Saradaha in Karanjia Parganā may also be the modern representative of Śārapadraka. Rāmāparkaṭi may be identified with the village called Ramasahi in Kiāpir in Joshipur Parganā. I am unable to identify Pāḍēvā. The mention of Ōdra-nishaya is very interesting, showing that the name which was afterwards applied to the whole province was as yet confined only to a small region and originally denoted only a small district.

² [To me it appears that the donee was a resident of the village Rāmāparkaṭi in Khijjiṅga-maṇḍala and that he originally hailed from Ālāvadraha, a Brahman village (? Bhaṭṭa-grāma) in the Ōḍra-vishaya.—Ed.]

The history of Narēndrabhañja and his predecessors has already been discussed. As noted above, the inscription also records, at the end, the grant of a village by Bhañja Mahārāja-Raṇabhañja. The word immediately preceding this seems to be clearly naptā or grandson. Unfortunately, the word of three letters before naptā, although very clearly engraved, cannot be read with certainty. The first and third letters are 'ā' and 'va', but the letter in the middle is a peculiar one, and looks like sai or stai, none of which, however, gives any sense. In any case, for the present, Raṇabhañja of this short record must be identified with king Raṇabhañja, a similar short record of whom is engraved at the end of Plate A. It is very curious that a short record of this king was in both these instances added as a sort of post-script to the record of Narēndrabhañja. In the present case, at any rate, we are tolerably certain, by the position of the last few letters of the plate in respect of the back part of the seal, that the whole record was engraved before the seal was attached, i.e., during the reign of king Narēndrabhañja. The only reasonable conclusion seems to be that Raṇabhañja was a predecessor of Narēndrabhañja, and an earlier grant made by him, perhaps to the same donee or to his family, was repeated in brief at the end at the latter's request, so that the same plate might serve him as a charter for both the grants.¹

One peculiarity in the text of this grant requires special mention. In all the copper-plate grants of this family of kings, the word kuśalī or kuśalinah, generally added as an adjective of the king in the prose portion, immediately after his proper name, is omitted, and in most of them the words s-ānūyayaṁ prāha bhūpālān take the place of the usual verbs mūnayati bōdhayati samādiśati. In the present grant we have all these three combined, with the exception only of samādiśati.

Attention may be drawn to the expression 'Śiva-charaṇa-sarōja-shaṭpada' (l. 13) used with reference to Narēndrabhañja. The corresponding expression in A is 'Hara-charaṇ-ārādhana-kshapita-pāpaḥ' (ll. 13-14). These prove that king Narēndrabhañja was a devoted worshipper of Śiva. The invocation to Śiva at the beginning also shows that the family was Śaiva. The discoveries at Khiching fully corroborate this. The finest image unearthed from the ruins at Khiching is that of a standing Śiva which was no doubt installed in the main temple whose magnificent ruins have been laid bare by recent excavations.

¹ [It is difficult to believe that Raṇabhañja of the postscript grants in A and B was a predecessor of Narēndrabhañja. It is not impossible that a portion of the back of the seal of B had to be cut away to make room for the last line of the subsidiary record for which no other space was available. In ll. 36-37 B clearly states that the subsidiary grant was inserted in the original grant (ēlasminn-ēva śāsanē prakshippya). The duet of writing in these additional grants is quite different from that of the original grants. The writer in the two additional grants appears to be the same person, viz., Yakshadatta and the donor is also the same Raṇabhañja in both. The reading in l. 35 of B is āsaiva naptā. If āsaiva stands for asy-aiva, the person referred to must be the first ruler mentioned in the original grant, i.e., Kōṭṭabhañja whose grandson Raṇabhañja was.—Ed.]

C.—Kēsari Copper-plate of Śatrubhañjadēva.

This is a single plate measuring $8\frac{1}{2}$ " by $6\frac{1}{2}$ ". It contains twenty-four lines of writing engraved on both sides. A circular seal, a little more than $2\frac{1}{2}$ " in diameter, is attached to the middle of the top of the plate on its longer side. It contains one line of legend with the figure of a couchant bull below, and there are figures of a trident and a crescent respectively on the upper right and upper left of the bull. The edge of the seal is turned up so as to form a raised rim all round.

The record was first published with a text and English translation by Mr. Binayak Misra in Indian Historical Quarterly, Vol. XIII, pp. 429 f. and 431. According to him it was discovered by a Ho servant of Arjun Giri at Kēsari, 10 miles north-west of Khiching. The plate is now in the Bāripadā Museum. I am indebted to Mr. P. Acharya for having kindly lent the original plate for re-editing it.

The plate is in a good state of preservation. The alphabet belongs to the Northern type and resembles that used in Plates A and B edited above. The language is Sanskrit. As regards metre, orthography, and the author's knowledge of Sanskrit, the remarks made in connection with Plate A apply equally well in this case, and detailed notices are unnecessary.

The inscription records the grant of the village of Syallāmāyi in the Urtti district by Mahā-maṇḍalādhipati-Mahārājādhirāja-Paramēśvara Śatrubhañjadēva, lord of eighty-eight thousand (villages). He was the son of Raṇabhañja, grandson of Durjayabhañja, and great-grandson of Kōṣṭhabhañja. Reference is made to Virabhadra's birth, as in Plates A and B. Some additional information is, however, given about this Virabhadra in ll. 3-5 which is not to be found in the other records of the family. The exact meaning of the passage is obscure, as the grammatical construction seems to be faulty. It begins with a reference to Virabhadra's eighty-eight thousand sons (and not sages as interpreted by Mr. Misra). What follows seems to indicate that on account of the prayer of these sons Virabhadra was protected (sēvitaḥ) by Rāmadēva and made lord of eighty-eight thousand villages.⁹ Rāmadēva is no doubt the god Rāma. The phrase 'Rāmadēvēna

³ There is a superfluous na after yō.

⁴ Read tāmbra.

⁵ The reading of the word is very doubtful. The word vilāṇi-bhāṇḍa can be clearly read but offers no meaning. There is a letter ka written just below the space between the last two letters.

⁶ Expressed by a symbol.

⁷ The second letter looks like sai but the word offers no meaning. [See above, p. 159, n. 1.—Ed.]

⁸ A letter may have been effaced at the beginning of this line.

⁹ [According to my reading only one son, who was protected by Rāmadēva, seems to have been favoured with this gift. See p. 162 n. 13 below.—Ed.]

sēvitaḥ ' can therefore be hardly interpreted as ' served by Rāmadēva ' as translated by Mr. Misra. According to the dictionary, the root ' sēv ' also means ' to protect, ' and I have taken that interpretation. The word ' vyāpitaḥ ' is also a difficult one. I think v is a mistake for dh (which resembles it very closely) and the word ' dhyaṇitaḥ ' has been used to indicate that the eighty-eight thousand sons were made to perform meditations (dhyaṇa) in order to please Rāmadēva and obtain the boon from him.

The very important and far-reaching conclusions of Mr. Misra based on the above data have already been discussed above.¹ The only other information of historical character supplied by the record is the mention of two members of the royal family viz., Anakadēvī (perhaps a mistake for Anakadēvī), the chief queen, and Narēndrabhaṇja, the Yuvarāja (ll. 12-13), and of a number of officers (ll. 13-14).

Attention may be drawn to the expression Bhagavad-bhaṭṭāraka-Śaṅkaram samuddiṣya occurring in ll. 14-15. The reference may be to the great Saṅkarācārya in whose honour the gift was made, though it is possible to take it in the ordinary sense to refer to God Śiva. In the latter case, however, the form ordinarily met with, is ' Bhagavat-Śiva [Nārāyaṇa or Buddha]-bhaṭṭāraka.

As to the localities mentioned, Urtti-vishaya has been discussed above. I am unable to identify the village Syallāmāyī. Mr. Misra reads the name of the village as ' Llāmāyī ' remarking in a footnote that ' syā ' is unnecessary. I do not see any reason to uphold this view.

No. 15.—AN INCOMPLETE GRANT OF SINDA ADITYAVARMAN: SAKA 887.

By PROF. V. V. MIRASHI, M.A. AND M. G. DIKSHIT, B.A.

Of the two leaves of a set of copper-plates, which are edited here for the first time, the first is from the collection of the late Mr. G. K. Chandorkar, a well-known rescarcher of Khāndesh. It is now deposited in the Rājwāde Saṁśōdhana Maṇḍala, Dhūlia. The second plate was found in the collection of the Bhārata Itihāsa Saṁśōdhaka Maṇḍala, Poona. No definite information is available regarding the original findspot of these plates, but they were probably discovered somewhere in the Poona District of the Bombay Presidency.¹⁷ They are edited here with the kind permission of the authorities of the two Institutions in which they are now preserved.

They are the last two plates of a set which must have originally consisted of three or four copper-plates. The initial one or two plates, which probably contained a glorification of some ancestors of the donor, are not now forthcoming. The present plates contain a hole $\frac{1}{2}$ " in diameter at the top, which indicates that the plates were held together by a ring. But the ring together with the seal, if it had any, is now lost. The plates measure from 9.5" to 9.7" broad and from 7.5" to 8.2" high. The first plate weighs 66 tolas and the second 44½ tolas.

⁵ M. reads tanvṛitah which is undoubtedly the more usual form.

⁷ M. reads tiryag-yōnanu [sa] jāyātē.

⁸ Read jāyātē.

¹⁰ Read kṛimira=.

¹¹ M. reads kṛimīrbhūtrā.

¹² Read pitribhiḥ. This is M's reading.

¹³ Read -dānāt.

¹⁴ Read =ānantyam. M. reads ānantam.

¹⁵ Read śashṭhi-varsha=.

¹⁶ There is one ornamental mark between the two sets of daṇḍas.

¹⁷ As shown below, the donated village is in the Poona District. Another Sinda copper-plate, dated Saka 938, has been recently discovered at Nārāyāngōn near Junnar in the same district.

The extant portion of the inscription, which is in a state of excellent preservation, contains fifty-two lines of writing, of which sixteen are engraved on the first and seventeen on the second side of the first plate. The second plate has nineteen lines inscribed on one side only. The characters are of the Nāgarī alphabet. Several letters appear in a transitional stage and exhibit more than one form each. Besides, the record was written in a cursive hand and engraved in a careless manner, several strokes being left out. The reading of a few akṣaras, especially in lines 32-33 and 51-52, is consequently not free from doubt. As regards individual letters, attention may be drawn to the forms of kh in Bhīm-ākhyō, l. 1 and sākhā, l. 28, the former of which has a loop in the left limb, while the latter is without it. Similarly the letters g, m, n and r present looped and unlooped forms, see, e.g., g in garvabhasthō, l. 5 and nagara, l. 10; m in chihntāmaṇi, l. 3 and vimaya, l. 18; n in janānām, l. 4 and śenāpati, l. 9 and r in jarad-, l. 12 and guṇa-rāṣi-, ll. 1-2. The several forms of the palatal ś seen in śrī-, l. 2, guṇa-rāṣi-, ll. 1-2 and āśrita, ll. 3-4 and of v in vilōṭāḥ, l. 19 and ēv-aikaḥ, l. 21, are also noteworthy. The left limb of dh is undeveloped, bh and h are almost identical in shape, and ph is drawn cursorily, see samadhiḡat-, l. 6, Bhīm-ākhyō, l. 1, mahādadhīḥ, ll. 4-5 and phaṇindra l. 7. Finally, the record exhibits here and there the use of the prishṭha-mātrās to denote medial diphthongs.

The language is Sanskrit. The inscription is composed in a good style, but contains several mistakes due to careless writing. The extant portion contains one incomplete and ten complete verses¹ in ll. 1-5, 17-21, 40-45, and 48-51, the rest being in prose. As regards orthography, the only points that call for notice are the use of the vowel ṛi for ri in āśrita, ll. 3-4 and that of v for b as in mahāśavda, l. 6 and the reduplication of a consonant following r as in kuhara-varṭti, l. 14 and gandharvva, l. 16.

The inscription is one of the Sinda king, the Mahāsāmanta Ādityavarman, who had obtained all mahāśabdas and was born in the lineage of Dīśṭivisha, the lord of Nāgas.² The object of it is to record the grant, by Ādityavarman, of a village named Kiṇihikā which was included in the (larger) village Paṅgarikā and was situated in the Rāmatīrthikā-Eighty-four. Among the boundaries of the village, which are specified in ll. 33-35, are mentioned a layaṇa-giri (hill containing cells) which bounded it on the west and a river named Indra which flowed on its north. The donee was the Brāhmaṇa Navaśiva, son of Chandrabhaṭṭa, who belonged to the Kauṇḍinya-gōtra and was a student of the Bahvricha-śākhā (of the Ṛigveda). He had emigrated from the Madhyadēśa. The grant was made by Ādityavarman, while residing at Junninagara, on the occasion of a solar eclipse which occurred on the new-moon day of Chaitra in the expired Śaka samvat 887, the cyclic year being Krōdhana. The date is regular. The expired Śaka 887 (corresponding to A.D. 965-66) was Krōdhana according to the southern luni-solar system and there was a solar eclipse on the amāvasyā of the paurṇimānta Chaitra. The corresponding Christian date is Monday, the 6th March A.D. 965.

The genealogy of Ādityavarman which was given in the initial portion of the record is now almost wholly lost. The extant portion of the record contains only two names, viz., Bhīma and his son Muñja, the grandfather and the father respectively of Ādityavarman. About Muñja we are told that he was superior to (another) Muñja in merits. It is not clear who this latter personage was. The reference can scarcely be to the homonymous king of the Paramāra dynasty, the celebrated poet and patron of Sanskrit learning; for he was not a contemporary of

Ādityavarman's father and had not in fact ascended the throne even at the time when the present record was incised. His father Śiryaka was ruling in V. S. 1029¹ (i.e., A.D. 972-73) and was, therefore, on the throne for at least seven years after the issue of the present charter. It is not, therefore, likely that Muñja was already so famous in A.D. 965 as to induce the author of the present record to institute a comparison between him and the father of Ādityavarman. The name of one other Muñja, who also belonged to the Sinda family, is known from his Tidgundi plates,² but he belongs to a much later age, as he was a feudatory of Vikramāditya VI of the Later Chālukya dynasty.

As said above, Ādityavarman belonged to the Sinda family and claimed descent from the Nāga lineage. He had on his banner the figure of a golden lion. As he does not claim a higher title than Mahāsāmanta, he was plainly subordinate to some paramount power. His suzerain was probably the powerful Rāshtrakūṭa king Kṛishṇa III, for whom, it is interesting to mention, we have a record bearing the same date as the present record, viz., 6th March A.D. 965.³

The Sindas, Chhindas or Chhindakas of the Nāgarāmāṣa are known from several earlier and later records. Most of these come from the Kanarese districts of the Bombay Presidency and Mysore and Hyderābād states, while some are found in the Bastar state of the Central Provinces. Legendary accounts of the origin of the family are furnished by some later inscriptions. Thus, according to the Bhairanmaṭṭi stone inscription the eponymous founder of the family was a certain long-armed Sinda, who was born from the serpent king Dharaṇendra at Abichehhatra in the region of the river Sindhu and reared by a tiger.⁴ According to another account Sinda was born from the union of the god Śiva and the river Sindhu and was brought up by the king of serpents on tiger's milk.⁵ It seems, therefore, that the original habitat of the family was somewhere in North India, probably in the valley of the Indus. Many of these Sinda or Chhinda kings call themselves Bhōgavatī-pura-var-ādikṣvara 'the lord of Bhōgavatī, the best of towns'. The exact location of Bhōgavatī is not settled, but according to the Navasāhasāṅkchariā of Padmagupta it was situated to the south of the Narmadā, perhaps in the Bastar state.⁶

From their original home in North India several branches of the family migrated to the South and established themselves in different parts of the peninsula. According to one account the aforementioned Sinda married the daughter of a Kadamba king and had by her three sons who established the family of Sinda kings. This Sinda was probably a feudatory of the contemporary Kadamba king and seems to have been ruling somewhere in the Kuntala kingdom. The Jāvali plates⁷ of the Western Gāṅga prince Śrīpuruṣa-Piṭhivī-Kōṅguṇi speaks of a Sindavishaya which, according to Mr. Riee⁸, extended over parts of the Dhārwar, Bijāpur and Bellary Districts. Another account states that the long-armed Sinda, the founder of the family, settled in the Karahāṭa-Four-thousand province, which evidently comprised the territory round Karhād in the Sātār District of the Bombay Presidency. Later on we find several branches of the family established at Bāgnḍagē⁹ (Bāgalkōṭ in the Bombay Presidency), Erambaragē¹⁰ (Yelburgā in the Nizām's Dominions) and Chakrakōṭya¹¹ (in the Bastar state).

Most of these Sinda or Chhinda families distinguished themselves from the 10th to the 12th centuries A.D. as feudatories of the Later Chālukyas. But some we can trace to earlier times. The Nēsari plates¹ of the Rāshtrakūṭa Gōvinda III, dated Śaka 727, mention a prince named Nāgabhastin who was an ornament of the great Chhinda family and belonged to the lineage of the lord of serpents. The family of Ādityavarman also was, as we have seen, a feudatory family which probably owed allegiance to the Rāshtrakūṭas.

We have not so far come across records of the Sindas or Chhindas earlier than the age of the Rāshtrakūṭas. But that does not mean that these families rose into prominence for the first time in the ninth century A.D. As we have already seen, the founder of the family was a contemporary and probably a feudatory of the Kadambas. He must, therefore, have lived in the fifth or sixth century A.D. when the Kadambas were powerful in the South. As a matter of fact we find in that age a family with the analogous name Sēndraka which was subordinate to the Kadambas. The territory under its rule was called Sēndraka-vishaya. From the statement in the Bennur grant² that the Kadamba king Kṛishṇavarman II made the gift of a village in the Sēndraka-vishaya while on a victorious march to Vaijayanti (modern Banavāsi in North Kanara), it is conjectured that the Sēndraka-vishaya lay not far from the Banavāsi kingdom. It is generally identified with the Nagarakhapṇa division of the Banavāsi-Twelve-thousand which from another inscription³ is known to have been under the rule of the Sēndrakas. It was thus contiguous to, if not identical with, the Sinda-vishaya mentioned above. The Sēndrakas appear first as feudatories of the Kadambas,⁴ but on the downfall of the latter they transferred their allegiance to the Early Chālukyas of Bādāmi, with whom some of them had become matrimonially connected.⁵ When Pulakēśin II conquered Mahārāshṭra and Lāṭa from the Kalachuris, he placed a trusted Sēndraka chief named Bhānuśakti⁶ in charge of part of the conquered territory, viz., Southern Gujarāt and Khāndesh. Grants of land⁷ made by Bhānuśakti's grandson Allaśakti have been discovered in those parts of the country. Later on he was ousted from Southern Gujarāt, but he and his son continued to rule in Khāndesh. The latest record of the Sēndrakas found in Khāndesh is the Mundkhēḍē copper-plate inscription⁸ of Allaśakti's son Jayaśakti, which is dated Śaka 602 (A.D. 680).

The inscriptions of the Sēndrakas do not generally connect their family with any eponymous hero, but the Lakshmēśvara stone inscription⁹ states that they were of the bhujagēndr-ānṛaya or 'lineage of the king of serpents'. It seems, therefore, that the Sēndrakas came in course of time to be called Sindas or Chhindas; for, besides similarity in their names, the two families claimed descent from the same race and in some cases ruled over the same territory.

⁵ The Sēndraka prince Śrīvallabha Sēnānandarāja was a maternal uncle of Pulakēśin II, above, Vol. III, pp. 50 ff.

⁶ No records of this chief have so far come to light, but as his grandson Allaśakti was ruling in A.D. 653 and 657, Bhānuśakti has to be placed in the first quarter of the seventh century A.D. He was thus a contemporary of Pulakēśin II.

⁹ Ind. Ant., Vol. VII, p. 106. This record is, however, held to be spurious.

After Jayaśakti we have no records of the Sēndrakas from Mahārāshṭra. After the lapse of nearly three centuries we get the present grant of the Sinda family. It is not known if the family of Ādityavarman was connected with any other Sinda families. But we may note that the names Bhīma and Muñja, which occur in the present record, figure again as names of Sinda feudatories in the Tiḍgundi plates of the time of Vikramāditya VI. The similarity of names suggests some sort of connection between the two families. The present plates state that the banner of Ādityavarman had the figure of lion on it and it is noteworthy that the seal of the aforementioned Tiḍgundi plates also contains a figure which Kielhorn took to be that of a tiger or a lion.¹

As the provenance of the plates is not known, it would have been difficult to identify the localities mentioned in them, but the mention of the Indra river and a layaṇa-giri among the boundaries of the donated village affords an important clue. The former is evidently identical with the Indrāyaṇī river which forms the northern boundary of the Poona tāluka. The donated village Kiṇihikā is probably identical with Kinhai situated on the south bank of the Indrāyaṇī near Shelārwaḍi, about 16 miles North by West of Poona. There are some caves to the west of it.² Its situation therefore exactly answers to the description in the present plates. Paṇ-garikā cannot, however, be traced in its vicinity. Rāmatīrthikā, the headquarters of the subdivision in which Kiṇihikā was included, is probably identical with Rāmatīrtha where Ushava-dāta made certain gifts to Brāhmaṇas as recorded in a Nāsik cave inscription.³ The latter is taken by some to be a holy kuṇḍa situated in or near Śūrpāraka⁴ with which it is mentioned in the aforementioned inscription. But the description in the present plates shows that it was the headquarters of a small subdivision of eighty-four villages and must have been situated not very far from Kinhai. No place of that name can, however, be traced now in its neighbourhood. Junninagara, where the king's camp was pitched, is probably identical with Junnar,⁵ a well-known place about 55 miles north of Poona.

No. 16.—ADIPUR COPPER-PLATE OF DURJAYABHANJA.

BY KRISHNA, CHANDRA PANIGRAHI, M.A.

This copper-plate was in possession of one Rajakisore Pattanayak of Adipur, a village about three miles to the north-west of Khiching, the ancient capital of the rulers of Mayūrbhanj. The owner at first brought it to the notice of Mr. Sailendra Prasad Bose of the Khiching Museum and then of Mr. K. C. Neogi, the Dewan of the Mayurbhanj State, who acquired it for the Archaeological Museum at Bāripadā. Mr. P. Acharya, the State-Archaeologist, handed it over to Pandit Binayak-Misra of the Calcutta University for publication. I am indebted to Pandit Misra for the kind permission he has given me for editing the plate.

The plate measures about 8"×6" and contains an inscription of only seven lines on its obverse. A seal surmounted by an amalaka is attached to the top, which contains in relief the figure of a couchant humped bull but no legend. The engraving has been neatly and carefully done and the inscription is in perfect preservation. The characters used in this grant point to an age when the Oriya characters were in the process of assuming their present forms. This is evident from the forms of shh (1.1), pt (1.2), p (1.3), th (1.4), lh (1.5), and t (1.6) which distinctly look like the modern Oriya characters.

The letters of this plate especially the letters t, lh, p, r, ś, and s closely resemble those used in the Mahada Plates of Yōgēśvaradēvavarman¹ and the Patna Museum Plate of Sōmēśvaradēva². On palaeographical grounds the latter grant has been assigned to the fourteenth or fifteenth century A. D. though the late Rao Bahadur Krishna Sastri was not inclined to assign such a late date to it.³ The orthography of the plate deserves more than a passing notice. Though an attempt has been made to compose the text in Sanskrit as is evident from the use of several visargas, the composer of the inscription seems to have no knowledge in Sanskrit at all. The text makes no distinction between the long and short vowels, nor does it often use the three sibilants—dental, palatal and lingual—correctly, a fact which has been illustrated throughout the inscription. It also presents a number of phonetic peculiarities of colloquial Oriya language, e.g., Hēmva (1.1), lladdha (1.1), uptana (1.2), tikla (1.2), māhārājādhirāja (1.2), vibhama (1.3), Dujaya (1.3), sāsana-dīna (1.4), sa-jala-thala (1.4), sandagrihi (1.6), mudrahārtha (1.7), Narindā (1.7) and pura-sēhi (1.7) which are the corrupt forms of Sanskrit Hēramba, labdha, utpanna, tilaka, māhārājādhirāja, vibhrama, Durjaya, sāsan-ādihina, sa-jala-sthala, sandhivigrahin, mudrā-hasta, Narēndra and pura-śrēṣṭhi respectively. Another peculiarity of the text is that it contains no verb at all⁴, and its sense can be made out only by adding certain verbs in their proper places. I have deemed it better to publish the text as it is, for, an attempt to correct it will result in its wholesale change.

The introductory passages common to the Bhañja records of Mayūrbhanj, are conspicuous in this grant by their absence. The inscription abruptly begins with certain epithets of Raṇa-bhañjadēva, surnamed *Vibhramatuṅga*⁵, representing him as having been nurtured by the sage Vaśiṣṭha, as a receiver of boon from Hēramba, as born in the Mivara family and as the frontal mark of the Bhañja lineage. He has further been given the title of Mahārājādhirāja. Then it gives out that his son Durjayabhañjadēva, who has been given no title at all, granted the village Ōlāṅga along with Pāñchapālī and Trisamāpadā (probably two other villages) to Thākura śrī-Gōmaṭa for unimpeded enjoyment. At the time the grant was made, Chihīpa the chief queen, Kōṭabhañja the heir-apparent, Ātahi the Minister for war and peace, Kunda-bāthi the custodian of the Royal Seal, Narindā the chief feudatory and Ddhuvaha the town-banker were present.

Durjayabhañjadēva, the donor, has been represented in this record as the son of Raṇabhañjadēva and the father of Kōṭabhañja. In the Keshari plate of Śatrubhañjadēva,¹ however, Durjayabhañja figures as the son of Kōṭṭabhañja and the father of Raṇabhañja. Evidently the donor of the present grant is not identical with Durjayabhañja of the Keshari plate. Until further discoveries are made, it is not possible to assign a place to Durjayabhañja of this record in the Bhañja genealogical table.

The plate does not mention the traditional account relating to the origin of the Bhañjas as other Bhañja grants of Mayūrbhanj do. It, however, refers to a Mivara family (II. 1-2) to which Raṇabhañjadēva is said to have belonged. Judging from the numerous mistakes of the text, it may at once be conceded that Mivara is a mistake for Mivāra (Mewār in Rājputānā). The author of the inscription, therefore, seems to refer the original home of the Bhañjas to Mewār. But the tradition² ascribes the connection of the Mayūrbhanj family with Jaipur which was never a part of Mewār. Moreover, the name Mewār itself is not to be found in early inscriptions. This, together with the unorthodox style in which the plate has been written, points to the fact that the document was drawn up by a person sometime about the fifteenth century A. D., who not only did not know much about the copper-plate grants, but also did not know the origin, either real or traditional, of the family he was describing.³

The villages Pāñchapālī and Ōllānga may conveniently be identified with Pañchupālī and Dēlāng, both situated in the Anandpur Sub-division of the Keonjhar State. As to the village Trisamāpadā, I cannot suggest any identification.

No. 17.—HALAYUDHASTOTRĀ FROM THE AMARESVARA TEMPLE.

By PROF. P. P. SUBRAHMANYA SASTRI, B.A. (OXON.), M.A. (MADRAS).

Halāyudha (one who wields the hala or plough as a weapon) is a well known name in Sanskrit literature. Dr. Aufrecht has listed more than sixteen works under Halāyudha. On the inner side of the southern wall in the mandapa of the Amarēśvara Temple at Māndhātā on the left bank of the river Narmadā in the Nimar District of the Central Provinces is carved a stōtra called the Halāyudha-stōtra (vide Hiralal, Inscriptions in the C. P. and Berar (2nd ed.), p. 84, No. 151). Dr. N. P. Chakravarti, the Government Epigraphist for India, has been good enough to send me an impression of this stōtra. There are several manuscripts of the Halāyudha-stōtra in the Madras Government Oriental Manuscripts Library (D. Nos. 11271 to 11278). A critical edition of the Halāyudha-stōtra, using the text as appearing on the Amarēśvara temple wall as the basic text (ॠ) and giving variant readings from three other manuscripts of the Government Oriental Manuscripts Library is appended to this note. The record at the Amarēśvara temple is dated Samvat 1120, Kārttika-vadi 13 or A. D. 1063.

From the stōtra above referred to, we are sure that its author Halāyudha must have been a staunch devotee of Śiva. We agree with Dr. Chakravarti that as the stōtra-record is dated 1063 A.D., the author of the stōtra must have lived prior to the 11th century and could not therefore be identical with the famous Halāyudha who adorned the court of King Lakshmaṇasēna of Bengal and who is the author of several sarvasvas like Brūhmaṇasarvasva, Pañḍītasarvasva, Mīmāṃsāsarvasva, etc.

The Telugu poet Pāṅkuriki Sōmanātha who lived about 1190 A.D., refers in his Dvipada Basavaṇṇā to a Halāyudha, a follower of the Śaiva cult, and who was a native of Navagrāma. The last verse of the stōtra in the Amarēśvara temple distinctly refers to its author as a native of the village Navagrāma. We are therefore on sure ground if we identify the author of the stōtra with the Halāyudha referred to by Sōmanātha as an ardent devotee of Śiva. The last stanza above referred to reads as follows :

Halāyudha-vu(hu)dhas=Śambhōr=imāṁ stutim-arīrachat || (v. 64)

Of the works listed under the name Halāyudha by Aufrecht, the Abhidhānaratnamālā deserves our attention. In stanza 25, p. 4, of the work edited by Aufrecht in 1861 we find that among the several names of Viṣṇu, 'Śambhu' also is given as one. This is rather interesting as it reveals the mentality of the author. No other lexicographer has given the name Śambhu as synonymous with Viṣṇu. And only a staunch Vīraśaiva, who believes that every word should ultimately denote only 'Śiva' as Śiva is all-pervasive, could have allowed himself to use 'Śambhu' as a synonym of Viṣṇu. Thus, it is not too much to assume the identity of authorship between the author of the Abhidhānaratnamālā and the Halāyudha-stōtra.

In his instructive introduction, Dr. Aufrecht has argued that Halāyudha the lexicographer should be assigned to a date earlier than the eleventh century A.D. And we find that the author of the Abhidhānaratnamālā should be identical with the author of the Kavirahasya as the last stanza of the last mentioned work reads as follows :

Iti samāptam=avāpta-guṇ-ōdayaṁ Kavirahasyam=idam rasika-priyam |

sad-abhidhāna-nidhāna-Halāyudha-dvija-varasya kṛtiḥ sukrīṭ-ātmanah ||

The third quarter is indeed an indirect reference, in accepted poetic style, to the author's other work, his lexicon, Abhidhānaratnamālā. Dr. Keith has fixed the date of Halāyudha, the author of Kavirahasya as contemporaneous with his patron the Rāṣṭrakūṭa King Kṛṣṇa III.

We therefore conclude that the author of the Halāyudha-stōtra should be identical with Halāyudha, the author of the Kavirahasya and the Abhidhānaratnamālā and should have flourished in the latter half of the tenth century A.D.

The edition of the stōtra is based on four texts of which ५ is the record found at the Amareśvara temple, and is printed as the basic text.

No. 18.—A NOTE ON THE HALAYUDHA STOTRA IN THE AMARESVARA TEMPLE.

By N. P. CHAKRAVARTI, M.A., PH.D., OOTACAMUND.

There are several Sanskrit stōtras engraved on the side walls of the ardhamanḍapa in the Amareśvara Temple at Māndhātā, which were copied by me early in 1938. The northern wall contains three of these, viz., (1) a stōtra in 8 lines and 9 verses in praise of the river Narmadā, (2) the well known Śiva-Mahimna-stōtra in 40 verses taking up 22 lines and (3) a single verse in 3 lines in praise of Śiva and Pārvatī. The main record on the southern wall contains the text of the Halāyudha-stōtra. Several manuscripts of this stōtra are preserved in the Government Oriental Library at Madras (Nos. 11271-11278), some of which are with commentaries in Sanskrit, Telugu and Kanarese. I have already noticed these records in the Annual Report, Arch. Survey of India, for the year 1937-38 in the chapter on Epigraphy. Though Hiralal¹ noticed all these records as unimportant, I found the colophon of the Halāyudha-stōtra to be of sufficient interest for the history of Sanskrit literature, and as the stōtra has not yet been published, I requested my friend Vidyāsāgara Vidyāvāchaspati P. P. Subrahmanya Śāstri, Professor of Sanskrit in the Madras Presidency College and honorary Curator of the Government Oriental Manuscripts Library at Madras, to undertake to edit the record in the Epigraphia Indica—a request to which he readily responded. This note only supplements the information contained in his introduction to the text edited above. I have also given below the text of ll. 48-56 of the record which Professor Śāstri has omitted as it is not relevant to the Halāyudha-stōtra.

The whole record is in 56 lines, and is engraved on four rectangular slabs of stone fixed into the wall on the southern side. The first slab contains 10 lines, the second 21 lines, the third 22 lines and the fourth only 3 lines of writing. The last lines of the 2nd, 3rd and 4th slabs (i.e., ll. 31, 53 and 56) are only half lines. A few letters at the end of each complete line are now missing but wherever possible these have been restored from manuscripts now preserved in the Government Oriental Library. The script is Nāgarī and the language Sanskrit throughout. The engraving is rather shallow but on the whole well executed. There are a number of grammatical and other errors, particularly in the portion which is the writer's own composition. All these have been noticed in footnotes or in the body of the text. These mistakes show that the writer, though he calls himself a Pandit, was not well versed in Sanskrit.

The record opens with the phrase Om namaḥ Śivāya which is immediately followed by the Halāyudha-stōtra in praise of Śiva. The stōtra actually finishes in v. 63, the last verse being a colophon containing an account of the author of the hymn. This is immediately followed by another hymn (ll. 48-50) in 5 verses the text of which is identical with that found in the *Śiva-dvādaśa-nāmā-stōtra*² and gives the 12 principal names of Śiva. Then comes a verse enumerating five jyōtirīṅgas, viz., those at Avimukta (Benares) and Kādāra, besides Ōmkāra, Amara and Mahākāla (at Ujjayinī). It may be noted here that though the names of Ōmkāra and Amara have been given separately, the eight other great līngas have been omitted in this list.

Lines 51-53 give the names of a few Śarva teachers in the following terms: In the city of Bhōja, living in the Sōmēśvaradēva monastery and hailing from Nandiyāda was the Pāsupata teacher Bhaṭṭāraka śrī-Bhāvavālmika whose disciple was Bhaṭṭāraka śrī-Bhāvasamudra. L. 53 mentions also Paṇḍita Bhāvayirimchi. Apparently the two mentioned last were responsible for setting up the records found on these four slabs. The next two lines contain an account of the writer, Paṇḍita Gāndhadhvaja of the Chapala-gōtra. He was a disciple of Vivēkarāśi who was again a disciple of the Paramabhaṭṭāraka śrī-Supūjitarāśi.

The last line contains the date, undoubtedly of the setting up of the record, which I have read as Samvat 1120 Kārttika vadi 13. The reading of the second digit is, however, uncertain which may also be read as 2. The same date is given at the end of the Mahimna-stava found engraved on the northern wall which was also written by the same Paṇḍita mentioned there as Gandhadhvaja, and also at the end of the Narmadā-stōtra, without giving the month and the tithi in both the places. But in these instances also the second digit is not clear. Unfortunately the date cannot be verified for want of sufficient details. If the year is 1120 the date would ordinarily correspond to Friday, the 21st November, A.D. 1063 and if read as 1220 the corresponding date in Christian era would be Sunday, the 27th October, A.D. 1163, taking the year as Chaitrādi and the month pūrṇimānta in both cases.

I have in the Annual Report referred to above discussed in detail the identity of the poet Halāyudha and also of Dēchaya who wrote a commentary on this stōtra in the sixteenth century A.D. I have shown there that the Halāyudha of our record could not be any of the three scholars of the same name mentioned by Mr. J. C. Ghosh,¹ all of whom flourished during the reign of the Sēna kings of Bengal. Prof. Śāstrī has now adduced an additional proof that undoubtedly the same Halāyudha has been referred to in the Telugu *Dvipada Basavapurāṇa*² of Pāṅkuriki Sōmanātha who lived towards the end of the twelfth century. I have also suggested in the same place that our Halāyudha may be identical with the author of the Kavirahasya, the Abhidhānatnamālā and the Mṛitasakṣīvanī, the last mentioned being a commentary on Piṅgala's Chhandasūtra. It need not worry us that the first named work was written in the court of the Rāshtrakūṭa king Kṛishṇarāja III (A.D. 939-967) and the last mentioned work in the court of a different ruler, viz., the Paramāra Muṇja-Vāḍpati (A.D. 974-993), as it is quite possible that the poet after the death of his Rāshtrakūṭa patron moved to the Paramāra court which was noted for its patronage for learning at that time.³ Mr. Ghosh has identified Navagrāma in Dakṣhiṇa-Rāḍha with the village of the same name in the Bhurshut parganā of the Hooghly District in Bengal.⁴ We cannot argue that it is not possible for a poet hailing from far off Bengal to be at the courts of two prominent Indian rulers, one having his capital at Mālkhed in the Nizām's Dominions and the other at Dhār in Central India, when we know of several other scholars from Bengal who held a similar position.⁴

L. 51 of the record mentions Bhōjanagara and a monastery there known as Sōmēsvaradēva-maṭha. One is tempted to identify Bhōjanagara with Dhārā, the capital city of the Paramāras and the monastery with an establishment built probably by the Chālukya Sōmēsvara I who for a time occupied the Paramāra kingdom. But it is to be remembered that the capital city of the Paramāras is always referred to as Dhārā even at the time of Bhōja and his successors also continued to use the same name. It is not also certain whether the maṭha was built by a ruler called Sōmēsvaradēva or was simply attached to a temple of Śiva known as Sōmēsvara. I am also not able to identify Nanḍiyaḍa, the original residence of the Śaiva ascetic Bhāvaavālmika.

² According to this work Halāyudha belonged to Navapura which is apparently the same as Navagrāma of our record, see Basavapurāṇamu (Andhra-granthamūlā series), p. 127.

⁴ See Indian Culture, Vol. I, p. 702 and Vol. II, pp. 360 f. See also the Kollagallu Inscription of the Rāshtrakūṭa Khōṭṭiga (above, Vol. XXI, pp. 263 ff.) which mentions a Gadādhara of Taḍa-grāma in Bengal.

No. 19.—TWO INSCRIPTIONS ON COPPER-PLATES FROM NUTIMADUGU.

BY N. LAKSHMINARAYAN RAO, M.A., OOTACAMUND.

These copper-plates which were in the possession of a peasant of the village Nūtimadugu in the Anantapur District were shown to Mr. C. N. Jeevanna Rao, B.E., Minor Irrigation Supervisor of the District, when he had gone to the village during one of his periodical official visits. It appears that while the cattle-shed attached to the house of the peasant was being repaired, the plates were found buried under the lower wooden hinge of the door of the shed. Mr. Rao kindly brought them to the notice of Mr. M. Srikanta Srouty, B.E., Local Fund Assistant Engineer, Anantapur, who sent them on to me for examination. As they were somewhat corroded when I got them, they were sent to the Archaeological Chemist in India who was good enough to clean them. I edit them below with the kind permission of the Government Epigraphist for India.

The plates are three in number each of which is $5\frac{1}{2}$ " in breadth and $9\frac{1}{2}$ " in length from the centre of the arch at the top. They are strung together on a copper ring which did not bear any seal when the plates were received in the office of the Government Epigraphist for India. It was found that the ring had not been soldered. So it is difficult to say definitely whether this is the original ring which held the plates when they were issued; it is not impossible that the original ring to which the royal seal was attached, might have been lost and the present ordinary ring substituted in its place. The rims of the plates are slightly raised in order to preserve the writing. The weight of the plates, with the ring, is 116 tolas.

At the outset it must be observed that the set of plates is a palimpsest containing two records, one, an Eastern Chālukya grant of the 10th century A.D. and the other, which has been engraved over the earlier inscription, of the time of the Vijayanagara prince Triyambaka. I am unable to explain the circumstances under which the original Chālukya document was used by prince Triyambaka of the first or Saṅgama dynasty of Vijayanagara for writing his own charter more than five centuries after the original was engraved and why it was defaced and a new one incised upon it.

Of the original Eastern Chālukya grant which I shall call A, both the beginning and the end are missing. The extant portion starts on the first side of the second plate of the Vijayanagara grant (hereafter called B) and after being continued on its second side and on the first (outer) side of the first plate ends on the second side of the latter, after giving the name of the king and the geographical division in which the donated village or land was situated. The portion which must have contained the details of the gift such as the name, gōtra, family, etc., of the donee, the name of the village or land granted and its boundaries, the date of the grant and the imprecatory verses, is lost. This must have been engraved on a separate plate which was probably removed at the time when the Vijayanagara grant was engraved and the third plate of the present set which is altogether a new one inserted in its place. Both the plates of the earlier grant are inscribed lengthwise like all Eastern Chālukya grants. It should be noted that these two plates have been slightly cut out at both the corners on the top (i.e., on the left-hand side when held lengthwise) in order to give them the shape of an arch like all Vijayanagara copper-plate grants. During this process some letters in each line have been lost. The later grant was engraved upon three of the four sides of the earlier one. Even on the side that was not defaced by being again written upon (i.e., the first side of the first plate of B) a portion on the right-hand side is damaged by corrosion and some of the letters cannot be read. On the second side of the second plate of B, only half the portion of the original document has been written upon and the letters on the other half, though well beaten, are visible and can be read. Of the remaining portion of the inscription only faint traces are seen, but with the help of the other grants of the Eastern Chālukya dynasty I have succeeded in deciphering to a great extent the preserved portion of the record. The alphabet is ancient Telugu of the 10th century A.D. and the language of the extant portion is Sanskrit.

In spite of the shortcomings noted above this inscription (A) which refers itself to the reign of Vikramāditya (II) is valuable as it is the first and only record of the king yet discovered. As pointed out above, its beginning, which must have been written on a plate which does not now form part of the set, is missing. The first king mentioned is Jayasinhavallabha¹ (i.e., Jayasinha I) who, as in all other records of the Eastern Chālukya dynasty, is given a reign of thirty years. Then follows the genealogy of the dynasty recording the length of each reign, down to Vikramāditya (II) who is introduced in the usual prose preamble to the grant (ll. 25—27) with the virūdas of Samastabhuvanāśraya, Mahārājādhirāja, Parameśvara, Paramabhāṭāraka and Paramabrahmaṇya. He issues a command to the Rāshtrakūṭas and others inhabiting the Kaṇḍērvvāḍi-vishaya. The name of this vishaya occurs in different forms as Kaṇḍēruvāḍi, Kaṇḍēruvāḍi, Kaṇḍēruvāḍi and Kaṇḍravāḍi in several Eastern Chālukya inscriptions and its chief town Kaṇḍēru, after which the district was named, has been identified with Kantēru in the Guntur District.² The grant portion which was recorded next and the date, if it was given, are lost thus depriving us of some valuable facts.

No information of any historical importance that is not already known can be gathered about the predecessors of the donor, viz., king Vikramāditya II. Attention may, however, be drawn to the length of reign assigned to Vijayāditya II, the builder of 108 temples of Narēndrēśvara. He is here stated to have reigned only for 40 years as in the majority of the Eastern Chālukya copper-plate grants. The verses describing the reign of Vikramāditya (II) are new and not found in any other record of the family so far known. The first of them states that he regained the ancestral throne which had been forcibly seized by Tālapa after killing him. The verses that follow praise his prowess in war in a conventional style, but one interesting fact which one of them (v. 5) discloses is that he fought one hundred battles for eight years and took the kingdom (from his enemies) along with Fame. But it is not possible to say whether this refers to his fight with Tāla or to another war as a result of which he made some conquests and extended his kingdom. If by the expression rājyaṁ kīrtiyā samam-agrahāt, his obtaining the ancestral kingdom is meant we would get an idea of the period of time that was taken by Vikramāditya in regaining the throne from Tāla. No doubt the Maliyapūṇḍi grant of Ammarāja II tells us that Vikramāditya (II) slew "at the head of a rough battle this Tāla-rāja together with crowds of different vassals, who were joined by a superior army (and) had troops of furious elephants"³. It is, however, not certain whether Vikramāditya was engaged in fighting Tāla and his allies after Tāla became king. But all the Eastern Chālukya inscriptions assign to Tāla a reign of only one month. If, however, the rival claimants were engaged in warfare for eight years, it is difficult to guess who ruled the country during this long interval between the period after the ejection of Kaṇṭhikā-Bēta by Tāla, and the time when the latter succeeded temporarily in seizing the Chālukya throne. No clue to such an interregnum is available from any of the Chālukya records. The question can be solved only by future discoveries.

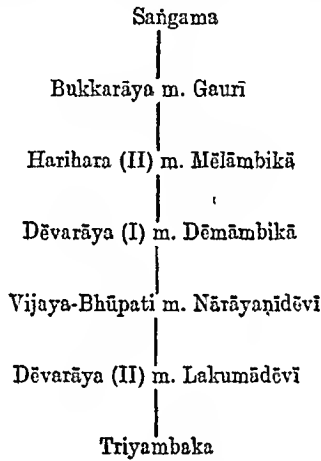

Of inscription B the second plate is written on both sides, the first and third being written on the inner side only. But the lower half of the second side of the second plate and the upper half of the third plate are left blank. The plates are numbered one, two and three respectively in Kannaḍa numerals. The record, like many other grants of the Vijayanagara kings, is written in Nandināgarī characters except the sign-manual śrī-Triyambaka in line 68 which is in

Kannaḍa-Telugu script. The alphabet employed is regular for the period to which the record purports to belong and closely resembles that of the Śrīraṅgam plates of Mallikārjuna¹ dated Śaka 1384, and the Śrīśailam plates of Virūpākṣa of Śaka 1388.² The language is Sanskrit and excepting the words śrī-Gaṇādhīpatayā namaḥ in the beginning of l. 1 and śrī-Triyambaka in the last line the whole inscription is in verse. Many faults common to Vijayanagara grants such as mistakes of spelling, dropping of anusvāra or visarga, using them in places where they are unnecessary and omissions of letters, are found in this one also. As they have been corrected in the body of the text or in foot-notes it is not necessary to notice them here in detail.

The record is important as it is the second known grant of the Yuvarāja Triyambaka; the only other inscription of this prince is published in the Mysore Archaeological Report for 1925,³ though its importance had not been recognised or discussed. The genealogical portion from Saṅgama down to Triyambaka is common to both the grants. Opening with invocations to the Boar-incarnation of Viṣṇu and Gaṇēśa respectively, the present grant mentions the Moon and his descendant Yaḍu who ruled the earth. The following genealogy is then given :—

The epigraph further proceeds to state that after Triyambaka's father had gone to heaven, Immaḍi-Praṇḍha-Dēvēndra (i.e., Mallikārjuna⁴) became king. Verses 15 to 17 tell us that he bore the paramount titles of Rājādhirāja and Rājaparamēśvara and give a list of the king's brudās—the usual epithets of the Vijayanagara kings of the first dynasty. He is stated in verse 18 to have anointed his elder brother Triyambaka as Yuvarāja. This prince who was also called Chikkodeya was established (as Governor) at Ghaṇāḍri (i.e., Penugonḍa) by the king (v. 19).

The object of the inscription is to record that while Prince Triyambaka was governing his province (of Ghaṇāḍri) he granted the village of Bommebāḷu, renaming it as Lakṣmīpura, after the name of his mother, to the Brāhman Māchivōkta, son of Vallabhōkta of the Śuklayajuṣ-śākhā on Monday, the full-moon day of Kārttika in the cyclic year Yuva, the Śaka year being 1377 which is expressed by the numerical words dhātu (7) adri (7) guṇa (3) and bhū(1). The date is slightly irregular as the full-moon day of Kārttika in the year cited fell on Saturday, the 25th October A.D. 1455. The discrepancy may be due to the fact that the engraver might have written Sōmavāra by mistake for Saurivāra; or it is not impossible that, while the grant was actually made on Saturday, it was recorded on Monday and this latter day was cited by mistake. The donee is stated to have been well versed in Vēdas and Śāstras and to have mastered the science of polity (nūti-śāstra). The Yuvarāja made the grant in the presence of god Triyambaka at Bhāskarakashētra (i.e., Hampi). The donated village Bommehālu was situated in Paṇḍemēru-māgaṇi, which was a sub-division of Gutti-rājya in the valita (district) of Penugonḍa. After the imprecatory verses the record closes with the signature of the Yuvarāja Triyambaka.

The donor Yuvarāja Triyambaka is known, as already stated, only from two records (including the one under publication) and not noticed in any of the genealogies of the first dynasty of Vijayanagara so far published. From vv. 11—12 of the present record we learn that he was the son of Dēvarāya. But the most interesting fact revealed by our inscription is that he was the elder brother of the king Immaḍi-Praudha-Dēvēndra (i.e., Mallikārjuna). If he was actually the elder brother, how could his younger brother Mallikārjuna succeed to the throne? The question can be answered in two ways; one is to consider that Mallikārjuna, who ascended the throne after the death of Triyambaka's father, was the son of the paṭṭa-mahishī (senior queen) and Triyambaka, though older in age, was the son of a junior queen and that consequently the throne passed on to Mallikārjuna after his father's death. The second is to regard Mallikārjuna and Triyambaka as sons of brothers, that is to say, Mallikārjuna belonged to the senior line and Triyambaka to the junior line, for it is quite common among Hindus to address and mention cousins as brothers.¹ This raises an important issue, viz., if Mallikārjuna and Triyambaka were actual brothers, were they the children of Dēvarāya II or his younger brother Pratāpa-Dēvarāya? From the use of the epithet praudha-pratāpa-vibhavaḥ which is applied in the present grant to Dēvarāya, the father of Triyambaka, it would appear that they were the sons of Pratāpa-Dēvarāya, who is considered by some scholars to have had the distinctive title of Praudha-Pratāpa.² From the inscription under publication we learn that Immaḍi-Praudha-Dēvēndra became king after the death of Triyambaka's father who, if Triyambaka and Mallikārjuna were brothers, would also be the father of the latter. This would mean that the father of the brothers i.e., Pratāpa-Dēvarāya, the younger brother of Dēvarāya II, was the predecessor of Mallikārjuna on the throne of Vijayanagara. And in support of this conclusion it may be argued that some inscriptions which refer themselves to the reign of a certain Vijaya and bear dates later than the death of Dēvarāya II (A.D. 1446)³ might have been issued by Pratāpa-Dēvarāya, who is known from an inscription⁴ to have had the surname of Vijaya. But there is one serious objection to this theory. Abdur Razak, who was an envoy from Persia to the court of Dēvarāya II, and who had an audience with him has recorded that the younger brother (Pratāpa) was killed in A.D. 1443, i.e., 3 years before the death of his elder brother.⁵ And there appears to be no reason to doubt the veracity of the statement of this contemporary writer. If, however, Mallikārjuna and Triyambaka were the sons of Dēvarāya II this difficulty would not arise. But in this case we would have to admit that Dēvarāya II, the father and predecessor of Immaḍi-Praudha-Dēvēndra was also described as praudha-pratāpa-vibhava. This expression, then, is to be regarded as either being used indiscriminately as a biruda both of Dēvarāya II and his younger brother Pratāpa-Dēvarāya or, that it was not a biruda and had no time of Harihara I and Bukka I the seat of a Viceroyalty¹ and became the capital of the Vijayanagara kingdom after the destruction of Hampi following the Tālikōṭa disaster. The sub-division, Paṇḍemōru-māgaṇi was apparently named after the stream Paṇḍamēru which feeds the big tank of Bukkarāyasamudram at Anantapur.

No. 20.—SANTA-BOMMALI PLATES OF INDRAVARMAN: [GANGA] YEAR 87.

By R. K. GHOSHAL, M.A., CALCUTTA.

The copper-plates, which bear the subjoined inscription, were secured in 1925 from a farmer of the village of Santa-Bommali in the Ganjām District by Mr. Lakshminarayan Harichandan Jagadev, M.R.A.S., Rājā Bāhādur of Tēkkali, in whose ownership they now lie. The inscription seems to have been first published in the Utkala Sāhitya Parishad Patrikā of Cuttack, Vol. XXXI, which is not accessible to me. It was next dealt with by its present owner in the Journ. of the Andhra Hist. Res. Society (Vol. IV, pp. 21 ff. and plate). His introduction to and reading of the text of the inscription, however, having contained a number of inaccuracies, I take this opportunity to publish a revised edition. The present treatment is based on a reproduction of the plates accompanying the Rājā Bāhādur's paper referred to above.

The plates are three in number and measure² 6½" by 2½". The first and the third plates bear writing on their inner faces only, while the second one is inscribed on both sides. The plates are in a perfect state of preservation. Towards the proper right end of each plate there is a hole for a ring of 2½" in diameter to connect them. The seal,³ on which the ends of the ring are secured, measures about 4½" and on it is said to be engraved the figure of a (conchab ?) bull. The weight of the plates together with the ring is 52 tolas.

The characters belong to the southern class of alphabets and are almost of the same type as is found in the Achyutapuram plates⁴ (Year 87) and the Parlā-Kimēḍi (Year 91)

 2 J. A. H. R. S., Vol. IV, p. 21. I have not had any opportunity to verify this and the following information in this paragraph from the original plates. This record has also been noticed in An. Rep. on South Indian Epigraphy for 1925-26, p. 10, Appendix A, No. 2.
 3 No shape of the seal is given; perhaps it is of the usual small oval shape.
 4 Above, Vol. III, pp. 127 ff.

plates¹ of Indravarman. They have also a general resemblance to the script of the stray Tirlingi plate² (Year 28 ?) as well as to that of the Narasingapalli³ (Year 79) and Utlam⁴ (Year 80) plates of Hastivarman.

The numerical symbols 80, 7 and 30 occur in line 23.

As in the Parlā-Kimēḍi plates, the heads of the letters have in many places an imperfect and disjointed appearance, as if they had been partially worn away by rust. But as observed by Dr. Fleet,¹ this is due, wherever it occurs, to faulty execution on the part of the engraver, in omitting sometimes to complete the mātrās and sometimes even to commence them at all. Otherwise, the engraving is fairly clearly done. There are six lines inscribed on each plate, the whole inscription containing twenty-four lines in all.

The language is Sanskrit. With the exception of three customary verses (ll. 19-23) and one concluding verse (l. 24), the inscription is written in prose throughout.

In respect of orthography, we have to notice (1) the use of the guttural nasal (ñ) before h in °śiñha, line 24, (2) the substitution of anusvāra by the class nasal of the following consonant in āyan=dāna, l. 18, (3) the doubling of dh in conjunction with a following y in °ānuddhyātāḥ, l. 7, (4) the frequent doubling of consonants after r, (5) the occasional doubling of consonants before r and (6) the use of anusvāra in place of the final form of m in phalan (l. 20) and °nupālanam (l. 21). The letters b and v are indicated by separate signs, the solitary exception being in parivādhā (l. 14). The rules of sandhi are observed throughout except in lines 5 and 17.

The object of the inscription is to record the gift of three halas of land towards meeting the expenses of offering regular worship and repairing the temple of god Rāmēśvara-bhaṭṭāraka in Dantayavāgū. Of these two halas lay in the village of Haribhaṭa in the district of Krōṣṭhukavarttanī and the third at Dantayavāgū itself. The gift was made into a permanent free-hold dēvāgrahāra by Indravarman, alias Rājasimha, who is described as belonging to the spotless family of the Gāṅgas.

The date of the inscription is given, in figures only, as the years of the prosperous victorious reign (pravarddhamāna-vijaya-rājya-samvatsarāḥ) 80 7; (the month) Jyēṣṭha; the day 30 (l. 23).

The charter was written by Vinayachandra, the son of Bhānuachandra (l. 24).

We have had as yet three published records of the reign of Indravarman, alias Rājasimha: they are (1) the Achyutapuram plates of the Year 87, (2) the Parlā-Kimēḍi plates of the Year 91, and (3) the record under discussion.

Another single plate from Tirlingi (in the Ganjām District), apparently the last of a set, bears an inscription which is dated, according to Mr. S. N. Rajaguru⁵, in the year 28 of the Gāṅga era. The writer (and engraver) of this stray plate describes himself as ¹ Ind. Ant., Vol. XVI, pp. 131 ff. For a lithograph of the plates Dr. Fleet refers us to his Indian Inscriptions, No. 18. The plates are preserved in the Madras Museum. This work of Dr. Fleet does not seem to have been eventually published.

Vinayachandra, the son of Bhānuchandra, who has been taken by Dr. D. R. Bhandarkar¹ to be the namesake of the writer of the three records of Indravarman-Rājasinhha mentioned above. Proceeding from this conjecture, Dr. Bhandarkar suggests² that the word read by Mr. Rajaguru as denoting twenty-eight may actually be read as eighty-eight, thus satisfactorily adjusting the date of the plate within the reign of Indravarman of the present record. The reading of the date on this plate has also been doubted by Dr. R. C. Majumdar.³ The reproduction of the plate in question accompanying Mr. Rajaguru's paper⁴ is unfortunately too obscure to admit of verification on this point. What little however remains does not seem to support the reading ashthaśītas = asya as suggested by Dr. Bhandarkar.⁵

Of the localities mentioned, Kalinganagara has been variously identified with modern Kalingapatam⁶ at the mouth of the Vamsadhara river or with Mukhalingam near Chicacole. The Krōṣṭukavarttānī (viśaya) is mentioned in a number of early and later Gāṅga records.⁷ It has been identified by Dr. E. Hultzsch⁸ with modern Chicacole. A district (bhōga) called Dantaṣavāgu (really 'vāgu) is mentioned in the Bṛihatprōṣhthā grant of Umavarman (above, Vol. XII, p. 5, l. 5). But I am unable to identify both this village and that of Haribhaṭa.

Vinayachandra, the writer of the present record, was also responsible for preparing the draft of the two inscriptions of Hastivarman and two of Indravarman⁹ mentioned above.

The biruda Rājasinhha applied to Indravarman in the present record, also occurs in the Nara-singapalli and Utlam plates of Hastivarman and also in the Achyutapuram and Parlā-Kimēdi plates of Indravarman.

The date of our inscription can be ascertained only very approximately. If, as is held by Prof. R. Subba Rao,¹⁰ the epoch of the Gāṅga era began from 494 A.D., the date of our record would fall at 494 + 87 = 581 A.D. Without caring however to arrive at any one particular year, we would not be far wrong if we placed our record in the period 570-625 A.D.

⁴ J. A. H. R. S., Vol. III, p. 55.

⁸ Above, Vol. XVII, pp. 332 ff.

⁹ He was also probably the same as the writer and engraver of the stray Tirlungi grant (J. A. H. R. S., Vol. III, pp. 54 ff.) the donor of which must remain, pending the discovery of the remaining plates of the set, a mysterious personality. Prof. R. Subba Rao however suggests (J. A. H. R. S., Vol. VI, p. 71) that the donor may be identified with Mitravarma, father of Indrādhirāja, mentioned in the Gōdāvari plates of Prithivimūla (J. B. B. R. A. S., Vol. XVI, pp. 116 ff. and pls.). This Indrādhirāja has further been held by Dr. Bhandarkar (List, p. 266, No. 1904 and f. n. 1) to be identical with Indravarman of the Jirjingi pls. of the Gāṅga Year 39 (J. A. H. R. S., Vol. III, pp. 51 ff.).

TRANSLATION.

(Lines 1-14) Ōm Hail ! From the victorious (city of) Kaliṅganagara, which is pleasant in all seasons, the glorious *Mahārāja Indravarman*⁵addresses (the following) order to all the householders en masse at the village of Haribhaṭa in (the district of) Krōshṭukavarttanī :

“ Be it known to you that We have granted, after portioning it off, and on being informed by Talavaradēva,⁶ the Bhōgika,⁷ and for increasing the religious merit of (Our) parents and of Ourselves, two *halas*⁸ of land in this village for the sake of performing (rites known as) bali, charu and sattra, and for the repairs of dilapidations (of the temple) of god Rāmēśvara-bhaṭṭāraka (situated) in (the village called) Dantayavāgū and (in addition to that) another hala of land in (the same) Dantayavāgū, having constituted it as an agrahāra for god (Rāmēśvara-bhaṭṭāraka) which is to last as long as the moon and the sun, and having exempted it from all impositions.

Having known this, nobody should cause any hindrance ”.

(Ll. 15-18) The boundary marks of the land (granted) in (the village of) Haribhaṭa are as follows :—On the north, the storm-water channel of the tank (called) Kshatriya-taṭāka ; on the east, an arjuna tree, after that a row of ant-hills, then up to the artificial line of heaped-up stones, then a nimba tree ; on the south, the same channel of that tank (Kshatriya-taṭāka) ; on the west, a well, then the twin arjuna trees, then the royal road.

(Ll. 18-23) The future kings should maintain this religious gift. And likewise the verses sung by Vyāsa are quoted :—

(Here come three of the customary verses.)

(Ll. 23-24) The year 87 of the prosperous victorious reign ; (the month) Jyēshṭha, the day 30.

This edict (śāsana) of Rājasinha has been written at the command of his (the king's) own mouth, by Vinayachandra, the son of Bhānuchandra.⁹

³ Metre : Śloka (Anuṣṭubh).

⁵ For a translation of the long string of epithets that follows see above, Vol. III, p. 129.

⁶ Talavara as an official title (Mahāpratthāra-Talavara-Vinayaśūrasya) occurs on a Basari seal (An. Rep., A. S. I., 1903-4, p. 109, No. 16). Mahātalarava (along with its feminine Mahātalaravi) in the sense of a high dignitary with indefinite function is frequently mentioned in inscriptions of Ikshvāku kings from Nāgarjunikoṇḍa (above, Vol. XX, pp. 6-7 and f. n. 1).

In the present instance also Talavaradēva-Bhōgika (or Talavara-dēvabhōgika ?) seems to have been used as the title of an officer who did the dual function of a talavara and a bhōgika.

⁷ For the explanation of the term Bhōgika, see above, Vol. XXIII, pp. 59 and 64. Also C. I. I., Vol. III, p. 100, n. 1.

⁸ In explaining the technical word kula, in Manu, VII, 119, Kulluka observes thus : śaḍgavān madhyamanī halam=itī tatāvidha-haladvayēna yāvatī bhūmīr=āhyatē tat=kulam=itī vadati. Here the connotation of hala is not clear. In any case, hala appears to be a recognised kind of land-measure.

⁹ I am grateful to my revered teacher Dr. R. G. Basak, M.A., Ph.D., Senior Professor of Sanskrit, Presidency College, Calcutta, for kindly suggesting a number of corrections in my interpretation of the text of the inscription.

No. 21.—PURSHOTTAMPURI PLATES OF RAMACHANDRA : SAKA 1232.

BY PROF. V. V. MIRASHI, M.A., NAGPUR.

These plates were brought to my notice by Mr. R. M. Bhnsari, M.A., Professor of Marāṭhī, in the Osmania College, Hyderābād (Deccan). At my request Dr. N. P. Chakravarti, Government Epigraphist, supplied me with excellent ink-impressions of them. The original plates were kindly procured by Mr. G. Yazdani, M.A., O.B.E., Director of Archaeology, Hyderābād State, and their ink-impressions taken by the Superintendent for Epigraphy, Madras. I am indebted to Mr. Yazdani for permission to edit the plates in this Journal.

The copper-plates, which are three in number, were discovered in the possession of a Gōsāvī at Purshōttampurī on the southern bank of the Gōdāvarī, about 40 miles due west of Parbhani, in the Bhīr District of H. E. H. the Nizām's Dominions. They are very massive, each measuring 1' 2½" broad, 1' 8" high and ¾" thick. Their total weight is 47·25 lbs.¹ The ends of the plates are raised into rims for the protection of the writing. The first and third plates are inscribed on one side only and the second on both the sides. The plates have in the centre at the top a round hole 1½" in diameter for the ring which must have originally held them together; but neither the ring nor the seal, which must have been connected with it², is now forthcoming. The writing is in a state of excellent preservation. There are 141 lines in all, of which thirty-four are written on each of the first two inscribed sides, thirty-eight on the second side of the second plate, while the last plate has thirty-five lines. The technical execution is very good, there being few mistakes of writing or engraving. In line 51 two redundant aksharas have been cancelled by incising two vertical strokes on the top.

The characters are Nāgarī. Except in a few cases they closely resemble the ordinary Nāgarī characters of the present time. The only peculiarities that call for notice are that the curve for the medial u is in some cases added to the side and not to the bottom of the vertical stroke, see Vishṇu, l. 81 and achyutan, l. 137; the medial diphthongs are in many cases denoted by prish-ṭhamātrās; the subscript member of the ligature gg like that of yy is denoted only by a horizontal stroke, see svarggam, l. 136; ñ appears with a dot in one case and without it in another, see Sūrya in ll. 2-3 and 30; the form of the rare ih in Vinīkhaḍēva, l. 105, is noteworthy; the letters ṇ and ṇ̄ approximate to their modern forms, see ramaṇa, l. 2 and yajñair, l. 124; the letters t and n, th and dh as well as v and ch are in some places written alike; the left member of dh is fully developed except in ligatures like ddh; there was thus no possibility of confusion between dhā and vā, still the horizontal line joining the vertical strokes of the former akshara is not discarded, see nī-dhānam, l. 2; finally, v and b are denoted by their proper signs except in vrahma sv, l. 133.

The language is Sanskrit and the record is written partly in prose and partly in verse. There are 59 verses in all. Of the initial 18 verses which eulogize the reigning king Rāmachandra and his ancestors, one completely and another partly³ occur in the earlier Paithan plates of the same king. It is again noteworthy that in the concluding portion, which contains benedictive and imprecatory verses, there is one verse which is only a hemistich, and another, which is an Anush- pubh verse of six pādas. The inscription is composed in a good style and contains an interesting use of double entendre in several verses of the eulogistic portion. Of lexicographical interest are the old Marāṭhī words, phulabaḍuē and jōisī (modern Jośī). The former which is the title of a royal functionary¹ occurs also in an old Marāṭhī work of the same age, viz., the Śisupālavadhā (v. 51) of Bhāskarabhaṭṭa. The nasalisation of the final syllable in the Marāṭhī names of villages is also noteworthy. As regards orthography we may note that kh is used for sh as in paritōkhēṇa, l. 41 and vice versā as in ratna-shanyāl, l. 48. The dental and palatal sibilants are used each in its proper place except in a few cases such as sprisyatē, l. 25. The letters v and b are almost everywhere clearly distinguished. In one case (namely, in Mahādēōpurī, l. 116), va is changed to ō as in old Marāṭhī works. The rules of sandhi are violated in several places, the most common instance being the addition of an anusvāra before final n as in ullāsayanṇ=, l. 12, uddharamṇ=, l. 18, etc.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of the king Rāmachandra of the Later Yādava dynasty. The object of it is to record the grant, by Rāmachandra, of some villages to his minister Purushōttama alias Purushai Nāyaka, for the formation of an agrahāra and the donation, by Purushōttama, of the agrahāra which he named Purushōttamapurī after himself, to certain Brāhmanas. The agrahāra consisted of the four villages, Pōkharī, Aḍagau², Vāghaurē and Kurupāragau, which were situated in the Kānhairī-khampanaka (subdivision) of the Kānhairī-dēśa. The first three of these villages had three hamlets (khēṭakas) attached to each of them, viz., Sāēgāhvāna, Pimpalagāhvāna, Pālipōkharī, Pimpalavāḍi, Kājalakōvi, Sōijāṇē, Simpivihirē, Gōlēgāhvāna and Dhāravāghaurē. The agrahāra was bounded on the east by Dāṇḍigau, and Sādulē, on the south by Kēśavapurī, Sāvārigavā and Harikīnibagau, on the west by Rājagau, Hivarē, Chīṇchavali and Mahādēvapurī joined to Drugalēgāhvāna and on the north by the Gaṅgā. The land of these villages was divided into 86 parts (*vrītṭis*³) of which two were assigned to two gods, whose names have not been specified, one was set apart to provide for the annual performance of the agnishīkṣā rite⁴ and the maintenance of a charitable water-shed (prapā)⁵, while the remaining 83 parts were donated to 83 Brāhmanas, one being assigned to each. The names of the donees and their fathers together with such details as their śākhās and gōtras are given in lines 80-114. Of the eighty-three Brāhmaṇa beneficiaries, fifty-seven belonged to the Rīgvēda, twenty-one to the Taittirīya-śākhā of the Black Yajurveda, one to the Kāyva and one to the Mādhyandina-śākhā of the White Yajurveda and the remaining three to the Sāmaveda. Among the gōtras the following are represented:—Kāśyapa, Bhāradvāja, Jāmadagnya-Vatsa, Vasishṭha, Viṣṇuviddha, Kauśika,

Agastya, Viśvāmitra, Kaundinya, Harita, First Ātrēya,¹ Vishṇuvijddha-Āṅgīrasa, Vādhryaśva, Gautama, Naidhruva, Dēvarāta. Ātrēya, Vatsa, Kapi, Gārgya, Pūtimāsha, Śrīvatsa and Lōhita. Unlike some other Yādava inscriptions such as the Chikka-Bāgiwādi plates of the time of Kṛishṇa² and the Paṭhan plates of Rāmachandra, the present record does not, except in four cases, mention the family names of the Brāhmaṇa donees and it is noteworthy that at least three of these four family names, viz., Miśra, Dubē and Trivēdi, are of North-Indian Brāhmaṇas.

The inscription contains two dates, one in lines 33-34 and the other in lines 72-73. Both of them refer themselves to the Śaka era and are expressed in years which are said to have elapsed since the time of a Śaka king.³ It is noteworthy that there is no reference in them to the king Śālivāhana as the founder of the era. This manner of mentioning the era confirms Dr. Fleet's suspicion that the date of the Thāpā plates of Rāmachandra also, of which the original plates are lost, did not probably contain any reference to this legendary king⁴. The earliest inscriptions which mention this king's name in connection with the dates of the Śaka era are those of the king Bukkarāya I of Vijayanagara, as has already been pointed out by Dr. Fleet.

The earlier of the two dates mentioned in the present inscription, which records the grant of the aforementioned four villages by Rāmachandra is Saturday, the 11th tithi of the bright fortnight of Bhādrapada of Śaka 1232, the cyclic year being Sādhārāṇa. This date regularly corresponds, for the expired Śaka year 1232, to the 5th September A. D. 1310, on which day the aforementioned tithi ended at 11 h. after mean sunrise. The cyclic year was Sādhārāṇa according to the southern luni-solar system. The second date which registers the donation of the agrahāra of the same four villages by the minister Purushōttama is mentioned as Kapilashashṭhī in the month of Bhādrapada in Śaka 1232 and the cyclic year Sādhārāṇa. The fortnight and the week-day are not expressly stated in this case. They are, however, implied by the mention of the Kapilashashṭhī; for it is well known that the latter name is given to the sixth tithi of the dark fortnight of the amānta Bhādrapada when it falls on a Tuesday and is joined with the nakshatra Rōhiṇī and the yōga Vyatīpāta. It is regarded as particularly auspicious if the sun is besides in the nakshatra Hasta⁵. This date also is quite regular. It corresponds, for the same expired Śaka year 1232, to Tuesday, the 15th September A.D. 1310, when the sixth tithi of the dark fortnight of the amānta Bhādrapada ended at 12 h. 15 m. after mean sunrise. This tithi was Kapilashashṭhī; for on that day the moon was in the constellation Rōhiṇī till 3 h. 20 m. and the yōga Vyatīpāta ended at 12 h. 45 m. after mean sunrise⁶. The sun also was then in Hasta; for it had entered that nakshatra only a week before, viz., at 18 h. 8 m. after mean sunrise on the 8th September A.D. 1310. The inscription states that Rāmachandra had asked Purushōttama several times before to make an agrahāra worthy of himself. The latter was evidently awaiting the tithi Kapilashashṭhī, a grant made on which is regarded as specially meritorious. He finally made the grant on the aforementioned day when the rare combination of the particular tithi, week-day, nakshatras and yōga necessary for a Kapilashashṭhī occurred in the early hours of the morning.

Having thus disposed of the formal portion of the grant, we shall now turn to the historical information furnished by it.

The genealogy of the reigning king Rāmachandra is here traced from Simha (Simhāṇa). Verse 4 states that Simhāṇa defeated Ballāla and the lord of Bhambhāgiri, imprisoned the king Bhōja on the crest of a fortress and vanquished Arjuna. These exploits of Simhāṇa are enumerated in other records also. In fact the aforementioned verse was already known from the Paithan plates of Rāmachandra. Most of the kings mentioned in it have already been identified by Dr. R. G. Bhandarkar and Dr. Fleet in their respective works.¹ Still there are a few more details about them which can now be gathered from records which have recently come to light.

Ballāla defeated by Simhāṇa was evidently the Hoysala king Vira-Ballāla II, who flourished from circa A.D. 1173 to A.D. 1220². The war in which he suffered a defeat seems, therefore, to have been fought in the beginning of Simhāṇa's reign (circa A.D. 1210 to 1247). Hemādri's Vratakhanda gives credit to Simhāṇa for the annexation of the entire kingdom of Ballāla. This is no doubt an exaggeration; but as Fleet has shown, Simhāṇa seems to have annexed some territory to the south of the Malaprabhā and the Krishnā which formed the southern boundary of the Yādava kingdom during the reigns of his predecessors Bhillama and Jaitugi. The Āndhra king defeated by Simhāṇa was probably Ganapati of the Kākatīya dynasty who had been released from imprisonment and placed on the throne by Simhāṇa's father Jaitugi³. The battle does not appear to have been decisive; for Ganapati also claimed success over his Yādava antagonist⁴. No definite information about the third king Kakkalla overthrown by Simhāṇa was available until recently. Dr. Bhandarkar suggested that he belonged to the Kalachuri dynasty of Tripuri; for some kings of that dynasty were known to have assumed the analogous name Kōkkalla.⁵ From a stone inscription recently found at the village Uddari in the Sorab talukā of the Shimoga District in the Mysore State,⁶ it seems however that this Kakkalla (who is called Kākala in that record) was a mighty ruler of Varāṇa. Varāṇa is mentioned in several southern inscriptions.⁷ The Hoysala king Vishṇuvardhana is said to have dispersed like a gale the clouds which were the Varāṇa kings.⁸ The exact location of the country is not known, but it seems that it was situated somewhere in South India, probably to the north of the Mysore State.

³ Ind. Ant., Vol. XIV, p. 310. Some inscriptions describe Simhāṇa as the uprooter of the water-lily that was the head of the Tēlānga king (Bomb. Gaz., Vol. I, pt. ii, p. 524 and Mysore Arch. Sur. Rep. for 1929, p. 142). But a similar exploit is mentioned in connection with Mahādēva also. See above, Vol. XXIII, p. 194. So it is doubtful if Simhāṇa really killed a Kākatīya king. Perhaps he fought in the war in which his father Jaitugi is said to have cut off the head of Ganapati's uncle Rudra (see Hemādri's Vratakhanda, Bomb. Gaz., Vol. I, pt. ii, p. 272). Or he may have killed Ganapati's father Mahādēva, who also is known to have met with death on a battlefield; see above, Vol. III, p. 97.

It opens with the date, Śaka 1198, which would assign it to the reign of Rāmachandra, but the extant portion contains epithets which are usually applied to Simhāṇa. The same draft seems to have been used in the Tilavalli inscription (J. B. B. R. A. S., Vol. IX, p. 32), but owing to imperfect readings the reference to Kākala, the king of Varāṇa, seems to have escaped the notice of earlier writers.

The next king mentioned in the present record as overthrown by Śiṃhaṇa was the lord of Bhambhāgiri.¹ Hēmadri mentions his name as Lakshmīdhara. The Āmbē inscription No. 2 names him as Lakshmīdēva and furnishes the additional information that he belonged to the Ābhira dynasty.² Bhambhāgiri has not yet been satisfactorily identified. Mr. G. H. Khare has suggested that it might be either Bhāmbhōri in the Ahmednagar District or Rājāchī Bhām near Yeotmal in Berār.³ But neither of these identifications can be upheld in the absence of a fort near by; for the name Bhambhāgiri suggests that it was a fortified place. As Lakshmīdēva, the lord of Bhambhāgiri, belonged to the Ābhira dynasty, he was probably ruling somewhere in Khāndesh, which still has a large population of Ābhīras or Ahīrs. There is even now a ruined old town called Bhāmēr, four miles south of Nizāmpur in the Pimpalnēr tālūkā of the West Khāndesh District. It lies at the foot of a great fortified hill which has many ruined gateways, gates, towers, and also some old caves locally known as Rājā's houses.⁴ The hill near Bhāmēr is, therefore, probably Bhambhāgiri. The aforementioned Āmbē inscription describes Khōlēśvara, a general of Śiṃhaṇa, as a very wild fire which burned the forest of the family of Lakshmīdēva, the Ābhira king of Bhambhāgiri and a similar statement occurs about Śiṃhaṇa in the Uddari stone inscription. This shows that Śiṃhaṇa probably exterminated the whole family of the Ābhira prince.

The king Bhōja, who was confined on a hill, has already been identified with Bhōja II of the Śīlāhara dynasty of Kolhāpur. Some southern inscriptions⁵ describe Śiṃhaṇa as a very lord of birds (Garuḍa) in routing the serpent, viz., the king Bhōja who resided on Praṇāla. Praṇāla is plainly Panhālā, a strong fort 12 miles to the north-west of Kolhāpur. After this defeat of Bhōja, the Śīlāhara kingdom was annexed by Śiṃhaṇa; for the inscriptions of his governors are thenceforth found at Kolhāpur and the adjoining territory. The earliest of these is dated A.D. 1218 which shows that the defeat of Bhōja must have occurred some time before that date. The Āmbē inscriptions Nos. 2 and 3 also mention a king named Bhōja who was defeated by Śiṃhaṇa's general Khōlēśvara.⁶ But as he is said there to have belonged to the Paramāra dynasty and to have been the lord of Chāhanda, he must be different from the homonymous Śīlāhara king. Chāhanda where he ruled may be Chāndā, the chief town of the Chāndā District of the Central Provinces. And it may be noted in this connection that a stone inscription of a Paramāra chief, dated Śaka 1308, has been found at Bhāndak,⁷ which lies only 16 miles north-west of Chāndā.

Arjuna, the lastnamed antagonist of Śiṃhaṇa, was identified by Dr. Fleet with Arjunavarmadēva, king of Aṇḍulwād of the Vāghelā branch of the Chālukya family. Though he did not come to the throne till A.D. 1261-62, Fleet thought that he might have held a command under his father Viśaladēva (A.D. 1243-44 to 1261-62) and thus might have been a contemporary of Śiṃhaṇa.⁸ Dr. Bhandarkar, on the other hand, proposed to identify him with Arjunavarmadēva, king of Mālwa.⁹ In several other inscriptions Śiṃhaṇa's victories over both the Gurjara and Mālava kings are spoken of, but the name of Arjuna is rarely coupled with either of them. In the stone inscription from Uddari, to which attention has been called above, Siṃhaṇa is described as a lion who curbed the pride of the rutting elephant, namely, Arjuna, the king of the Mālava country.¹ This corroborates Dr. Bhandarkar's view that the king Arjuna belonged to the Paramāra dynasty.

Our inscription next mentions Jaitrapāla, the son of Siṃhaṇa. But the praise lavished on him is wholly conventional and affords no proof that he even came to the throne. In fact, epigraphical records make it clear that Siṃhaṇa was succeeded by his grandson Kṛishṇa, the son of Jaitrapāla.²

Of the two verses (7 and 8) which describe the achievements of Kṛishṇa, the first refers to his victory over Kāmapāla. This king, so far as I know, is not named elsewhere and there is no express mention of the dynasty to which he belonged or the country over which he ruled. The Āmbē inscriptions Nos. 2 and 3 mention one Rāmapāla, the king of Benares, who was routed by Khōlēśvara.³ The similarity of the names Rāmapāla and Kāmapāla may be taken to indicate that both of them belonged to the same royal family; but the description in verse 7 that the overthrow of Kāmapāla delighted cowherds suggests that he belonged to the Ābhira dynasty and he may therefore have been ruling somewhere in Khāndesh. This conjecture receives some support from the recently discovered Tāsgaon plates which intimate a victory over a chief of cowherds (gōpuka-pālaka) obtained by Kēśava, a feudatory chief of the Yādava Emperor Kṛishṇa.⁴

Verse 8 intimates Kṛishṇa's victories over the kings of Gurjara, Mālava, Chōla and Kōśala. Some other inscriptions also claim for Kṛishṇa successes over most of these princes, but they do not specifically name any of them. Hēmadri, however, mentions Kṛishṇa's defeat of the extensive forces of Viśaladēva, the king of *Gujarāt*⁵ and the Bēhaṭṭi plates describe the fierce fight in a graphic manner.⁶ The Muṇḍoli stone inscription⁷ dated A. D. 1252-53 eulogizes Kṛishṇa as 'a very Trinētra to Madana in the form of the king of Mālava'. The contemporary king of Mālwa was probably Jaitugidēva for whom we have the dates V. S. 1292 and 1300.⁸ The same inscription speaks of Kṛishṇa as the sovereign of the king of Chōla.⁹ There is, however, no actual proof of Kṛishṇa's encounter with the contemporary Chōla king who was Rājendra III (1246-79).¹⁰ The king of Kōśala was evidently the contemporary Kalachuri ruler of Ratanpur. He was probably the successor of Jājalladēva who was defeated by *Siṃhaṇa*¹¹; but we have now no means of ascertaining his name, for the last inscriptional record of the

This verse which the editor found difficult to interpret refers to the personation of the ruler of Kōṅkaya and the chief of cowherds by some boys and of Chandradēva and Kēśava (the two brothers who were feudatories of Kṛishṇa) by others, while they were playing in the palace of Chandradēva. The description is evidently intended to suggest the victories of the two brothers over the king of Kōṅkaya and the chief of cowherds (Ābhira?).

Kalaehuris of Ratanpur which can be referred to that age, viz., the Pēṇḍrābandh plates of Pratāpamalla¹, is dated K. 965 (A. D. 1214). i.e., more than thirty years before the accession of Kṛishṇa.

The present inscription mentions only one exploit of Mahādēva, the younger brother and successor of Kṛishṇa, viz., his destruction of Sōma. The latter is evidently Sōmēśvara of the Śilāhāra dynasty, the ruler of North Kōṅkaṇ, two records of whose reign have recently been edited in this journal.² Mahādēva seems to have continued the hostilities which were begun by his predecessor Kṛishṇa; for the aforementioned Tāsgaon plates intimate a victory over a king of Kōṅkaṇ won by Chandraḍēva, a feudatory of Kṛishṇa.³ The description in verse 10 of the present record suggests that Sōmēśvara was killed in a naval engagement with the fleet of Mahādēva.

Mahādēva's son and successor was Āmaṇa⁴ to whose glorification the present inscription devotes two verses. They are, however, altogether devoid of historical interest. Verse 13, of which the latter part was already known from the Paiṭhan plates, states that Rāma (i.e., Rāmachandra), the son of Kṛishṇa, having occupied the fort of Dēvagiri, forcibly wrested the kingdom from Āmaṇa. The next verse gives an interesting description of the ruse which Rāmachandra adopted to obtain possession of the impregnable fort. He entered it with a party of dancers who were his soldiers in disguise. When admitted inside, he rallied his foot-soldiers and attacked his antagonists apparently while they were engaged in seeing the dance. The dancers also, throwing off their ornaments (i.e., disguise), joined in the fight. Rāmachandra seems to have won an easy victory as his enemy was taken unawares. The Līlācharitra, a work of the Mahānubhāva sect from which some extracts of historical importance have recently been published,⁵ gives a graphic account of the confusion caused by this sudden attack. Chakradhara, the founder of the sect, was then sojourning at the village Savitā⁶ (v. l. Sēvatā) near Dēvagiri. Seeing that the people were panic-stricken and some carts carrying wounded persons were passing through the village, Chakradhara sent his disciple Indrabhaṭṭa to inquire what had happened. He confirmed what Chakradhara had already come to know by intuition that a revolution had taken place at Dēvagiri, that Rāmadēva had deposed Āmaṇadēva and himself occupied his throne, that Narasiṃhadēva (who seems to be Āmaṇadēva's general or minister) had fled away and that Rāmadēva had put out the eyes of Āmaṇadēva. As this account occurs in the Līlācharitra, which is a biography of Chakradhara, written by his disciple Mahindrabaṭṭa, we may take it as trustworthy. The Ratnamālāstōtra of Kēśava Vyāsa, another disciple of Chakradhara, furnishes the further detail that the aforementioned incident took place in the evening.⁷ The Smṛitishṭaḥa of Paraśarāma Vyāsa, who flourished in the same period, charges Rāmadēva with the murder of his brother, persecution of saints and inefficient administration of his kingdom which culminated in his capture by Muhammadan invaders.¹

⁴ He is called Ammaṇa in the present plates and Āmaṇa in the Paiṭhan plates.

Verses 16-18 describe the achievements of Rāmachandra. Though several inscriptions of the reign of this king have been discovered till now, few of them refer to any historical events. We have, therefore, here for the first time a contemporary account of some important events in Rāmachandra's reign. Verse 16 states that Rāmachandra defeated with ease the mighty lord of the extensive Ḍāhala country, subjugated the ruler of Bhāṇḍāgāra, dethroned the king of Vajrākara and defeated in battle the prince of cowherds. The lord of the Ḍāhala country is evidently the Kalachuri king who was ruling at Tripurī, now a small village, 6 miles from Jubbulpore. The Yādavas were often at war with the Kalachuris. In the Pulunja inscription Siṃhaṇa is called Ḍāhala-hṛit-kutūhala, i.e., 'a very curiosity of the heart of (the people of) the Ḍāhala country'.² It is not known who was ruling at Tripurī in the time of Rāmachandra; for the last Kalachuri prince known from inscriptional records is the Mahākumāra Ajayasimha mentioned in the Kumbhi plates³ (A.D. 1180-81) and the undated Bherā-Ghāṭ stone inscription⁴ of his father Vijayasimha.

It is again not known who is meant by the ruler of Bhāṇḍāgāra but it seems fairly certain that Bhāṇḍāgāra is identical with Bhaṇḍārā, 38 miles from Nāgpur, which is now the headquarters of a district of the same name in the Central Provinces. We know that Berār was annexed to the Yādava kingdom as early as the reign of Siṃhaṇa; for a stone inscription of his reign has been discovered at Amrāpur in the Khāmgaon District⁵ and several villages in Berār were donated as agrahāras to Brāhmaṇas by his general Khōlēśvara.⁶ But the eastern districts of Nāgpur and Bhaṇḍārā were probably occupied for the first time during the reign of Rāmachandra. It is noteworthy that an inscription of his reign has been discovered at Rāmṭek near Nāgpur⁷ and another at Lānji⁸ in the Bālāghāṭ District, about a hundred miles north-east of Nāgpur.

Vajrākara, the ruler of which was deposed by Rāmachandra, is probably identical with Vairāgarh, 80 miles north-east of Chāndā in the Garh-Chirōli taluk of the Chāndā District. Near the village there is still a large stone fortress in a fair state of preservation surrounded by a moat. Vairāgarh is named in ancient records as Vajra or Vajragadhā on account of its diamond mines which are referred to even in Muhammadan chronicles.⁹ It was evidently a place of considerable importance, for it is referred to in several records. Kulōttuṅga Chōla I, for instance, is said to have captured many elephants at Vayirāgaram.¹⁰ The chief of cowherds defeated by Rāmachandra may, like Lakshmīdēva and Kāmapāla, have been ruling somewhere in Khāndesh.

Verse 17 mentions some more victories of Rāmachandra. He subjugated in battle the king of Palli, made the king of Kānyakubja bend low, overran the mountain Kailāsa, routed the ruler of Māhima, captured forcibly the lord of Saṅgama and destroyed the ruler of Khēṭa. The Pallirāja¹ may have been the chief of some hill tribe like the Bhills or Gonds in the Vindhya mountain. There is no corroboration of Rāmachandra's raids on Kanauj and Kailāsa, but his other victories do not seem to be improbable. Māhima is probably identical with the place of the same name near Bombay. According to a tradition preserved in some Marāṭhī records, Kōṅkaṇ was conquered by Bhīma Rāja, the son of Rāmadēva Rāja of Dēvagiri. He is said to have made Māhim his capital and divided the kingdom of Kōṅkaṇ into fifteen mahāls or groups containing 444 villages.² The lord of Saṅgama, captured by Rāmachandra, was probably ruling at Saṅgamēśvara, about 20 miles north-east of Ratnāgiri. Khēṭa may be Khēḍ, the chief town of the Khēḍ tālūkā in the Ratnāgiri District. The place dates from early times; for the Khēṭāhāra, which was evidently named after it, is mentioned in the Goa grant of Satyāśraya Dhruvarāja, dated Śaka 532.³ These three victories of Rāmachandra were probably attained in the same expedition which was mainly directed against the petty chiefs ruling in Southern Kōṅkaṇ.

Verse 18 states that Rāmachandra drove out the Muhammadans from Vārāṇasī or Benares and built a golden temple there which he dedicated to Śārṅgapāṇi. This plainly implies that he held that holy city for some time. There is nothing improbable in this claim. It was always the cherished ambition of powerful Hindu rulers to save the holy places of North India from devastation and plunder by Muslim invaders, though express statements to that effect are rarely found in their inscriptions.⁴ There is, of course, no reference to this occupation of Benares by Rāmachandra in Muslim chronicles as there is no allusion to Muslim invasions of the Yādava kingdom in this or any other record of Rāmachandra. The present inscription does not state when this invasion of Benares took place; but it must evidently have occurred before 'Ala-ud-dīn's invasion crippled the power of Rāmachandra in A. D. 1294. It was probably carried out some time during the period from A. D. 1285 to 1290 when there was confusion and disorder in the North after the death of Balban and before the establishment of the power of Jalāl-ud-dīn.

The present inscription is the last record of Rāmachandra. It is not known how long he continued to reign after its issue. According to Muslim chronicles a large army from the North under the command of Malik Kāfūr and Khvāja Hāji passed through Dēvagiri in the course of an expedition against Dvārasamudra and Ma'bar towards the end of A. H. 710 (A.D. 1310-11); but Muhammadan historians are not unanimous as to who was then ruling at Dēvagiri. Baranī⁵ and following him, Firishṭa⁶ state that when Malik Kāfūr and Hāji reached Dēvagiri they found that Rāmadēva was dead. Firishṭa tells us further that the young prince Śaṅkaradēva was not well-affected to the Muhammadans. On this evidence Rāmadēva is believed to have died in A.D. 1309.⁷ The present record shows, however, that he was ruling till the end of September A.D. 1310 at least and it is doubtful if he was succeeded by Śaṅkaragaṇa before the end of that year; for Khusrū states in his Tārīkh-i 'Alāī that the Muhammadan generals reached Dēvagiri on the 13th of Ramzān, in A. H. 710 (the 3rd February A. D. 1311) where 'the Rāi Rāyān' Rām Deo forwarded with all his heart the preparations necessary for the equipment of the army'. As Khusrū was a contemporary chronicler³ and gives definite dates to substantiate his narrative, his account may be taken to be correct. Rāmachandra seems to have died soon thereafter; for at the end of A. H. 711 (A. D. 1312) 'Ala-ud-dīn received the news that the Rājā of Dēvagiri was withholding the stipulated tribute.⁴ This Rājā was Śaṅkaradēva who had in the meanwhile succeeded Rāmachandra.

The present inscription gives in verses 19-28 the pedigree of Purushōttama, the minister of Rāmachandra, who made the grant recorded in it. In the lineage of the sage Vasishṭha, there was born a pious man named Bhānūsūri who constructed several temples and excavated tanks. His son was Alhadēva⁵ who was renowned for his learning. Alhadēva's son was Vināyaka, the father of Sāmvaladēva. Rāmachandra received Sāmvaladēva into his favour and made him the superintendent of the arrangement of flowers. Sāmvaladēva married Akvāmbikā who was the daughter of Śāraṅgasūri, the son of Mādhavasūri of the Jāmadagnya-Vatsa gōtra. Purushōttama was the son of Sāmvaladēva and Akvāmbikā. Being attracted by his intelligence, learning and courage, Rāmachandra made him his minister. Purushōttama carried on the affairs of the state very ably. He ruthlessly put down all traitors and made all people conform to the rules of conduct laid down for the varṇas (castes) and āśramas (orders of life)⁶. Rāmachandra was greatly pleased with him for the execution of all his commands and conferred on him the aforementioned villages to enable him to make an agrahāra worthy of himself.

Many of the localities mentioned in this grant can be easily identified. Purushōttama-purī, the chief place of the newly formed agrahāra, still retains its old name. As already stated, it lies on the southern bank of the Gōdāvarī in the Bhīr District. Kānhairī, the headquarters of the subdivision in which it was situated may be Kanhera, 8 miles south-west of Chālisgaon, in Khāndesh, which has a fort with a strong natural position.⁷ Most of the boundary villages of the agrahāra can still be traced in the vicinity of Purushōttampurī in their respective directions. Thus Sādulē is plainly Sādōlā about 3 miles south by east; Kēsavapurī, Sāvarigavā⁸ and Harikṇibagau are respectively identical with the modern Kēsapurī, Sāvargaon and Harkī Nimgaon which lie about 7 or 8 miles to the south; and Hivarē and Rājagau still exist as Rājēgaon and Hivrā buzurg 5 and 6 miles respectively to the west. The river Gaṅgā which formed the northern boundary of the agrahāra is of course the Gōdāvarī.⁹ Of the four villages, which constituted the agrahāra, two, viz., Vāghaure and Aḍagau, can now be identified; the former is Wāghur 4 miles south by west and the latter Ṭiki Aḍgaon about the same distance to the south of Purushōttampurī. Only two of the nine hamlets attached to these villages can now be traced, viz.,

³ Khusrū closes his narrative with the conquest of Ma'bar at the end of A. H. 710 (A.D. 1311). He died in A.D. 1325. Baranī, on the other hand, is, as remarked by Dowson, very sparing and inaccurate in his dates.

⁵ [See p. 212, n. 7.—Ed.]

⁹ This river is called Gaṅgā in the Paithān plates also. See ll. 59 and 94, Ind. Ant., Vol. XIV, pp. 317-18.

Pimpalavāḍī which now appears in the form Phūlpimpalgaon about 2 miles south of Tiki Adgaon, and Gōḷē āhāṇa which is probably Gōhan Thaḍi, 3 miles north by west of Wāghur. The other villages and hamlets cannot be traced on the maps available to me.

TRANSLATION.

Om ! Obeisance to the holy primeval Boar !

(Verse 1) May Śārṅgapāṇi (Vishṇu) be worshipped!—(he) whose proper form consists of unsurpassed and infinite bliss and consciousness; whose manifest power is possessed through mighty and stainless sattva; who has an extremely attractive body which is an abode of auspicious things (and) who is the refuge of those who are worsted by others !

(V. 2) Glorious is the moon, the pleasure-lotus (in the hand) of the goddess of fortune of the three worlds, which sprang from the milk-ocean which is the pleasure-lake of Lakshmi and Nārāyaṇa !

(V. 3) Glorious is that infinite race of the moon, the creeper of whose fame shines in this world. In that race,² again, there were the bright and round pearls possessed of great and attractive lustre, viz., the Vṛishṇis of unblemished character. Among them, again, there is a one-string necklace formed with a beautiful thread, (viz., the Yādava family of Dīvagiri which is possessed of excellent merits) which gave lustre to the necks of poets.³ In it, again, there is this central gem possessing the beautiful lustre of the wish-fulfilling jewel, (namely,) the king Śiṃha.

(V. 4) What kings were not terrified to hear that by Śiṃha Ballāla was vanquished, the lord of Āndhra was made to suffer a defeat, Kakkalla was overthrown, the lord of Bhambhāgiri was devoured in a moment, the king Bhōja was thrown into confinement on the crest of a fortress and Arjuna was subjugated ?

(V. 5) His son was Jaitrapāla, the moon to the kumuda which was (his) family (and) a very gracious temple of the goddess of heroism; who by his excellent form completely quelled the pride of the god of love, the tap-root of beauty; who was concluded to be the unique limit of the excess of magnanimity by the people who (at first) expressed (their) doubts as to whether he was Karṇa, or Dadhichi, or Śibi, or Jīmūtarāhana.⁴

(V. 6) From him was born the lord, the illustrious king Kṛishṇa, who frequently vanquished brave men. Seeing warriors fleeing away (before him), the regions laughed at them under the guise of his fame.

² The original has ramāḥ which means also a bamboo. On this double entendre is based the following metaphor. According to a poetic convention, pearls are produced also from bamboos.

³ Because it supplied them with an excellent subject for their poems.

⁴ All these were noted for their great liberality.

(V. 7) He whose activities extended to Kāmapāla and to whom extensive fortune resorted of its own accord, clearly manifested himself to be Kṛishṇa,¹ delighting zealously a multitude of eowherds.

(V. 8) On the occasion of his march for conquest, princes disguised as bards sang as follows :—Collect, O old Gūrjara, the mass of dust in the cowpens throughout (thy) life ! Do not, O Mālava, stop mowing ! Cling, O Chōla, to the hem of the lower garment (of ladies) ! Be intent, O Kōśala, on giving up (thy) treasure !

(V. 9) When the king Kṛishṇa went sportively to his own city Vaikuṇṭha in order to have a look at it, that younger brother of his (viz.), Mahādēva, ruled over this earth thereafter ;—(he) whose sword, which produced the misapprehension that it was the ornamental mark of musk (on the forehead) of the Earth who was shining on his arm, caused terror among hostile kings.

(V. 10) Though he plunged the crescent moon into the ocean, removing her from her proper place, he is, strange (to say),² still called Mahādēva by the people.

(V. 11) (Then) was born his son the king Ammaṇa, who was possessed of great strength³ and who greatly rescued the Brāhmanas oppressed by taxes, even as Skanda rescued the gods oppressed by (the demon) Tāraka.

(V. 12) When the Grandsire of warriors⁴ was giving away (in charity), all hostile kings, indeed, became eager to receive the gifts ; since having continuously exposed themselves to the rays of the hot-rayed (sun), they whose minds were distressed by the reproachful words of (their) beautiful (wives), regretfully cast a (wistful) glance at their kingdoms.⁵

(V. 13) Climbing the highest Dēvagiri by means of the ladder which were the heads of hostile princes, the (famous) Rāma, the son of Kṛishṇa, enjoys his kingdom, forcibly wresting it from him (i.e., Ammaṇa).

(V. 14) First entrance into the fort of Dēvagiri, then observation of the manner of dancing, afterwards rallying of self-willed foot-soldiers, then throwing off of ornaments, removal of the opponent who obstructed (his) desired object and wresting of the earth from him—these were successively accomplished by the illustrious Rāma. Hence his glory⁶ is extraordinary !

⁶ Ślōka means also a verso. This verse which describes the successive achievements of Rāmachandra is superior to the following traditional verse which describes in a similar manner the successive doings of Rāma, an incarnation of Vishṇu :—Ādau Rāma-tapōvan-ābhigamanam hatvā mṛigaṁ kūchanam Vaidēhi-haraṇam Jaṭāyuharaṇam Sugrīva-sambhāṣaṇam | Vālī-nirdalanam samudra-taraṇam Leṅkā-purī-dāhanam paśchād-Rāvaṇa-Kumbhakarṇa-hanaṇam=etad=dhi Rāmāyaṇam ||

(V. 15) The illustrious Rāma,—who noticed an easy way of securing his kingdom, whose entire policy is explained by his occupation of the fort (of Dēvagiri), who obtained his object by his personal energy which shone by the use of various means, who showed the way to acquire wealth by forbidding actions of the castes in transgression (of the dictates of the Sūtras), who surpassed celestial beings¹ in that though a boy² he was not affected by abuse,—is (verily) Śarvavarman,³ who noticed an easy way of forming padas,⁴ all of whose aphorisms are explained by Durgā's⁵ commentary, who derived the (intended) sense from roots shining with conjugational signs, who showed how to obtain the meaning (of abbreviations) without writing the letters (of the alphabet) in the reverse order,⁶ and who has surpassed the primeval grammarians,⁷ since not even a boy (who studies his grammar) is tainted by the use of wrong words.⁸

(V. 16) How can that Rāma be described?—(he) who vanquished in a moment the king of the great and extensive Dāhala country; who made the lord of the country of Bhāṇḍāgāra suffer a great defeat; who deprived the king of Vajrākara of his kingdom, and who subjugated in battle that (well-known) king of cowherds?

(V. 17) How can that Rāmachandra be truly described?—(he) who only by his prowess defeated with arrows the lord of Palli on a battle-field, made the king of Kanyakubja bend low, captured by force the mighty lord of San̄gama and crushed the chief of Khēṭa?

(V. 18) He abrogated the conventional rules about tolls, exempted all agrahāras from taxes, freed Vārāṇasī from a hoard of Mlechhas and constructed (there) a golden temple of Śrīrūga-dhara.

(Lines 31-42) He, the Praudhapatāpa-Chakravartin, Mahārājādhirāja, the illustrious king Rāmachandra, adorned by a multitude of such excellences, the sun which makes the lotus-bud, viz., the Yādava race, bloom, the Purandara of the city of Dēvagiri, granted with joy caused by the execution of all his commands, by pouring water on the hand, on Saturday, the eleventh tithi of the bright fortnight of Bhādrapada in the (cyclic) year Sādharaṇa when twelve hundred years increased by thirty-two had elapsed since the time of the Śaka king, the four villages together with nine hamlets included in them, situated in the Kānhairi khampanaka (sub-division) included in the Kānhairi dēśa, together with the treasures, deposits, trees, grass, water, stones, and all dues such as fines, taxes, and cess on artisans,—(the four villages, namely), Pōkharī (with) the hamlets included in it, (viz.), Sāṅgālvāṇa, Pinpalagālvāṇa (and) Pālipōkharī; Aḍagau (with) the hamlets included in it, (viz.), Pinpalavāḍi, Kūjalakōvi (and) Sōijaṇē; Vāghaure (with) the hamlets included in it, (viz.), Simpivikūrē, Gōlēgālvāṇa (and) Dhāravāghaurē; (and) Kuruṇapāragau—

⁶ In the Mahēśvara sūtras, on which the system of Pāṇini is based, the natural order of the letters of the alphabet is reversed for the sake of the pratyāhāras. In the sūtras of Śarvavarman, however, the natural order of the letters is retained.

to the Mahāmāṇḍalika Purushai Nāyaka, the son of the Phulaṇḍakū Sāmvala Nāyaka, who belongs to the Vāsishṭha-gōtra and is a student of the Rigvēda-śākhā. The following are the eulogistic verses about him :—

(V. 19) Glorious is Vasisṭha, the abode of austerities, who is the sole preceptor of the world, the son of the Creator, known as his second self, (and) the foremost of the seven sages ; whose wife is Arundhatī whose virtue is the foremost teacher for (giving) instruction in chastity ; and in a corner of whose cowpen there is the celestial cow which is a very moonlight for (dispelling) the darkness, namely, the distress of the three worlds.

(V. 20) From him another son was born like him and then from him another. Thus in course of time there sprang a noble family, an ornament of the three worlds, resembling a succession of the sun's rays causing awakening among the embodied beings troubled by the alligator-like darkness and infatuation.

(V. 21) In that (family) was born Bhānusūri who constructed in every quarter, staircases in the guise of temples for the sake of gods who had come out (of heaven) to receive offerings in his sacrifices ; and who, in order to raise up the creatures who had sunk low by reason of their (bad) deeds, excavated, as deep as the surface of the nether regions, tanks which were the mines of jewels in the form of his bright fame.¹

(V. 22) From him was born Alhadēva,² (who was) a treasure of austerities, and a meeting place of all fruitful excellences ; in whose mouth dwelt with ease the fourteen lores even as the fourteen worlds do in the belly of Hari (at the time of world-destruction.)

(V. 23) From him was born a son named Vināyaka, the crest-jewel of (all) learned people In the water of the Ganges, namely, his fame, even the holy places perform the purificatory rite ; (and) the loud noise of the exposition of the Vēdas discloses his house to the supplicants who come in haste, having heard of his virtue of liberality.

(V. 24) From that learned man sprang a famous son named Sāmvaladēva, the friend of the love of piety, the source of glory, the essence of cleverness, the abode of contentment, forgiveness and happiness, the head of the family of compassion, the festivity of the establishment of courage, the treasury of learning, the minister of discrimination and the assembly-hall of wealth.

(V. 25) Having ascertained that like a flower he was gentle by nature, venerable, pure, capable of attracting the mind and the best abode of fortune, the king Rāma, the foremost of the Yadus, who has a keen intellect, being intent on showing favour to him, made him, (who was) vigilant, the superintendent of the arrangement of flowers.

(V. 26) Day by day there grew in the mind of the king affection for Sāmvaladēva, who was honest, beneficent, intelligent, truthful and devoted to service even as fortune did in his home.

(V. 27) Then he married, according to the sacred rite, a wife named Akvāmbikā, worthy of himself, who was the daughter of Sāraṅgasūri and the son's daughter of Mādhlavasūri born in the family of Jāmadagnya-Vatsa, and who was adorned by the jewels of excellences

(V. 28) To these, who were designedly united by the wise Creator, there was born a son, bearing the fitting and significant name of Purushōttama. This is the eleventh incarnation of Hari, who reflecting on the slight blemish in incarnating himself as the fish, etc., was seeking a noble birth.

(V. 29) The Yadu king made him a minister of his Government—(him) who had double wisdom due to his association with good people marked by discrimination, double vision by his study of the extensive śrūtis and smṛtis, (and) double strength by his inexhaustible courage.

(V. 30) Having shown by his brilliant command separate courses of conduct for the castes and orders of life, even as a cloud shows different paths by its lightning, he poured a large shower of gold into the treasure-house of the king.

(V. 31) The crooked and hard mind of treasonous people was quickly made straightforward by his brilliant prowess, even as the hard and curved bracelet of iron is made straight by burning fire. The cruel ones among them were burnt like thorny trees and then taken out. Then the glory of the king Rāmachandra was made bright like gold.

(V. 32) When he, who had devoted his heart to the holy places like Kāśī and Dvārakā which are the treasures of religious merit, established charitable feeding houses (in them) the capacity to yield (both) enjoyment and liberation now shines in those (holy places) which, from a consideration of the declaration of sages, were (previously) held to confer liberation only.

(V. 33) While he, who is well-conducted, devoted to his lord, modest, extremely averse to others' wives and wealth and possessed of great prowess, was conducting himself as a (noble) man, displaying herosim, there generally followed, day and night, in the wake of his glory which went forth in every direction, joy in good people and great trembling in the head and heart of wicked ones.

(V. 34) The illustrious and gracious-minded king Rāma asked him many times to make an agrahāra worthy of himself for (the attainment of) well-being in both the worlds. And when he accepted that honour as a great favour, he (i.e., the king) who humbles the pride (of his foes), conferred on him villages of great value by pouring water (on the hand).

(Ll. 71-80) He, that Purushai Nāyaka, the mine of such jewels of excellences, the Mahā-mūṇḍalika of the illustrious Mahārājādhirāja Rāmachandradōva, has conferred, for the attainment of his desired object, making first the offerings of gold, rice and water on the Kapilashashīhī in the month Bhādrapada included in the (cyclic) year Sādhārana when twelve hundred years increased by thirty-two had elapsed since the time of the Śaka king, the four villages together with nine hamlets included in them, situated in the Kānhairi khampanaka (sub-division) of the Kānhairi dēśa, together with the treasures, deposits, grass, water, stones and all dues such as fines, taxes (and) cess on artisans,—(the four villages, namely), Pōkharī (with) the hamlets included in it, (viz.), Sāēgālvāna, Piripalagālvāna (and) Pālipōkharī; Aḍagau (with) the hamlets included in it, (viz.), Piripalavāḍī, Kājalakōvi (and) Sōijane; Vāghaurē (with) the hamlets included in it, (viz.), Sirupidihirē, Gōlēgālvāna (and) Dhāravāghaurē; and Kurupāragau—after dividing them into vr̥ttis (i.e., parts) numbering eighty-six (and) assigning (them) to the Brāhmaṇas, eighty-three in number, who belong to various gōtras and are students of various śākhās, together with two gods, agnishīkā and prapā, in this manner, namely, two vr̥ttis to the two gods, one vr̥tti for (the performance of) the agnishīkā rite and (the maintenance of) a prapū (charitable water-shed) (every year) and the remaining vr̥ttis numbering eighty-three to (the following) Brāhmaṇas. Now the names of the Brāhmaṇas :—

(Here follow the names of eighty-three Brāhmaṇas together with those of their fathers, gōtras and śākhās.)

(Ll. 114-117) Now the boundaries of this agrahāra land :—To the east Dāṇḍigau (and) Sādulē; to the south Kēśavapurī, Sāvarigavā (and) Harikinibagau; to the west Rājagau, Hivarē, Chīñcha-

vali, (and) Mahādēvapuri joined to Drugalēgāhvāna; to the north the Gaṅgā. The agrahāra, which has the other name of Purushōttamapuri, has thus been formed with the four boundaries well-determined in this manner.

(Ll. 117-20) Now rules for the conduct of the Brāhmaṇas. This land shall be enjoyed by these (Brāhmaṇas) and their descendants, following always the righteous path; it shall not be mortgaged or sold. No quarter shall be given to prostitutes; the custom of gambling also shall be prohibited; (and) weapons and (such) other things shall not be used¹ These Brāhmaṇas shall (always) be intent on (performing) good deeds. There shall be no forced contribution (for the expenses of) royal officers halting at and departing from (the agrahāra)².

(Ll. 120-41) Now the praise of a gift of land:—

(Here follow twenty-three benedictive and imprecatory verses.)

(Line 141) May there be bliss and great fortune!

No. 22.—TWO GRANTS OF PRITHIVICHANDRA BHOGASAKTI.

By MADHO SARUP VATS, M.A., AND D. B. DISKALKAR, M.A.

In August 1936 when Mr. Vats was Superintendent, Archaeological Survey, Western Circle, Poona, three grants consisting of seven copper plates were sent to him by the Collector of Nāsik. They were found with a Marāṭhī Patel family, surnamed Shid, of Anjaneri village in the headquarters Taluka of the Nāsik District. Three of the plates were found to make one grant, marked A and two another, marked B, both issued by a king named Prithivichandra Bhōgasakti. Lines 1-25 of the former are identical with lines 1-27 of the latter. The remaining two plates were found to make a third grant of the Gurjara king Jayabhāta III. Below are described the first two grants mentioned above as A and B.

Each of these grants was held together by two copper rings. To one of the two rings of the one marked A is affixed a tubular seal containing the figure of a lion in relief. The surface of the seal is circular and $1\frac{1}{2}$ " in diameter. The three plates of this set along with the rings and the seal weigh 308 tolas. There is also the figure of a boar engraved in the middle of the second half of the second plate of this grant. The plates measure $12\frac{1}{4}$ to $12\frac{3}{8}$ inches in length and $7\frac{1}{8}$ to 8 inches in width. As usual, the first and the third plates are inscribed on the inner faces only and the middle plate on both the sides. The inscription consists of 55 lines of writing, 14 on each of the first, second and fourth faces and 13 on the third one.

A circumscribed lotus is incised on the uninscribed outer face of the first plate, while a large figure of conch shell appears upside down across the outer face of the third plate which bears a postscript record of king Tējavarman in 9 lines.

The two plates making up the second grant measure $11\frac{1}{8} \times 7\frac{1}{2}$ to $7\frac{3}{8}$ inches. One of the two rings of this grant is missing and the remaining one has a tubular seal similar to that found in A. The weight of the two plates forming this grant together with the ring and the seal is

178 telas. In this, the inscription consists of 38 lines only, 12 being inscribed on the first plate, 14 and 12 respectively on the inner and outer faces of the second plate.

Both the grants are, on the whole, well preserved, but in some cases owing to portions of the plates being more or less corroded certain letters of grant B are not quite legible.

The characters in the inscriptions belong to the southern variety of the seventh century A.D. and are similar to those of the Valabhi and Gurjara grants of the same period. They are crowned by small circles and are more angular than rounded, mark, for instance, the letters m, v, and d. Among peculiarities of the inscription in grant A, it may be pointed out that the sign for the medial long ā is used in two ways, cf. Pūrvaratrikūṭa, l. 38 and Pūrrevē śatam, l. 39. The sign for initial ē in l. 51 deserves to be noted specially with reference to the same sign in ll. 14 and 31 of grant B. Equally remarkable are the forms of letters ph and bhū in lines 52 and 53 respectively. It may also be noted that both the forms of l are found in this inscription. As regards the orthography it may be stated that the sign for upadhmānīya is but once used in l. 44 of A and a consonant is usually doubled both before and after r as in gōṭtra, puttra, parākkrama, vikkraṇta, kkriyā, kshōbhī-ārṇava, virviśeṣha, varmma, dākshīṇy-ādibhir-gguyaiḥ, pūrva, dēvasy=ārchehana, Janārdana, etc. Ṇ is used for anuvāra in vaṇśasy= (l. 6) and Sīṇhavarṇma (l. 9). The language of the records is Sanskrit prose with the exception of the invocatory and the imprecatory verses at the beginning and end.

As regards the peculiarities of the inscription in grant B, it may be stated that the signs for the medial u and ri and the subscript r are not easily distinguishable from one another. So also is the case with r and l. The rēpha is turned round to the left of a letter so much so that it goes above it. In this inscription, too, a consonant is usually doubled before and after r. Grant A seems to contain Sanskrit renderings of certain local words or phrases e.g., karaṇē kōvēraṇ, l. 35, ghṛita-sētikā, l. 37. Of the former, the sense is not at all clear, but the latter was possibly a small measure such as a ladle¹.

In both the grants, the records open with an invocatory verse in praise of the boar incarnation of the god Viṣṇu as is always the case with the inscriptions of the Western Chalukyas of Bādāmi who were acknowledged as their overlords by the kings of the Harīśchandra family. Then follows the prose portion describing in usual terms the origin of the Chalukya family in which was ruling the emperor Vikramāditya, who was an ornament of the whole earth. This is followed by the description of a ruler named Svāmichandra whose sovereign Vikramāditya Chalukya considered him as his son, who was an ornament of the Harīśchandra family and who enjoyed the possession of the whole of the Puri-kōṅkaṇa, consisting of 14,000 villages. Svāmichandra's son was Sīṃhavarman and the latter's son was Bhōgaśakti, who bore the second name of Prithivīchandra². Much of the further portion of the inscription is devoted to an extravagant praise of this feudatory king Bhōgaśakti.

The grant marked A was issued by Bhōgaśakti after addressing the state officials etc. of Gōparāśhṭra, eastern Triṅkūṭa, Āmrarājī, Mairikā, two Mahāgirihāras, and Palla Āḍhamba[ka] divisions, and its object was to provide for conducting the worship of the god Nārāyaṇa and for dance, music, free kitchen, etc., at the temple which had been built at Jayapura by Bhōgēśvara who is probably to be identified with Bhōgaśakti himself. The endowment made for the above purposes consisted of the revenues of eight villages, viz., Jayagrāma, Ambō-Avaṅgaṇa, Pālittapāṭaka, Kōkilākshaka, Kalahaka, Mradgāhitaka³,

Kshēmāgiraka and Ānagrāma and the income derived from certain taxes. The taxes consisted of certain levies during the yātṛā festival of the god from every shop in the market and every court-yard(?); and on the import and export of every load of caravan; a handful of corn, and a fixed measure of ghee from (every house in) the principal village in each of the sub-divisions of Gōparāshtra, Āmrarājī, and Mairikā: and in like manner from other villages¹; one hundred Kṛishṇarāja rupees from the sub-division of eastern Trikūṭa; two hundred Kṛishṇarāja rupees from the western Mahāgiri and one hundred from the eastern one; and fifty Kṛishṇarāja rupees from the Palla Ādhamba sub-division. But the above eight villages, on which taxes were thus imposed, were exempted from all the usual exactions of forced labour, etc. A committee of five or ten merchants was enjoined, in accordance with the established custom of the town, to arrange for the yātṛā festival of the god Vishṇu for a whole fortnight in the month of Mārgaśīrsha. The management of the temple was vested in the merchant guild of the town of Jayapura and the local merchants were exempted from (all other state) taxes.

This grant is dated in the year 461 of an unspecified era. Its scribe was Bharatasvāmin, an inhabitant of Kallivana.

The grant B refers to the re-colonisation of the formerly deserted Samagripaṭṭana (the township of Samagiri) along with Chandrapurī and four other hamlets called Ambayapallikā², Savāṇeyapallikā, Maurēyapallikā and Kaṁsārīpallikā. All these were vested in the town council of Samagripaṭṭana, the merchants whereof were exempted from the payment of custom duties, the aputradhana, etc. The town council was also empowered to impose fines for certain moral delinquencies and other crimes.

The outer face of the third plate of grant A bears another inscription of nine lines in characters larger in size and slightly different in form from those of the main inscription. It records the grant by king Tējavarman of a free pasture land in the village of Pālitapāṭaka near Jayapura, already mentioned in the main inscription. In lieu of this land belonging to the god Bhōgēśvara-dēva, who is identical with the Bhōgēśvara-pratishṭhita-Nāṭyaya of the main inscription, one hundred rupees were deposited by him with the merchant guild of Jayapura as a perpetual endowment, the interest of which was to be utilised for providing guggula for the daily worship of the god.

It is interesting to note that Tējavarman, who calls himself a rājan, is mentioned also in grant B wherein he is said to have promulgated the orders contained in the grant. As Bhōgasakti and his predecessors also bore no more assuming a title than rājan it is possible that Tējavarman belonged to the same family and might even have been a successor of Bhōgasakti, since his record appears as a postscript to grant A.

The great historical importance of the present grants lies in the fact that they bring to light a new feudatory dynasty which ruled in the latter part of the seventh and the beginning of the eighth century A.D. over the vast territory comprising the whole of Purī-kōṅkana consisting of 14,000 villages which apparently included the present Nāsik District under the sovereignty of the Western Chalukyas. The first member of this feudatory family, which was named after Harīśchandra, was Svāmichandra, who acknowledged the sovereignty of Vikramāditya, the Western Chalukya emperor who, as we know, reigned from 655 to 680 A.D. It is specially noted in the inscriptions that Svāmichandra was loved by his overlord as his own son. The figure of a boar, the emblem of the Chalukya family of Bādāmi, engraved on the reverse of the second plate of Grant A, was probably meant to indicate respect and loyalty to the Imperial dynasty, whereas the figure of a lion embossed on the seals attached to the plates was presumably the emblem of the Hariśchandra family. Since nothing is specifically mentioned in the inscriptions to the credit of Svāmichandra's two successors, Siṃhavarmanarāja and Bhōgaśakti, it may be concluded that they did little in raising the importance of the family.

There is nothing in the inscription to denote the era to which its date should be referred. The Chalukya emperors, to whom Bhōgaśakti's family owed allegiance, used no doubt the Śaka era in all their grants and ordinarily it might be expected that the same would be used by their feudatories of the Hariśchandra family as well. But that the date 461 of our record cannot be referred to the Śaka era is obvious from the fact that Svāmichandra, the grandfather of Bhōgaśakti who is the donor of the present grant, was a contemporary of the Chalukya emperor Vikramāditya, who, we know, ruled from A.D. 655 to 680. This is possible only if the date is referred to the Kalachuri era which is found generally used in inscriptions of the period discovered in the Lāṭa country and the Nāsik District¹. The inscription therefore belongs to the year 709-10 A.D. The Hariśchandra family, although it owed allegiance to the Chalukyas, seems to have adopted the Kalachuri era in their grants because it was current in the country.

The Aihole inscription of Pulakēśin II, dated A.D. 634, tells us that this ruler had defeated the Mauryas of Kōṅkaṇa and had subdued the city called Purī², which was the glory of the western sea. But we know that in the concluding years of Pulikēśin's reign his hold over the northern territories had slackened. Svāmichandra of the Hariśchandra family, who was probably ruling over a small territory round about Jayapura in the Nāsik District, seems to have rendered such signal services to the Chalukya emperor Vikramāditya, son of Pulikēśin, in consolidating his power over the western and northern parts of the empire that he was not only considered as his son by the emperor but, as may be inferred from our Anjaneri plates, also appears to have obtained from him as a reward the whole of the territory known as Purī-kōṅkaṇa.

The Dhōṇḍhaka grant³ of the Chalukya Jayasinhavarman, younger son of Pulikēśin, shows that he was ruling over the Nāsik territory in about Śaka 580 (A.D. 658). Similarly, the Nirpaṇ plates⁴ found in the Igatpuri Taluka of the Nāsik District record a grant by Tribhuvanāśraya-Nāgavardhana, son of Dharāśraya-Jayasinhavarman, one of the younger brothers of the emperor Pulikēśin himself, of a village named Balēgrāma in the Gōparāśhṭra viśhaya. Although there are strong reasons to suppose that the Nirpaṇ plates are spurious, yet from both of these it is clear that a portion of the Nāsik District was for some time in the possession of a scion of the Imperial family. Now our Anjaneri plates show that the divisions of Gōparāśhṭra and others were in the possession of Bhōgaśakti and probably of his predecessors too. This was possible only if Vikramāditya had taken out the territory from the possession of a scion of his own family and granted it to Svāmichandra for his valuable services.

It seems strange, however, that no successor of Vikramāditya has been mentioned in the record, not even the sovereign Vijayāditya (A.D. 697-733) who was reigning at the time of this inscription. It need not be supposed from this that the Chalukya emperors lost hold over the province in which Bhōgaśakti was ruling, since the latter makes a proper mention of the Chalukya family at the beginning of the inscription and engraved the figure of a boar in the middle of it showing thereby that he had full regard for the Imperial family and owed allegiance to it.

Secondly, a copper plate grant referring to the reign of Vijayāditya was found at Balsār¹ in Gujarāt which was issued from the town of Maṅgalapuri by the Rājā Maṅgalarasa, son of Dharāśraya-Jayasinhavarman, the younger brother of Vikramāditya I. Contrary to the usual practice of the Gujarāt grants, this record is dated not in the Kalachuri era but in Śaka 653 and this fact suggests that the record really belongs not to the Lāta country but to the territory above the Ghāts in the direction of Nāsik and Khāndesh. This shows that Vijayāditya's power was acknowledged in the Nāsik District as late as A.D. 731. The failure, therefore, to mention the name of the reigning emperor in the Anjaneri grants indicates not so much the carelessness of the scribe or the draftsman of the record as the troublous times.

We do not know how long after the date of our inscription the Hariśchandra family continued to rule over Puri-kōṅkaṇa, but it seems certain that with the overthrow of the Western Chalukya power by the Rāshtrakūṭas the family of Svāmichandra suffered the same fate, for the Kanheri cave inscription of Śaka 765 (A.D. 843-44) states that the Śilāhāra chief Mahāsāmanta Pullaśakti was ruling over the whole of the Puri-kōṅkaṇa holding it through the favour of the Rāshtrakūṭa emperor Amoghavarsha. Pullaśakti's father, Kapardin I, seems to have founded the Śilāhāra family of north Kōṅkaṇa at the beginning of the ninth century. This is another reason to suppose that the Hariśchandra family ruled not later than the middle of the 8th century and ended with the fall of the Imperial Chalukyas.

The mention of the Kṛishṇarāja rūpakas in the inscription is important. It shows that at the time of the Anjaneri plates there were in use in the Nāsik District silver coins named after Kṛishṇarāja. There can be no doubt that this Kṛishṇarāja was the famous Kalachuri emperor, whose son Śaṅkaragaṇa (Śaṅkaragaṇa) issued the Sāṅkheḍā plate² of Śāntilla and whose coins were found not only in Dēvalanā in the Nāsik District but also in the islands of Bombay and Salsette. These bear the legend Paramanāhēśvara Kṛishṇarāja and the figure of a bull.

The yātrā festival in honour of the god Viṣṇu mentioned in the inscription A is interesting. That it was held in the month of Mārgaśīrsha is stated in l. 41 of grant A. Rao Bahadur K. N. Dikshit informs that the occurrence of a special festival in the bright fortnight of Mārgaśīrsha is a peculiar feature in some parts of the Marāṭhā country. Thus among the Brāhmaṇas of Nāsik and Ahmadnagar there is a regular Navarātra festival in this month just as there is the usual festival in the month of Āśvina celebrated all over India. The sixth day of the fortnight is called Champā-shashṭhi which is particularly observed among the Dēśastha Brāhmaṇas. Most of the people above the Ghāts have as their tutelary deity Khaṇḍōba of Jejuri near Poona, to whom Champā-shashṭhi is sacred. Khaṇḍōba is a peculiar deity, perhaps originally equivalent to Skanda, but having quite independent characteristics such as a dog for a vāhana. It is very likely that the fair or festival referred to above dates back to the time of the present inscription.

The following localities are mentioned in grant A: Gōparāshṭra, Pūrva-Trikūṭa, Amrarāji, Mairikā, Mahāgirihāra, Palla Ādhamba[ka], Jayapura, Jayagrāma, Ambā-Avaṅgaṇa, Pālittapāṭaka, Kōkilākshaka, Kalahaka, Mradgāhitaka³,

Kshēmagraka, Ānnagrāma and Kallivana. The first six are stated to be riṣṭayas or territorial divisions. The approximate situation of Gōparāśhṭra can be known from the mention in the Nirpaṇ plates referred to above, of a village named Balēgrāma as situated in the Gōparāśhṭra-riṣṭaya. Balēgrāma is no doubt to be identified with modern Belgaum-Taralha in the Igatpuri Taluka of the Nāsik District. Jayapura, where the temple of Nārāyaṇa was situated, may be Jarvad Budrukh, 10 miles south-west of Anjaneri. Jayagrāma may be Jaikheda in the Dindori Taluka. Ambē-Avaṅgaṇa is Ambegaon, about 23 miles north-west of Nāsik; Kalabaka may be Kokangaon, 2 miles south-east of Jaikheda and Mradgāhitaka, Maganpara, 5 miles north-west of Jaikheda. Kallivana is undoubtedly Kalvan in the Nāsik District, which is also mentioned in some other grants of the period.

The localities mentioned in grant B are Samagripaṭṭana, Chandrapurī, Ambayapallikā, Savāṇēyapallikā, Maurēyapallikā and Kaṁsārīpallikā, Samagripaṭṭana cannot now be traced, but it was probably situated near Chandrapurī with which it is coupled in the present grant, and which is probably identical with Chandachi Met, 12 miles south-west of Anjaneri. Savāṇēyapallikā may be Samundi, 5 miles north-east and Kaṁsārīpallikā may be Karholi or Karohavadi, 6 and 7 miles respectively east of Chandachi Met. Maurēyapallikā may be Morvadi, 3 miles south-west of Nāsik¹.

TRANSLATION.

(Verse 1) Ōm. Victorious is the form of Viṣṇu manifesting itself as the boar, which troubled the ocean and which had the earth resting upon the tip of its up-lifted right tusk.

(Ll. 2-6) In the family of the illustrious Chalukyas who belong to the Mānavya gōtra praised over the whole world; who have been nourished by the seven mothers, the mothers of the seven worlds; who have attained an uninterrupted continuation of prosperity through the protection of (the god) Kārttikēya; who subjugated all the kings in an instant at (their having) a sight of the boar-insignia which was acquired through the favour of the lord Nārāyaṇa; and who are the descendants of Hārīti—(was born) the Mahārājādhirāja Paramēśvara, the illustrious Vikramāditya Vallabha, the sole forehead mark (tilaka), of the whole earth.

(Ll. 6-28) Living upon the favour of his (Vikramāditya's) feet and being unto him like his own son, was the illustrious king named Svāmichandra, who was an ornament of the Harīschandra family, who delighted his subjects like the autumnal bright full moon and who enjoyed (the possession of) the entire Purī-kōṇkaya consisting of fourteen thousand villages. The son of this king Svāmichandra was the illustrious king Sirīhavarman, who was great in strength and prowess. And this illustrious king Sirīhavarman's son was the illustrious king Bhōgaśakti also known as Prithivichandra whose glory like that of the moon is resplendent on the earth embraced by the waves of the four oceans; who even as a child, was imbued with inborn knowledge acquired by constant application in his previous births; who is ever engaged in the worship of the god Vāsudēva, and is well versed in the sacred lore; who like Yudhisṭhira is adorned with the virtues such as justice, modesty, compassion, charity, courtesy, etc., and is also truthful; who like Bhūmasēna is a great hero and has filled the circle of his entire kingdom by his manifest prowess; who like Arjuna is adept in the art of war and is a follower of the teachings of Kṛishṇa; who like Baladēva is given to the enjoyment of dance, music, merry-making, flirtation and sports and (at the same time) would be heroic in a moment; who, though endowed like Pradyumna with a physique which attracted the hearts of all damsels, has no desire for the wives of others; whose (right) hand, like the trunk of the leader of wild elephants wet with the incessant flow of ichor, is moistened on account of his being constantly engaged in performing charities; who quenches the thirst of beings like a pond of sweet water adorned by multitudes of lotuses and lilies; who is the abode of splendour like a large tank of lotuses blossomed by the rays of the rising sun; who like the ocean is steadfast, is the protector of numerous kings and is profound and noble as the ocean is used to keep within its boundary, protects numerous mountains (in its depth), is profound in depth and contains large (aquatic) animals; who is ever eager to perform acts of charity such as (the construction and endowment of) temples, tanks, free kitchen and water stalls; who is given to the contemplation of Nārāyaṇa; who is the ornament of the Purī-kōṇkaya vishaya as the Kaustubha gem is of Viṣṇu; who is skilled in (ascertaining) the real import of the Mahābhārata, the Purāṇas, the Rāmāyaṇa and in king-craft; who is wise, sagacious, learned and intelligent; who is endowed with irresistible strength, valour and (the attributes of) utsūhaśakti, prabhuśakti and mantraśakti; who is the goad of the three worlds (Tribhuvanāṅkuśa)—the same illustrious king Bhōgaśakti commands all his sons, grandsons, great-grandsons, etc., placed in charge of the vishayas of Gōpārāṣṭra, eastern Trikuṭa, Āmrarājī, Mairikā, two Mahāgiriḥāras and Palla Ādhambā-[ka] which have been acquired by the prowess of his arms (and all others):

² [I would translate ll. 25-28 as follows:—"Bhōgaśakti commands all his sons, etc., and all the districts of Gōpārāṣṭra, etc., upto the boundary of Prētaḥradā, which were conquered by the prowess of his own arms and courage".—Ed.]

(Ll. 28-49) "Be it known to you that having recognised that no other pre-eminent deity excepting the god Vāsudēva who is the cause of creation, preservation and destruction, who is the supreme god, and who is the god of gods and demons, I have made to the god Nārāyaṇa, the Primeval Being and the supreme spirit, installed by Bhōgēśvara in (the town of) Jayapura, in order to augment the merits of my parents and myself, an endowment of eight villages together with the taxes thereof so as to provide (at the temple) for perfume, flowers, incense, light, ablutions and unguents and also for dance, vocal and instrumental music, free kitchen, repairs and upkeep. The names of these (villages) are Jayagrāma, Ambē-Avaṅgaṇa, Pālittapāṭaka, Kōkilākshaka, Kalahaka, Mradgāhitaka, Kshēmagiraka and Ānagrāma. As to the taxes, the stall tax is to be levied in the market places, a rupee each is to be paid on the occasion of the god's yātrā at the entry and exit of each caravan of merchandise. *Muṇakas*¹ (handfuls) of corn and *Setikās*² of ghee are to be levied from (every house in) the principal village of each of the *viśhaya*s of Gōparāśhtra, Āmrarāji and Mairikā, and in like manner from other villages too.³ (Taxes to be collected in cash are) 100 one hundred Kṛishṇarāja rupees from the viśhaya of eastern Trikūṭa; 200 two hundred Kṛishṇarāja rupees from the western Mahāgiriḥāra and 100 one hundred from the eastern one; and 50 fifty Kṛishṇarāja rupees from the viśhaya of Pallūḍhamba. (In consideration of the above) these eight villages have been exempted from all kinds of taxes, forced labour and vexatious interference; they are not to be entered by the regular or irregular troops (and) they are to enjoy rights over wealth underground. This grant shall last as long as the moon, the sun, the oceans and the earth endure. Therefore, viewing the world as unsteady as the waves of the sea ruffled by a strong wind, this grant of ours is to be upheld and maintained by our descendants. The yātrā festival of the god Viṣṇu should be arranged by (a committee of) five or ten merchants for a whole fortnight in the month of Mārgaśīrsha in accordance with the established custom of the town. Whoever, blinded by the darkness of ignorance, shall confiscate or assent to confiscation (of the grant) he shall be guilty of the five great sins. Since this temple has been entrusted to (the care of) the town merchants, on them shall devolve the proper worship and service of the divine Lord. And the following town convention is laid down. The local merchants shall, for ever, be immune from customs duties and feeding expenses (of officers on duty). Whoever shall violate this convention, shall be guilty of the five great sins."

(Ll. 50-53) [Here are four of the usual imprecatory verses.]

This grant was written by Bharatasvāmin, an inhabitant of Kallivana in the year 461 (expressed both in words and in figures).

Inscription of Tējavarman.

(Ll. 1-9) Ōm hail. The king Tējavarman has given a free grazing ground (within the limits of the village) Pālittapāṭaka situated to the south of Jayapura. For the demarcation thereof along with (the temple of) the goddess Durgā stone sculptures of cows have been set up on all four sides. That is the measure of its extent. In order to compensate for the land belonging to

³ [I would translate the passage as follows:—'One load (of corn) and one śetikā of ghee from the principal village of the districts of Gōparāśhtra, etc., and in the same proportion from the other villages also.' I would connect mūṇaka, which seems to be the reading here, with the word mūṣa or mōṣa (Hindi moṭhi) meaning a 'bundle' or 'provision bag'. Setikā is apparently connected with śetikā of the Purāṇas which is equivalent to 4 palas or approximately 14 tolas. See Edward Thomas—Ancient Indian Weights, p. 26. I am, however, unable to suggest any meaning for kōṣera in l. 35.—Ed.]

Bhōgēśvaradēva now converted into a pasture, one hundred rupees have been deposited with the merchant guild of Jayapura. And from the interest of this one hundred rupees should be met, year after year, the cost of guggula for the (worship of the) god Bhōgēśvara until the sun, moon and stars endure. Whosoever shall interfere with this shall be possessed with the five great sins.

No. 24.—A NOTE ON THE CHRONOLOGY OF THE GANGAS OF SVĒTAKA.

By B. CH. CHHABRA, M.A., M.O.L., Ph.D. (LUGD), OOTACAMUND.

It has already been pointed out¹ that the Gaṅga rulers who issued their charters from Svētaka most probably constitute a separate branch of the Eastern Gaṅgas, but that sufficient data are not yet available for determining the chronology of these kings.² In this note an attempt is made to fix the chronological position of at least three of the so far known kings of this branch.

It may readily be recognised that *Bhaṭṭa*putra Durgakhaṇḍi, son of Bhaṭṭa Bōdhana, of the Vatsa gōtra and the Chhāndōga charaṇa, the donee in the Badakhimedi copper-plates of Indravarmān,³ is identical with Bhaṭṭa Durgakhaṇḍika, the donee of Dānārṇava's grant,⁴ coming likewise from the Badakhimedi Estate,⁵ as the name of the donee's father, gōtra and charaṇa in the latter record are the same as in the former. However, the grantor in the first instance is Indravarmān, while in the second it is Dānārṇava. Next, it may be observed that both of them are stated to be sons of Prithivīvarman. Since both the records are issued from Svētaka and in both of them one and the same person figures as the donee, the natural conclusion is that the donors Indravarmān and Dānārṇava are not far removed from each other in point of time. And when we further know that the name of the donor's father in each case is the same we can safely infer that both Indravarmān and Dānārṇava were brothers and that both of them ruled⁶ in succession. However, the question remains as to who was the elder or who preceded on the throne. Luckily we possess a piece of evidence to decide this issue as well.

The names of the writer and the engraver of Indravarmān's charter are given respectively as Samdhivigrahin Śrīsāmanta and kamśāra-kulaputraka śrēṣṭhīn Śrīsāmanta Svayambhu. Both these persons figure likewise as the writer and the engraver respectively in the Ganjām plates of Prithivīvarman.⁷ This Prithivīvarman must, therefore, be identical with Indravarmān's father, as has been indicated by Mr. P. N. Bhattacharya.⁸ The presumption here is naturally this that the persons employed by the father as writer and engraver continued to function as such in the son's regime after the father's death. From this we may also infer that Indravarmān was the immediate successor of Prithivīvarman. This inference is confirmed by the fact that the writer and the engraver of Dānārṇava's grant are different persons and not those who served under Prithivīvarman and Indravarmān. Thus we may conclude that Indravarmān was elder than and preceded Dānārṇava.

1. Prithivīvarman⁹ (P. P. M.)

2. Indravarmān. (P. P. M.).

3. Dānārṇava (P. P. M. Rāṇaka).

No. 25.—CHARALA PLATES OF VIRARAJENDRADEVA : SAKA 991.

By A. S. RAMANATHA AYYAR, B.A. AND V. VENKATASUBBA AYYAR, B.A., MADRAS.

The present plates¹ are stated to have been discovered in 1935 by one Narasā Reddī, a resident of Chārāla in the Punganur taluk of the Chittoor District, while he was removing earth from a manure-pit in his garden. The whereabouts of the plates could not however be immediately traced, but with the assistance of Rao Saheb Totadri Ayyangar, Deputy Superintendent of Police, who was then in charge of the Tirupati Division, they were finally located and secured on loan for examination. They have since been purchased by Government and are now deposited in the Indian Museum, Calcutta. We edit the plates from the ink-impressions prepared in the office of the Superintendent for Epigraphy, Madras.

The set consists of seven oblong copper-plates with raised rims, each measuring 9" by 4", and strung together on a ring 4" in diameter, passing through a ring-hole at the left margin of the plates. The ends of the ring are soldered to the bottom of a flat circular seal 3½" in diameter and ¼" in thickness. The different leaves of the set do not bear serial numbers engraved near the ring-hole. The plates weigh 154 tolas and the ring and seal together weigh 57 tolas.

Viśvair=viśvambharādhiśair=[nanditair]=vandita[m=ida]m [!*]

Śāsanam Virarājendra-Rājākēsarivarmananah [!]*

All the plates have writing on both their sides except the first one, which bears writing on one side only. Each fully written side has, on an average, about 18 lines in the Sanskrit portion and 15 in the Tamil; and the complete record consists of 211 lines. The writing is in a good state of preservation. The languages used are Sanskrit for the prastāvi and genealogical preamble of the inscription which is of considerable length running up to 81 numbered verses, and the *rāja-bhāṣā*⁴ Tamil for the documentary portion. The alphabets employed are respectively Grantha and Tamil characters attributable to the 11th century A.D. The Grantha letters are well shaped and cleanly cut, but the Tamil letters exhibit a slight carelessness in execution.

The inscription engraved on these plates is dated in Śaka 991, Saumya and the 7th year of the Chōla king Rājākēsarivarman Virarājendradēva and registers the royal gift of the village Chērām⁵ alias Madhurāntaka-chaturvēdimāṅgalam in Puli-nāḍu made from

³ This verse is repeated in lines 189-191 of the text.

⁵ The form of the name is somewhat peculiar, without the 'village'-suffix, like Buddhām, etc.

Kāñchīpuram, to three Brāhmins named Sō(Śrō)triya-Kramavittan, Mundaya-Kramavittan and Pallaya-Kramavittan of the Ātrēya-gōtra and Bahudhānya (Bōdhāyana)-sūtra and of the lineage of a certain Rishlikēśava (Hrishlikēśa)-Bhaṭṭa of Chēram, on the occasion of the Uttarāyana-Saṅkrānti. This document is of interest as being the first copper-plate charter of this king.

For a study of Chōḷa seals¹ we have so far five specimens and the one attached to the present plates, therefore, forms a useful addition. Of these, the seals attached to the two sets of Leiden plates, Madras Museum, Anbil and the present Chārāla plates, have the same objects represented on them, while the seal of the Tiruvālaṅgāḍu plates exhibits a few more emblems. In shape, however, the two Leiden seals are slightly more ornate, being lotus-like in shape, while the rest are circular; but this may be due only to a difference in the work of the designer. In the Chārāla seal the Chōḷa emblem, the tiger², is seated in the proper right side and facing towards the left, instead of the right as in the other cases. The animal is delineated with claws drawn out, leaving no room for doubt as to its identity, and the two fish are also clearly portrayed. But in point of finish and neatness of execution, the two Leiden seals are the best. The tiger, the pair of fish and the bow are well-known emblems of the Chōḷa, Pāṇḍya and Chēra dynasties respectively, and the juxta-

¹ The seals of the early copper-plate grants contain only the birudas of kings, such as Tribhuvanāṅkuśa, Vishamasiddhi, Prabhuvēru, etc. The three early copper-plate grants of the Pāṇḍyas have no seals, and we do not know what legend, if any, this dynasty had used. The Pallava seal of Nandivarman III (S. I. I., Vol. II, p. 501) has a defaced legend in the Anushṭubh metre running round its margin. In the Vijayanagara, Nāyaka and Sētupati copper-plate grants, the respective sign-manuals of the dynasty were engraved at the end of the documents themselves and not on the seals. The Chōḷa seals, however, have one full verse in the Anushṭubh metre engraved on them. The formal verses of the four kings Sundara-Chōḷa, Uttama-Chōḷa, Rājendra-Chōḷa and Kulōttuṅga-Chōḷa I are reproduced below for purposes of easy reference. Of these, the text of the legend on the seal of the Madras Museum plates of Uttama-Chōḷa is given here for the first time.

(a) Sundara-Chōḷa—

Sāśvat(ś)-viśvantharā-nētram Lakshmi-jaya-[sa]rēruham |*
śāsanam śāśvatam śrīmad-Rājakṣarivarmamaya[h] ||*

—(Anbil Plates).

(b) Uttama-Chōḷa—

Nyāyānām śāsanam kurrat-śāsanam chakrabhūbhīritā |
śāsanam bhūpatē-śtat Parakṣarivarmamaya ||

—(Madras Museum Plates).

(c) Rājārāja I—

A stone record of this king opens with the following verse, which is likely to be found engraved on the seals of his copper-plate grants.

Śtat vīra-nripa-śrēṇi-mauṣi-māl-ūpalāṭitam |
śāsanam Rājārājasya Rājakṣarivarmamaya ||

—(S. I. I., Vol. II, No. 1).

(d) Rājendra-Chōḷa—

Rājad-rājanya-makuṣa-śrēṇi-ratnēshu śāsanam |
śtat-Rājendra-Chōḷasya Parakṣarivarmamaya ||

—(Tiruvālaṅgāḍu Plates).

The seal of the larger Leiden plates has also this verse engraved on it. On the analogy of the form of the legend of the present seal which is also reproduced in II. 189 to 191 of the text and the fact that legends on circular seals have probably to be read clockwise beginning from the centre of the top, the two lines of the verse given above, Vol. XXII, p. 213, have to be interchanged.

(e) Kulōttuṅga-Chōḷa—

Puṇyam Iśhvāśvara-sabbhā-chūdā-ratnāya śāsanam |
śrī-Kulōttuṅga-Chōḷasya Rājakṣarivarmamaya ||

—(Smaller Leiden Plates).

Here also the lines of the verse as read in above, Vol. XXII, p. 267, have been interchanged.

* It may be noted that king Virarājendra claims to have set up pillars of victory (jaya-bhadrattāṇ) at several places with the emblem of the tiger engraved on them (S. I. I., Vol. III, p. 67). The Mahēndragiri inscription of Rājendra-Chōḷa I (No. 396 of 1896) has also the figure of a tiger seated in front of two fish carved near it.

position of the latter two to the tiger on Chōla seals is meant to indicate the political supremacy of the Chōla over the Pāṇḍya and Chēra kings. The other objects such as the pair of chaurīs, the two lamps on either side, etc., belong to the group of eight objects called the aṣṭamaṅgalam,¹ which are associated with auspicious ceremonials. It may be noted that the full set of aṣṭamaṅgalam objects are represented on the seal of the Tiruvālaṅgāḍu plates where, in addition to these, a small figure of the Chālukyan crest², the boar, is also introduced, indicative perhaps of the Chōla supremacy over the Chālukya. Though Virarājendra claims to have defeated the Chālukya king several times, it is noticed that the Chālukyan varāha-lāṅchhana has not been figured on the Chārāla seal.

There are a few orthographical peculiarities noticeable in the record under review. The lengths of medial ī in Grantha letters are indicated by a pronounced loop (l. 2). The ra-sign when it is the second member in conjunct consonants is shaped like the ri-symbol in some cases (ll. 2, 47, etc.). La and ḷa are often interchanged (l. 20) and śa is wrongly used for cha in some cases (ll. 167, 176). The rules of sandhi are almost always observed, correctly in some cases and incorrectly in others. In the latter instances, the first consonant is retained instead of being changed into the third letter of the same varga. The use of the anusvāra in place of the appropriate nasals and the doubling of consonants after a nēpha are frequent. Such features are common to copper-plate inscriptions of this period. The errors have been corrected either in the body of the text or in relevant footnotes. At the ends of some of the verses in the Sanskrit portion, the symbol: followed by three vertical strokes is used as a punctuation mark, and should not be mistaken for the risarga, whereas in some other cases it is meant as such. The Tamil text, for the drafting of which the officer Madhurāntaka-Brahmādhiraḥa was responsible, is not free from errors of composition and transcription.

The Sanskrit portion of 81 verses in different metres which comprises nearly three-fourths of the document, is identical, verse for verse, with that in the long stone record of the king dated in the same 7th year, discovered at Kanyākumari in the Travancore State and published in a scholarly manner by Mr. K. V. Subrahmanya Ayyar in the *Travancore Archaeological Series*³ and by the late T. A. Gopinatha Rao in a previous volume of this Journal.⁴ As the Kanyākumari record is, however, damaged in several places, the present inscription is of great help in filling up the lacunæ and settling some doubtful readings in the former and in thus arriving at a complete text of this particular version of the Sanskrit prāśasti of the Chōla dynasty. In several instances, the readings furnished by this inscription are better than those made out from the Kanyākumari epigraph. These and other minor differences between these two copies have been noticed in footnotes under the text.

The record may, for the sake of convenience, be divided into four sections—the mythological, the historical, the donatory and the signatory.

Section I (Lines 1-104).

In this section of 52 Sanskrit verses, the mythological origin of the Chōla dynasty is given in great elaboration from Brahmā through Kāśyapa, Manu and other members of the Solar race. An eponymous Chōla, a Rājākēśarī and a Parakēśarī are then introduced, and the genealogy is

² The king claims to have captured the śākara-kṛtī (i.e.) the varāha-banner of the Chālukyas, along with other royal paraphernalia. (S. I. I., Vol. III, p. 66).

⁴ Ante., Vol. XVIII, pp. 21 ff.

further traced, though with no direct sequence, through a few more Purāṇic kings up to a certain Manōratha, after whom the names of a few quasi-historical members, such as, Parunetkīji, Karikāla, Vaḷabha, Jagadēkamalla and Vyālabhayaṅkara are mentioned,—the whole praśasti being a manifest attempt on the part of the composer to give his patron a pedigree going back to high antiquity. This portion has been discussed with characteristic fullness by Mr. K. V. Subrahmanya Ayyar.¹

Section II (ll. 104-169).

The really historical portion commences with the name of (Parakēśari) Vijayālaya, and from this king down to Rājēndradēva, the predecessor and elder brother of Virarājēndradēva, this inscription furnishes some useful information about the several members of the Chōḷa family. These facts have also been dealt with in detail elsewhere.²

Coming to Virarājēndradēva, the donor of the present grant, his military and other achievements are then described in seven verses (vv. 75-81). It is stated that "when king Rājēndradēva went to heaven, his younger brother Virarājēndra who had deprived his enemies of their splendour, succeeded to the extensive kingdom in accordance with the prescribed laws. Having killed at Kūḍal-Saṅgama the kings of the Karnāṭa-vaṃśa,³ this powerful Chōḷa ruler increased the army of the partakers of sacrificial offerings by the addition (to its numerical strength) of these kings, who had themselves become celestials. With the help of a single elephant,⁴ he destroyed the Kuntala army and created a new river of blood, whereat the ocean-god was delighted.

This king Vallabha-Vallabha conquered back the Vēṅgī and Kaliṅga countries, which had been inherited by his brothers but which had been left unearned for by them and had therefore been captured by his powerful enemies. Having defeated the strong armies of his opponents and having destroyed many of their fortresses, he ruled his kingdom in prosperity.

This Vira-Chōḷa, called also Karikāla-Chōḷa, destroyed the strength of the Kali-age and bestowed numerous dharmaśāsanas (edicts of charitable gifts). Further, he embellished the crown of the Dancer in the Dahlra-sabha (i.e., god Naṭarāja at Chidambaram) with a ruby called the 'Trailōkyasāra', which looked as if the progenitor of his own race (i.e., the Sun) had himself mounted on the top of the crown, so as to cause annoyance to the moon, the ancestor of the dynasty of his enemy (i.e., the Pāṇḍya), which is also worn as the crest-jewel by god Śrīkaṇṭha.⁵ This king founded several brahmadēyas under the name of Virarājēndra in the Chōḷa, Tuṇḍira, Pāṇḍya, Gaṅgavāṭi and Kulūta⁶ countries, and pleased forty-thousand Brāhmins learned in the Vēdas, by munificent gifts of lands."

The regnal year of the king is quoted as the 7th corresponding to Śaka 991, Saumya (ll. 159-160). The same regnal and Śaka years occur also in a record⁷ of his from Yōgi-Mallavarani.

² Ibid., and ante, Vol. XVIII, pp. 21 ff.

⁴ This achievement with 'a single elephant' also occurs in the Tamil text in S. J. J., Vol. III, p. 66, l. 6.

⁵ In addition to this gem, the king presented to the god a pedestal with the name of 'Virarājēndra' engraved on it—(No. 217 of the Madras Epigraphical Collection for 1912).

in the Puttur Division of the Chittoor District. The locality where these two inscriptions were discovered, namely the Chittoor District, has perhaps to account for the useful quotation of both the regnal as well as the Saka years in them, for such double citations are somewhat rare in inscriptions of this period in the southern districts.

Several Sanskrit and Tamil birudas of the king are also enumerated in this portion of the record (Il. 155-8), some belonging to him by his own right as a scion of the Chōla family, such as Ravikulatilaka, Chōlakulaśekhara, etc., while others were acquired by him as a result of his victory over the Chālukyas, such as Sakalabhuvanāśraya, Āhavamallakulakāla, etc. The title 'Āhavamallaṇṇai-vimmaḍi-ven-kaṇḍa' is of particular interest, as it claims for him victory over Āhavamalla, as many as five times. Pāṇḍyakulāntaka refers to his victory over the Pāṇḍyas.

These and other achievements of the king are further elaborated in the short historical introduction commencing with the words 'Vīramēy tūṇaiyāgavum', etc., which follows thereafter (Il. 160-68). It is herein claimed that Rājākēsarivarman¹ Virarājendra took the head of the Tenṇaṇ (Pāṇḍya), levied tribute from the Chēra king, subdued Siṅgaḷa-dēśam (Ceylon), saw the back of Āhavamalla five times in battle, fulfilled the vow of his elder brothers by recovering Vēṅgai-nāḍu which, however, he gave to king Vijayāditya (Vijayāditya VII) who had submitted to him, gave Kaḍāraṁ back after conquest to the (Kaḍāra ?) king who fell at his feet soliciting his help, drove away Sōmēśvara (Sōmēśvara II) from his Kannaḍa-dēśam, and gave Iraṭṭapāḍi-seven-and-a-half-lakh country to Vikramāditya (VI). Incidentally, Virarājendra is also stated to have defeated the Chālukya king at Muḍakkāṇu apparently on an earlier occasion, and to have thus cooled his anger.

From a study of the elaborate details contained in the variant historical introductions prefacing his lithic records, it is seen that the reign of Virarājendra, though it occupied a short span of only seven years, was crowded with campaigns conducted in as many as four war-fronts,—on the west against Āhavamalla to whom he had a score to pay in revenge for the death of his elder brothers in battle, on the east against Āhavamalla's feudatory, the Eastern Chālukya Vijayāditya, on the south against the Pāṇḍyas, the Chēras and Ceylon, while on the north he is said to have invaded Kalingam and carried his raid as far as Chakkarakkōṭṭam, in extension of his Vēṅgī campaigns.² Virarājendra began his military career even as a prince and appears to have taken part in the wars against the Western Chālukyas undertaken by his predecessors Rājādhirāja I, Rājendradēva and Rājamahēndra, and what they had failed to accomplish themselves, he claims to have brought to a successful finish. Soon after the death of Rājendradēva, he is said to have returned to Gaṅgā-purī (Gaṅgaikondaśōlapuram) direct from the battlefield for his coronation and to have again started out on that very day to prosecute the war against Āhavamalla. In all, he credits himself with having routed Āhavamalla in five pitched battles. These facts have been reviewed in a thorough manner by Dr. Hultzsch,³ but the sequence of events in this Chōla-Chālukya conflict as worked out by him seems to require slight revision.

Before examining this question, however, a few relevant facts bearing upon this period may be quoted here, for purposes of easy reference.

(1) Rājendradēva's rule extended from 28th May 1052 A.D. to A.D. 1063, his highest regnal year so far known being 12.⁴

¹ There is only one instance (No. 230 of 1928-29) in which he is styled a 'Parakēsarivarman'.

³ S. I. J., Vol. III, p. 191.

⁴ Ante, Vol. IX, p. 218 and No. 144 of 1898. His 12th year, if correct, will have commenced in June 1063, and he did not probably live long in that regnal year; but the details given in this record (No. 144 of 1898) work for February, A. D. 1063, which, however, fell in his 11th year.

- (2) A record of Rājamahēndra¹ dated in the 4th year, gives astronomical details which correspond to A.D. 1062, July 22. In a record dated in his 3rd year, this prince claims to have worsted the Chūlukyas at Muḍakkāru².
- (3) Rājamahēndra did not rule independently and probably predeceased his father; so Rājēndra may have chosen Virarājēndra as heir-apparent, some time before his own death.
- (4) Virarājēndra's date of accession has been calculated to fall between 11th September 1062 and 10th September 1063 A.D.³
- (5) He is said to have defeated Āhavamalla three times by the 4th year,⁴ and by the end of the 5th year, he claims to have defeated him in five engagements.⁵

Virarājēndra's campaigns against Āhavamalla—

Now as Virarājēndra boasts of the title 'Āhavamallagai-aṁmaḍi-veḷ-kaṇḍa' (i.e.,) he 'who saw the back of Āhavamalla five times', all the five engagements must have been directed against Āhavamalla-Sōmēśvara I during the latter's life-time, i.e., before 30th March A.D. 1068. As Rājamahēndra and Virarājēndra both claim to have fought the Chūlukyas at or on the bank of Muḍakkārū, and as there is no great possibility for two separate battles at the same place by two kings within a short interval, it is likely that both Rājamahēndra and Virarājendra took part together in the same battle, and as such, this must have happened in about the beginning of A.D. 1062,¹ when Virarājendra was only a prince.

² S. I. I., Vol. VII, No. 743. The name Muḍakkāru means a 'river with a sharp bend', and so it may have been a simple descriptive name of a devious river, which later became its distinctive name. This Muḍakkāru may be different from the Kūḍal-Saṅgamam, which requires more than one river to justify its name. It has to be noted that the name Muḍakkāru is Tamil in form and if this was its original name in its locality, we may have to look for it in some place where Tamil was current. If, however, a Telugu or Kannaḍa name had been appropriately paraphrased into Muḍakkāru, its identification becomes somewhat difficult. As another instance of such transformation may be mentioned the name Kāṇḍai (or Karāṇḍai ?) in the vicinity of Kūḍal-Saṅgamam, which appears to be a Tamilised poetic form of a Telugu or Kannaḍa name. Dr. N. Venkataramanayya suggests that it may perhaps be identified with Kandana (vrōṇa) i.e., the modern Kurnool. Similarly Kōṇḍai, the scene of another battle, may perhaps be identified with Kōṇḍavīḍu or Kōṇḍapalli.

In the present record Virarājendra states that, on the very day of his coronation, he proceeded against his enemy Āhavamalla and routed him and his sons at Kūḍal-Saṅgamam in the north.² This information is interesting and has not been specified in his other inscriptions. As Virarājendra's coronation could have taken place only after Rājendradēva's demise in A.D. 1063, this first battle of Kūḍal-Saṅgamam by Virarājendra, as king, will have to be dated in about A.D. 1064 only. But on the other hand the Maṇimaṅgalam inscription³ mentions that after the notable victory at Kūḍal-Saṅgamam, the king was pleased to ascend the virasinhāsana along with his consort Ulagamuḷududaiyāl and donned (mēyṇdu) the crown (viṇaya-maṇimakulam). In view of the specific post-dating of the Kūḍal-Saṅgamam battle to his coronation in the present grant, the description given in the Maṇimaṅgalam record has to be understood in the sense that the king signalled his success by a second elaborate coronation ceremonial after his return from the battle-field.

As Virarājendra claims to have defeated Āhavamalla three times by his 4th year, he must have defeated him on two other occasions in addition to the Kūḍal-Saṅgamam battle. These are mentioned in the Tamil preamble beginning with the words tiruraḷar, etc., i.e., (1) a campaign against Gaṅgapāḍi in which Vikkalaṅ and several sāmantas were routed and (2) another, against the Western Chāḷukya army in occupation in Vēṅgī, when the Chāḷukya general named Chāmuṇḍarāja was killed. The Muḍakkārū battle may have to be placed in one of the early campaigns.

Two other expeditions are also specified in the above praśasti to have been undertaken before the end of the 5th year of his reign. One of them was a battle on the bank of an unspecified river, when he slew a number of Chāḷukya and other generals. The other was arranged to be fought at Kūḍal-Saṅgamam again, in response to a challenge issued by Āhavamalla fixing a tryst there, but as Āhavamalla did not turn up in person, Virarājendra waited for him at Kāṇḍai (or Karandai) in its vicinity for over a month. In the skirmish that, however, ensued between the latter and the Chāḷukya garrison that was near by, three Chāḷukya generals were killed. Virarājendra proceeding thence, overran Vēṅgī and gave it back to Vijayāditya, and raided the territory as far as Chakkarakkōṭṭam.

Thus the five occasions⁴ in which Virarājendra 'saw the back of Āhavamalla' were—(1) the campaign against Gaṅgapāḍi in A.D. 1062, (2) the first invasion of Vēṅgī in A.D. 1063, (3) the battle of Kūḍal-Saṅgamam in A.D. 1064, (4) the battle on the bank of an unnamed river in

³ S. I. I., Vol. III, No. 30, ll. 13-14.

⁴ Rājendradēva also claims to have defeated Āhavamalla twice (īramādi-veṅ-kaṇḍa) (ante, Vol. XXI, p. 233, l. 11). He is called īramādi-veṅ-kaṇḍa Ulaguṇṇakkondarūṇṇa Ayyar (An. Rep. on S. I. Epigraphy for 1931-32, p. 52).

A D 1066, and (5) the encounter at Kāṇḍai (or Karaudai) near Kūḍal-Saṅgamam, which was followed up by a second invasion of Vēṅgī towards the middle of A D 1067. As already stated, all these military campaigns must have occurred before Āhavamalla's death in March A D 1068, and before September 10, A D 1067 which is the date of the Manimangalam inscription¹ of his 5th year mentioning them.

His Vēṅgī campaigns —

From his records it is learnt that Virarājendra undertook two expeditions against Vēṅgī during his reign as against Āhavamalla's power in that region. The Chōla influence which had prevailed in that territory since the time of the Chōla king Rājaraṇa I (A D 1000) suffered an eclipse in the middle of the 11th century A D. About A D 1062, soon after the death of the Eastern Chālukya Rājaraṇa I, his brother Vijayāditya appears to have wrested the power into his hands in preference to Rājaraṇa's son Rājendra Chōla,² who must have been a very young prince at the time. Taking advantage of the indifference of Rājadhira and Rājendradeva in Vēṅgī affairs, referred to in verse 77 of the present record, Āhavamalla found it a good opportunity to invade Vēṅgī about this time or somewhat earlier³ and made Vijayāditya VII his feudatory. Virarājendra's first campaign was therefore directed against Āhavamalla's army in Vēṅgī, but except for the defeat of the Chālukya general Chāmundaṛa in an engagement, this expedition does not appear to have accomplished much. It is possible that on the receipt of the news of death of his elder brother Rājendradeva, Virarājendra had to rush back to the Chōla capital in the middle of this campaign for his coronation, and as Āhavamalla appears, in the meantime, to have mustered his forces for another fight, the newly anointed Chōla king was obliged to depart from the capital again on the very day of his coronation, posthaste to meet his enemy at Vada-Kūḍal-Saṅgamam. In the second invasion undertaken about A D. 1067, a fierce battle was fought in the vicinity of Vijayavāda (Bezvada). Āhavamalla's power having been broken, his feudatory Vijayāditya appears to have also submitted and transferred his allegiance for the time being, to his Chōla conqueror, from whom, it is said, he got back his territory.⁴ Virarājendra's raid through Kalingam and as far as Chakkarakkōttam was only in continuation of this Vēṅgī campaign.

There appears to have been a third occasion in which Vēṅgī was invested by the Chōla army. This campaign which is described only in the Tirumukkūḍal inscription⁵ is stated to have occurred after the Ceylon expedition and so has to be dated in about January or February A D. 1068 approximately. Though it is not expressly stated as to what had necessitated it so soon after the last campaign a few months earlier, in which Vijayāditya was given back Vēṅgī, a clue seems to be afforded in the statement that the Chalukki (ach-Chalukki)⁶ came out with an army twice in numerical strength to what he had marshalled on a former occasion. This

¹ S I I, Vol III, No 30

² In ante, Vol XXII, No 35, Mr K V Subrahmanya Ayyar states that the succession of Vijayāditya was not disputed. Prince Rājendra was perhaps too young to make a strong protest.

⁶ The expression 'ach-Chalukki' used here probably refers only to the Eastern Chālukya Vijayāditya, who has been mentioned just previous to the description of the Ceylon campaign.

inscription dated in the 5th year states that Virarājendra defeated Āhavamalla five times, ending with the battle of Karandai. In later records¹ of the 7th year, the Western Chālukya king continues to be mentioned as having suffered defeat the same number of times. So the enemy encountered by the Chōla at the subsequent battle of Koṇḍai, (probably Koṇḍaviḍu in the Vēṅgī territory), could not have been Āhavamalla, but was in all probability Vijayāditya. The latter who was a Western Chālukya feudatory in the initial years of his reign, appears to have transferred his nominal allegiance to the Chōla conqueror, and as the price of his submission, got back Vēṅgī. It is possible that, a short time later, he attempted to throw off the Chōla yoke and mustering a large army opposed the Chōla king at the battle of Koṇḍai. The Chālukyan army was, however, repulsed, and the victorious Virarājendra is then stated to have planted a pillar of victory at Śūttukkal² and marched into Kaliṅgam and Chakkarakkōṭṭam, defeating and killing some Chālukya generals.

Further Chālukya hostilities.

The Chōla-Chālukya hostilities did not, however, cease with the death of Āhavamalla. In a record dated in the 6th year,³ Virarājendra claims to have defeated Sōmēśvara before he had had time to take off his necklet (kaṇṭhikā), to have burnt the Chālukya capital Kāmpili and to have set up a pillar of victory at Karaḍikkal. Another dated in the 7th year,⁴ states that Sōmēśvara was driven out of Kannaḍa-dēśam and the Raṭṭapāḍi-seven-and-a-half-lakhs country in its entirety was given to Vikramāditya (VI) who had submitted to him. The kaṇṭhikā or the necklet was the conventional emblem of heir-apparency⁵ of the Chālukya dynasty, as differentiated from the makuḷa or crown, the emblem of royalty, and the Sōmēśvara referred to here was evidently the second of that name. The above-noted claim of Virarājendra has therefore to be understood to be but a poetical way of saying that the Chōla king swooped down on the Chālukya capital evidently in aid of his ally Vikramāditya,⁶ immediately after the death of Āhavamalla and before the quondam heir-apparent Sōmēśvara II put on the crown of royalty, i.e., in the interval between 30th March, A.D. 1068, the date of death of Āhavamalla, and 11th April A.D. 1068, the actual date of accession of Sōmēśvara II. The result of this campaign has, however, been exaggerated by the Chōla panegyrist, for Sōmēśvara appears to have ceded only a portion of his territory to Vikramāditya, as evidenced by his own records being simultaneously found in other parts of the kingdom, and Vikramāditya, the protégé of Virarājendra, appears to have himself continued in a subordinate capacity, as suggested by his investiture with the kaṇṭhikā only. The claim for a Chālukyan victory made in the Shikarpur record,⁷ which must have been dated some time later than April, A.D. 1068, may be noted in this connection. It is stated therein that Virarājendra thinking that this was an opportune occasion, invaded the Chālukyan territory with a large army and laid siege to Gutti; but when Sōmēśvara II opposed him with a powerful cavalry force, he was forced to flee. The Chālukya records are silent about the burning of Kāmpili, while there is no mention of the Chōla reverses at Gutti in the Chōla records. It may be inferred that the Chōla king was successful in the beginning of this campaign, and that later he sustained a defeat at Gutti in about the end of A.D. 1068, which put an end to his military aspirations in the north.

¹ The Kanyākumari inscription and the present copper-plate. Nowhere has Āhavamalla been described as having been defeated six times or more (arumadi-veṅ-kaṇḍa, etc.).

² The expression Puli-Śūttukkal has been taken to be the name of a village (ante, Vol. XXI, p. 226). But it may also be taken to mean a 'stone pillar of victory with the mark of a tiger on it', which was probably set up at Koṇḍai itself.

His campaign against the Pāṇḍya.

In regard to Virarājendra's southern campaigns, the one against the Pāṇḍya is in a way confirmed by the existence of his inscriptions¹ at Kanyākumari (Travancore), Attūr (Tirunelveli District) and Tiruputtūr (Ramanad District). Before the 3rd year of his reign, he had appointed prince Gaṅgaikonda-Chōla as the Chōla-Pāṇḍya viceroys² over the Pāṇḍya country in continuation of the previous system of administration, but this Chōla prince was not left undisturbed for long, for according to a record³ dated in the 3+1st year, Virarājendra marched against a certain Śrīvallabha, apparently a Pāṇḍya, and killed his son Virakēsari. As this campaign has not been referred to in the Tiruvēṅkāḍu⁴ record dated in the 2nd year+230th day of his reign but is mentioned in the Karuvūr inscription⁵ of this king dated in the 3+1st year, it has to be placed towards the end of his 3rd year, i.e., in about A.D. 1065. This victory also appears to have been of a temporary nature, for Virarājendra's successor Kulōttuṅga-Chōla I had again to go to war against the 'five Pāṇḍyas' a few years later.

His campaign against Udagai.

In the course of this southern campaign, the Chēra must have also felt the impact of the Chōla army and consented to pay tribute. The Kēraḷa king and his sons are described to have fled before the mad elephant of Virarājendra in a battle at Udagai⁶ and to have hidden themselves in the western ocean. In an inscription⁷ copied at Kilār in the South Arcot District, dated in the 29th year of Rājārāja I, the king is stated to have burnt the city of Udagai⁸ during his Malai-nāḍu campaign. From these references, it is clear that Udagai was a city in the Chēra dominion, and was, in all probability identical with Udayampērūr, 'the big city of the Udayas (the Chēras)' in the northern portion of the Travancore State, which is only three miles distant from Trichūr and which in the olden days was an important place in the Chēra territory. The Chēra contemporaries of Rājendra-Chōla I were Rājasūha and his son Rājārāja who figure in the Manuārkōyil inscription⁹ of Jaṭavarman Sundara-Chōla-Pāṇḍya, but who the contemporary of Virarājendra was, is not clear.

His conquest of Ceylon.

The conquest of Siṁhaḷam is only briefly referred to in the present record; but the Tirumukkūḍal inscription¹⁰ dated in the 5th year of the king, describes this campaign in some detail and refers to his defeat of the Ceylon king Vijayabāhu and the subjugation of the island 'girt round by the waters of the sea'. Though this is perhaps a sweeping claim, it has to be conceded that a portion of the island was under Chōla sway at this period. As the Maṇimaṅgalam record of the 10th September A.D. 1067 does not refer to this expedition, it will have to be placed towards the end of that year, about November or December A.D. 1067.¹¹ Virarājendra's predecessor Rājendradēva had also invaded Ceylon and an inscription¹² of his is found there. Inscriptions¹³ of Adhirājendra, the successor of Virarājendra, are also found at Polonnaruwa (Ceylon). The latter

The Polonnaruwa inscription of Vijayabāhu (ante, Vol. XVIII, No. 38) may be considered to mark the eclipse of Chōla power in Ceylon, for no inscriptions of later Chōla kings are found actually in that island.

⁹ If the Ceylon expedition of the 5th year took place about November 1067, and an incident of April A.D. 1069 fell in the 6th year, the date of accession of Virarājendra can be narrowed down between the limits—December 1062 A.D. and March 1063 A.D. A date in his 7th regnal year (Kampi, ha. 7, Thursday, Māga-Irsha) was A.D. 1068, September 10, Thursday (No. 160 of 1937-38).

did not perhaps lead an independent expedition against the island during his very short reign and may be presumed to have participated in his father's campaign only. No records attributable to Virarājendra have, however, been found in Ceylon.¹

His campaign against Kaḍāram.

Another overseas victory is claimed for Virarājendra over Kaḍāram. In the later historical introduction of the 7th year commencing with 'vīramēy-tuṇaiyāgarum'² this achievement is introduced between the second invasion of Vēṅgi in A.D. 1067 and the last campaign of Virarājendra that we know of, which was directed against Sōmēśvara II (A.D. 1068). As his father Rājendra-Chōla I claims to have invaded Kaḍāram himself by about A.D. 1026,³ it is possible that Virarājendra, as a young prince, had accompanied the Chōla army in that campaign also. Such a campaign to the distant Kaḍāram towards the close of Virarājendra's reign appears problematical and has to be confirmed only by future researches. The express statement that the Chōla king conquered Kaḍāram and gave it back to the (Kaḍāra) king who had supplicated him, seems to imply that an expedition, at least under an able general though not personally led by the king himself, may have been sent against this far eastern country in aid of his ally. If it was an accomplished fact of his reign, it may have taken place in the beginning of A.D. 1068. The friendly relationship between the Chōla and the Kaḍāram kings seems to have been continued down to the 20th year of the reign of Kulōttuṅga-Chōla I (A.D. 1090), when two messengers (dūtar) of the Kaḍāram king came to the mainland to obtain from the Chōla monarch some concessions on behalf of the Baudḍha-vilāra at Negapatam.⁴

Thus Virarājendra's short reign was a period of strenuous military effort to keep up the weakening Chōla power and prestige to some extent. The several campaigns of his reign may thus be briefly reviewed, in their probable chronological sequence :

- (1) the first campaign against Gaṅgapāḍi in A.D. 1062 ;
- (2) the first invasion of Vēṅgi in A.D. 1063 ;
- (3) the first battle of Kūḍal-Saṅgamam in A.D. 1064 ;
- (4) the southern expedition against the Pāṇḍya and Chēra in A.D. 1065 ;
- (5) the battle on the bank of an unspecified river in A.D. 1066 ;
- (6) the clash with the Chālukyan army at Kāndai (or Karandai) near Kūḍal-Saṅgamam in the middle of A.D. 1067 ;
- (7) the second invasion against Vēṅgi, the battle of Vijayavāḍa and the restoration of Vēṅgi to Vijayāditya before September A.D. 1067 ;
- (8) the expedition against Sīrīhalaṃ in the end of A.D. 1067 ;
- (9) the overseas campaign to Kaḍāram in the beginning of A.D. 1068 ;
- (10) the third expedition against Vēṅgi and the battle of Koṇḍai in about February A.D. 1068 ;
- (11) the campaign against the Western Chālukya Sōmēśvara, the burning of Kāmpili and the erection of a pillar of victory at Karaḍikkal in April A.D. 1068 ; and the installation of Vikramāditya VI in a portion of the Western Chālukya dominions ; and
- (12) the battle of Gutti⁵ in about the end of A.D. 1068, wherein Virarājendra suffered defeat at the hands of Sōmēśvara II.

Though this warlike king was so much preoccupied in his wars during his short reign, for not a year, except perhaps the last, passed without his army being engaged in some campaign or other, he appears to have found time to attend to the welfare of his subjects. He is said to have presented many agrahāras to Brāhmanas and several benefactions to temples owed their origin to his munificence.

In this context, it may be remarked that the Chōla version of the Chōla-Chālukya war appears to give a slightly exaggerated account of Virarājendradēva's victories. The Chālukya records, on the other hand, seem to indicate that the reverses were not always on the Chālukyan side alone.¹ In fact, the two parties appear to have been fairly well-matched, with the result that the hostilities were protracted and the opposing armies met in as many as five different engagements. The Chōla army no doubt took the offensive and carried the war into the enemy's country, as testified to by the scenes of battles which were all located in Chālukyan territory, and except for the Chōla reverses in the death of Rājādhirāja I in the earlier battle of Koppam and later at Guttī, Virarājendra's independent campaigns appear to have met with a fair measure of success; but the fact that he is described as having restored the conquered dominions—viz., Vēṅgī to Vijayāditya VII and Raṭṭa-pāḍi to Vikramāditya VI—seems to indicate that his hold on the conquered territories was not of a permanent nature. His Pāṇḍya and Chēra conquests also appear to have shared the same fate. This policy of restoration adopted by Virarājendra may have been due to considerations of statecraft by which he had tried to placate the kings on his frontiers or to the insufficiency of his own resources which had weakened his hold on his conquests so far away from Chōla headquarters. Whatever the reason, the provenance of his inscriptions with the exception of the Kanyākumari, Āttūr and Tiruppuṭtūr records reveals that his authority extended over a restricted area only, comprising the North Arcot, South Arcot, Chingleput, Tanjore and Trichinopoly Districts of the Madras Presidency with a portion of the adjoining Pudukkōṭṭai State and the Kolar and Bangalore Districts of the Mysore State, added thereto.

The circumstances under which the king died are not known. As a record² of his 7th year is dated on September 10, A.D. 1069, and as two records of Adhirājendra refer to the 8th year of his predecessor, Virarājendra must have been alive till at least October A.D. 1069, and he may have passed away sometime later in the beginning of A.D. 1070. It is possible that there is some reference to his last days in an undated record from Tiruvorriyūr,³ in which provision was made for worship in the local temple for the welfare of the king and for the prosperity of the queen's tirumāṅgalyam. Virarājendra was succeeded by his son Adhirājendra, a portion of whose short period of rule must have merged into his own reign. The prayer offered for the welfare of Adhirājendra in a record from Kūhūr⁴ in the Tanjore District, dated in his 3rd year, seems to indicate that this king was himself suffering from illness at the time and his records end with the 4th year⁵. As his successor Kulōttuṅga-Chōla I ascended the throne on 9th June 1070 A.D.,⁶ Adhirājendra could have ruled independently for only a short time in the first half of A.D. 1070.

¹ The Chālukya titles 'the shatterer of the pride of the Chōla monarchs' (ante, Vol. XV, p. 91) and the foundation of a temple called Chōla-gaṇḍa-Traipuruśhadēva at Aṇṇigere (S. I. I., Vol. XII, B.K. No. 103) may be noted. An invasion led by Prince Vishnuvardhana Vijayāditya in the reign of Trailōkyamalla, against the Chōla king in A.D. 1064 is referred to in S. I. I., Vol. IX, Nos. 127 and 128.

⁶ Ante, Vol. VII, p. 7, fn. 5.

What became of the several Chōla princes, sons of Rājēndradēva and Virarājēndra¹, is not apparent. Of those, if any, that may have survived the numerous campaigns of this period, there was perhaps none strong enough to occupy the Chōla throne after Adhirājēndra. So the enterprising Eastern Chālukya prince Rājēndra-Chōla II, son of Chālukya Rājarāja I, grandson of the Chōla king Rājēndra-Chōla I, and son-in-law of Rājēndradēva, who was thus intimately connected with the Chōla royal family, availed himself of this opportunity to quietly succeed to the vacant Chōla throne.² This political step not only helped to relieve the tension in his own country where his uncle Vijayāditya was still reigning, but also gave Kulōttuṅga-Chōla I a large tract of new territory to rule over, until such time as, with the demise of his uncle, he could consolidate the Chōla and Chālukya fortunes into one line.

Section III (ll. 170-191).

This section relates to the object of the grant. At the time of making the gift recorded in the present charter, the king is stated to have been seated in the frontal tirukkāvaṇam of the audience-hall (tiruvōlakka-maṇḍapa) called 'Rājarājan'³ in the temple of Tiruvēgambam-Uḍaiyār at Kāñchīpuram, a nagaram in Eyiṟ-kōṭṭam, a sub-division of Jayaṅḡḡaśōla-maṇḍalam. The village 'Chērām alias Madhurāntaka-chaturvēdimaṇḡalam, which was granted to the three Brāhmins of the Ātrēya-gōtra already referred to above, is said to have been situated in Iraṭṭapāḍi-konḡaśōla-maṇḡalam, that had been captured by Virarājēndradēva in the campaign, which he had undertaken immediately after his coronation and in which he had defeated Āhavamalla and his sons on the battle-field at the northern Kūḍal-Saṅgamam.

The boundary-line of this gift-village is then described in detail. Starting from Kuppēri in the east, it passed through several landmarks, such as rocks, sluices, etc., and ended at a hillock called Kaḡatti-malai.⁴ The land enclosed by this boundary-line belonged to the village Chērām alias Madhurāntaka-chaturvēdimaṇḡalam. In this connection it may be noted that the boundary-line was not marked out, as was usual in such cases and in this period, by the circumambulation of a she-elephant (piḡi-śūḡḡu) and that though it was drafted by the officer Madhurāntaka-Brahmadhīrājan, it is lacking in the sententious clauses and schedules regarding tax-exemptions, irrigation-privileges, etc., similar to those mentioned in the Tiruvālaṅḡaḡu plates of Rājēndra-Chōla I. After the description of the boundary-line, the verse which is engraved on the seal of this copper-plate grant is also repeated here, to stress the fact that the foregoing charter was the order of king Virarājēndradēva.

Section IV (ll. 192-211).

This section constitutes the concluding portion of the record and contains the names of the signatories, imprecatory verses and such other routine matters. The name of the adhikāri-ḡaḡ who drafted this order is given as Guṇanīdi-Aruḡmoḡiyār alias Mīṇavaṇ-Mūvēndavēḡār of Parakēsarinaḡḡūr in Tirunaḡaiyūr-nāḡu, a sub-division of Kṣatriyaśikhāmaṇi-vaḡanāḡu, a district of Śōla-maṇḡalam. The tirumandira-ōlai officers were Tōṇamavaṇ Pāpanāśaṇ alias Viraśrī-vallabha-Brahmadhīrājan of Kāyākkuḡi, a brahmadēya in Kuṟumbūr-nāḡu, a sub-division of

² The 'adoption' theory has been ably refuted by Mr. K. V. S. Ayyar in ante, Vol. XXII, p. 272. Whether Kulōttuṅga's succession was peaceful or was attended with civil war and bloodshed has also been the subject of much speculation.

Jayaṅgaṇḍaśōḷa-vaḷanāḍu and Aruḷmoḷi-Rājendraśōḷa alias Jananātha-Viḷupparaiyaṅ of Śēnda-maṅḡalam in Viraśōḷa-vaḷanāḍu.

The composer of the Sanskrit prasasti was a certain Chandrabhūṣaṇa-Bhaṭṭa who is referred to later by the paraphrased name of Śaśibhūṣaṇa-Paṇḍita. He is evidently identical with Chandrasekharaḥṣaṇa-Bhaṭṭa alias Vīrarājendra-Brahmādhirāja mentioned in an inscription¹ of the king from Gaṅgaikondaśōḷapuram, where a large number of the king's officers are enumerated, among whom Gaṇanidhi-Aruḷmoḷi alias Mūṇavan-Mūvendaṇḍar of the present record also finds mention.² A certain Chandrabhūṣaṇa-Paṇḍita figures in two records³ from the Bellary District dated in A. D. 1054 and 1063, and it is possible he was identical with the composer of this copper-plate grant. In collaboration with this panegyrist, the officer named Madhurāntaka-Brahmādhirāja is said to have drafted this copper-plate charter finally, and got it engraved by Saṅkaraṇ-Kāḍḍi alias Karaṇākara-Āchāriyaṅ, a Tachchāchāriyaṅ of Kuvalāḷam in Kuvalāḷa-nāḍu.

A few imprecatory verses are then quoted, and along with them there is one more verse in the Mālinī-metre added here, as an exhortation made by king 'Rājārāja' whose head is ornamented with the lotus-feet of Hara, enjoining all future kings to protect this charity. As this reminds us of the title 'Śivapādaśekhara' borne by the Chōḷa king Rājārāja I, it appears probable that like the supplicatory verse ending with 'yāchatē Rāmabhadraḥ' this Chōḷa king also got a similar verse composed for use in Chōḷa documents. Or as an alternative, it may be suggested that the verse refers to Vīrarājendra himself, who is given the titles 'Rājādhirāja' and 'Rājārāja' in the Tirumukkūḍal inscription,⁴ in which case the attribute used in this verse may be understood as indicating simply the king's intense devotion to Hara.⁵

Among the place-names mentioned in the record, the village Chēṇām in Puli-nāḍu may be identified with Chūrāla in the Punganur taluk of the Chittoor District, where the copper-plate set was discovered. Raṭṭapāḍikondaśōḷa-maṇḍalam, which took the new name from the time of Rājendradēva who conquered Raṭṭapāḍi, is represented by the tract of country round about Punganur in the Chittoor District, and the adjoining Chintamani taluk of the Mysore State. There was also another sub-division known by the name of Raṭṭapāḍikondaśōḷa-vaḷanāḍu in the Pudukkottai State. The names occurring in the description of boundaries are too vague to be identified now⁶.

NO. 26.—DATE OF THE PĀNḌAVA KINGS OF SOUTHERN KOSALA.

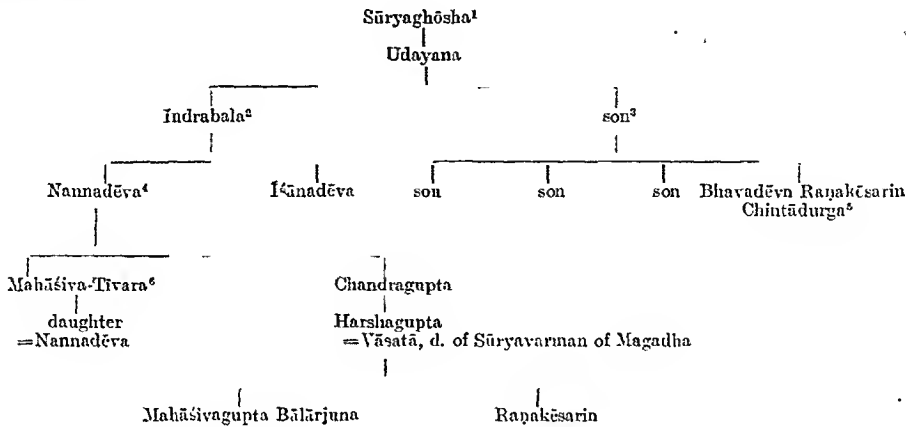

A. GHOSH, M.A., PATNA.

The dynasty of the Pāṇḍavas of the Lunar race, ruling in Southern Kōsala for about a century and a half, is known to us from eight inscriptions on stone and copper-plates.² It is perhaps desirable for the purpose of the present note to reproduce here the genealogy derived from these inscriptions :

The date of these kings is anything but certain. Kielhorn tentatively proposed to place them in the eighth and ninth centuries A.D. on some a priori grounds.⁷ This date has been responsible for a theory that has gained some popularity, viz., the Chandragupta mentioned in the Sanjān plates of Amōghavarsha⁸ as having been defeated by the Rāshtrakūta king Gōvinda III (c. A. D. 793-814) is to be identified with the Pāṇḍava king of that name. It is overlooked that the Sanjān plates deal with the conquests of Gōvinda in a strictly chronological and regional order (more certainly than the Allahābād pillar inscription of Samudragupta). The mention of Chandragupta along with Nāgabhaṭa and the separate recounting of Kōśala make it definite that it is not the Pāṇḍava king who is intended there.⁹

Of late some scholars have tried to establish that Tivaraḍēva, an important king of the Pāṇḍava line, ruled in the first half of the sixth century A.D.¹⁰ The object of this note is to show that such an early dating is not possible on palæographical grounds.

A main contention of the latter set of scholars is that Sūryavarman, the Varman king of Magadha whose daughter Vāsaṭā was married to Harshagupta the nephew of Tivara, was no other than the Maukhari of that name, who, as a prince, rebuilt a temple of Śiva in

² He is probably referred to under the veil of a metaphor in the Bhāṇḍak inscription, J.R.A.S., 1905, p. 631, n. 4.

³ There is nothing to show that he ever became king.

⁵ He is referred to as nriṣa in line 10 of the Bhāṇḍak inscription.

A.D. 554.¹ But, as I have said elsewhere,² this identification is highly doubtful, for (1) it is by no means certain that the Maukhari Śūryavarman ever came to the throne, as his name is not mentioned in the Aśirgaḍh and Nālandā seals of the Maukharis, and as no coins belonging to him have as yet been found, and (2) whereas the Śūryavarman of the Sirpur inscription is called king of Magadha, the Maukharis of the line of Harivarman were never a characteristically Magadhan dynasty, their headquarters being at Kanauj.

It is now practically certain³ that the Śarabhapura line, consisting of Prasannamātra, his sons Mahājayarāja and Mānamātra, and Mānamātra's sons Mahāsudēvarāja and Mahāpravararāja, preceded and not followed the Pāṇḍava kings in Southern Kōśala. Professor Mirashi holds that Mahāpravararāja (who issued his Thākurdīyā plates from Śrīpura) ruled in the first half of the sixth century and was ousted by Tivara, whom, as has been said above, he proposes to place in A.D. 530. It is, however, not possible to subscribe to this view: the Khārōḍ inscription of Indrabala and Iśānadēva⁴ shows that even before Tivara the Pāṇḍavas were masters of much the same area as had been held by the Śarabhapura kings. The fact that Tivara is the first king of his line who is known to have made Śrīpura his capital does not warrant the belief that the capital of his father and grandfather was situated elsewhere, as no copper-plate (which alone mentions the capital as the place of issue of the charter) belonging to them has as yet been found.

Having seen that there is no sure ground for placing Tivara in the second quarter of the sixth century, we may turn to an examination of the palæographical chart attached hereto.⁵ The Ārang plates of Bhīmasēna of unknown lineage are dated in the Gupta year 232=A.D. 601;⁶ it is the only dated inscription of the locality and the period with which we are now concerned, and as such affords a convenient standard of comparison. It will be seen that the characters show typical Gupta forms throughout. Comparing this record with the Bhāṇḍak inscription of Nannadēva, which according to Professor Mirashi's chronology must belong to c. A.D. 500, we find that every letter in the latter presents a more developed appearance; in bh and s there is now a hollow wedge attached to the left corner; looped tripartite y has given place to the bipartite form: the right vertical of ś projects a bit above the curved top—an important development which led to the ultimate separation of the left and right limbs of the letter, leaving the left limb to develop independently into the Nāgarī and proto-Bengali forms (which tendency of separation is already noticeable in the Sirpur inscription of Mahāśivagupta, where the horizontal cross-bar of the letter has turned into a curved inward prolongation of the left member, the right member being thus a separate entity); in h the left limb is no longer a vertical straight line but a curve, and the right downward stroke shows a tendency to hang below the base line. The persistent occurrence of late forms in the Bhāṇḍak inscription marks it out as definitely much later than the Ārang plates; a fortiori the possibility of its being placed a century prior to the latter cannot be considered. It is also evident from the chart that the letters of the Kōṇḍēḍḍa plates of the Śailōdbhava Dharmarāja have practically the same forms as those of the Bhāṇḍak inscription.

It will be readily admitted that it is not strictly scientific to compare the Hārāhā inscription with the inscriptions of the Pāṇḍavas owing to the great distance separating them ; but if it were allowed, it could be easily shown that the Hārāhā inscription is distinctly earlier, so that Śūryavarman could not have been a contemporary of Harshagupta.

It is clear, therefore, that the ascription of the Bhāṇḍak inscription to a date earlier than A.D. 650, i.e. at least fifty years after the date of the Ārang plates of Bhīma-sēna, is a palæographical impossibility. Tivara, therefore, may be tentatively placed in the last quarter of the seventh century A.D.

We may now proceed to examine some incidental facts and identifications arising out of these tentative dates.

1. Some scholars have found a reference to Tivara in the Pulōmbūru and Ipūr grants of the Vishṇukunḍin Mādhavarman,¹ which refer to an invasion of the city of Trivara by Mādhavarman.² But from the wordings in the inscriptions it is not certain that the expression Trivara-nagara should be taken to mean 'the city of King Trivara' and not 'the city called Trivara'. King Tivara of the Lunar race, who is proposed for identification with this Trivara, is not known to have founded a city of his own ;³ on the other hand, the city of Śrīpura was the capital of Southern Kōsala before, during and after the reign of Tivara. It appears to me that there is much probability in the view⁴ that Trivara is a place-name, being a partial Prakritization of Tripurī, and giving rise in due course to Tivār or Tewar, by which name the ancient Tripurī is now known. Even assuming that Trivara in the above inscriptions is the name of some king or prince, there is little likelihood of his being identical with the Pāṇḍava Tivara, in view of the fact that the date of the Pulōmbūru grant is most probably A.D. 594,⁵ which is much too early for one who, according to the chronology proposed here, flourished towards the end of the seventh century.

2. The Kōṇḍēḍḍa and Nivīnā plates of the Śailōdbhava king Dharmarāja say that Mādhava, the younger brother of the king, became a rebel ; being defeated at Phāsikā he took shelter with another king Trivara,⁶ but was again defeated along with Trivara at the foot of the Vindhya. Dr. N. P. Chakravarti, the editor of the Nivīnā plates, proposes to identify this Trivara with Tivara of Southern Kōsala. Dharmarāja, being the grandson of Mādhava-Sainyabhīta II, the author of the Ganjām plates of A.D. 619,⁷ must have flourished in the latter

⁴ Cf. Journal of the Department of Letters, Calcutta University, Vol. XI, p. 63.

⁵ R. S. Panichamukhi (loc. cit.) tries to prove that the date of the grant is A.D. 621, as 594 is too early to be the forty-eighth year of the king who was defeated in c. 631 by Pulakēśin II or his brother Kubja-Vishṇuvardhana. As Pulakēśin's conquest of Kālīṅga, Kōsala, Pishāpura, Kuṇāla and Kāñchīpura, recorded in vv. 26 and 27 of the Aihole inscription (above, Vol. VI, p. 6), were effected in one and the same expedition, and as Vishṇuvardhana was the governor of Vēṅgi from c. 616 to 633 (cf. D. C. Ganguly, I. H. Q., Vol. VIII, p. 442), it seems very likely that the Vishṇukunḍins were ousted by the Chālukyas in c. 616. The fact that the son of the donee of the Pulōmbūru grant of Mādhavarman was the recipient of the same village in the reign of Jayasinha, the son of Vishṇuvardhana, (above, Vol. XIX, p. 254), does not prove that Mādhavarman just preceded Jayasinha in time ; the two kings might well have been separated by two short reigns of a successor of Mādhavarman and of the Chālukya Vishṇuvardhana. [But Jayasinha is definitely known to be the successor of Vishṇuvardhana.—N. L. R.]

half of the seventh century, which, according to our chronology, was also the date of Tivara. The identification proposed by Dr. Chakravarti is, therefore, highly probable.

3. Nannarāja, the son-in-law of Tivara, may perhaps be identical with the Rāshtrakūṭa chief of the same name who is known from the Tiwarkhēḍ and Multāi plates to have lived in the first half of the eighth century.¹ It is to be noted that both of them are said to have acquired the pañcha-mahāsabā.

4. Harshagupta, the nephew of Tivara, seems to find mention in the Dhulīa plates of Karkarāja,² which says that the Rāshtrakūṭa Dantidurga won victories over [Kirtivarman] the Karpātaka (Chālukya) king, who had defeated, among others, a king named Harsha. As Harshagupta flourished in the first half of the eighth century according to our chronology, it is very likely that he was the senior contemporary of Kirtivarman II, who began his reign in c. A.D. 744.

5. Lastly, it must be admitted that we are not aware of the existence of any Sūryavarman in Magadha in the first half of the eighth century, who could have married his daughter to Harshagupta. Not much is known about the history of Magadha in the seventh and eighth centuries; but we do come across references to some chiefs whose names ended in varman and who therefore may be regarded as having formed a Varman dynasty. (The Sirpur inscription says that Sūryavarman was born in the Varman family.)³ The Korean traveller Hwui Lun, for instance, refers to the contemporary Magadhan king as Dēvavarman.⁴ Further, Cunningham points out that in A.D. 692 the king of Eastern India was known in Chinese as Mo-lo-pa-mo or Malavarman.⁵ For earlier times we may recall the names of Pūrṇavarman, who, according to Hiuen Tsiang, restored the Bōdhi tree at Bōdh-Gayā,⁶ and of the Maukharī sāmanta-chūḍāmaṇis Yajñavarman, Śūrdūlavarman and Anantavarman, known from the Barāhar-Nāgārjuni cave inscriptions.⁷ We may prolong the list by adding the names of Sundaravarman and Kalyāṇavarman mentioned in the Kaṇva-dīmahōtsava, a drama which, it has been shown, cannot be placed earlier than A.D. 700.⁸ There is thus an almost continuous record of the existence of Varman rulers in Magadha who were probably usually feudatories, assuming independence under favourable circumstances.

slab is broken into two fragments both of which contain writing on the front and back sides. They are mutilated in parts and so a few letters are lost in the invocatory and imprecatory verses. The inscription consists of 66 lines and the writing is fairly well preserved. At the top of the slab are carved a couchant bull, the sun and the linga with a dagger below them. I edit the inscription below with the kind permission of Rao Bahadur C. R. Krishnamacharu, the Superintendent for Epigraphy.

The alphabet is Telugu-Kannaḍa of the period to which the record belongs. The hooked vertical stroke at the bottom of the letter ḍ to mark the aspiration, deserves notice, see prauḍhi (l. 24), paribriḍha (l. 25), jāl-āvaliḍha (l. 26), etc. Orthography does not call for any special comment except that a consonant before a rēpha in the body of a word is usually doubled as in Bhārgava (l. 18), bhānu-arkka (l. 31), sarvā (l. 51) etc., but in dvādaś-ārḍh-ōparāgē (l. 33), sarvān (l. 38), etc., this practice is not observed. Dental n is wrongly substituted for lingual ṇ in suvarṇaśya (l. 44) and palatal ś for dental s in śaṅkhyā (l. 31). There are a few mistakes of the engraver as in Sadar-ādibhiḥ (l. 40) for Sagar-ādibhiḥ, śatruṇāṇi tritō (l. 42) for °ṇ-āpi kṛitō. The language is Sanskrit (verse) in ll. 1-51 and Telugu (prose) in ll. 52-60. Ll. 61-66 also contain a verse in corrupt Sanskrit the sense of which is not quite clear.

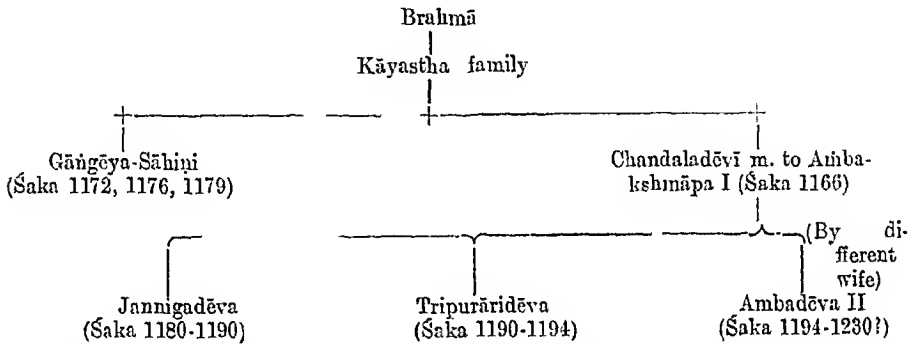

After invocation to the Varāḥ-avatāra of Viṣṇu, the record introduces the kṣatra clan created by Brahmā and states that there were some heroes in it, who remained undaunted even though the whole kṣatra race was discouraged by the acts of Bhārgava, i.e., Paraśurāma, and that they were in consequence known as Kāyasthas. In the Tripurāntakam inscription of Ambadēva, the origin of the family-name Kāyastha is explained as born of the body (kāya) of Druhiṇa (i.e., Brahmā). In this Kāyastha family was born Gaṅgaya-Sāhiṇi. His sister was Chandaladēvi who bore to Ambakṣmāpa two sons viz., Janārdana and Tripurāridēva. The latter's younger brother was Ambadēva who had captured the royal glory (sāmbhrā(mrā)jya-lakṣmī, l. 29) of Gurinḍāla-Gaṇādhipa a meteor to the Mālava king. The inscription further states that king Amba granted on the date specified in ll. 31-33, the village Mollakallūru alias Śivapura to the temple of god Mahāśvara (ll. 33-35). Then follow five imprecatory verses (ll. 36-38). The record was composed by Nammananandana who was dear to the goddess of speech. The Telugu portion repeats the date and adds the name of the donee as Mallināthayaṅgāru of Remḍrēvu residing at Tripurāntaka-kṣhētra. The gift was probably placed in his charge to be managed on behalf of the temple. At the end is added a verse in Sanskrit which seems to refer to the construction of a flight of steps at the eastern gateway of the temple, by Kumāra-kṣhitibhṛit (i.e., Kumāra Pratāparudra).

The details of date are given in ll. 31-33 and ll. 52-54 as :—Saka year (expressed both in chronogram and numerical figures), bhānu (12) and arkka (12) i.e., 1212, Vikṛita, Bhādrapada, ba.15, darśa, Tuesday, solar eclipse (dvādaś-ārḍh-ōparāgē). The eclipse probably covered twelve digits (ardha-kalā) of the Sun. These details regularly correspond to Tuesday, September 5, A.D. 1290 when the nakṣatra was Uttara-Phalgunī.

The inscription is important as it furnishes a specific relationship between Gaṇḍapeṇḍāra Gaṅgaya-Sāhiṇi the Cavalier of Kākatiya Gaṇapati and Gaṇḍapeṇḍāra Ambadēva which was not known hitherto. As stated above, Gaṅgaya-Sāhiṇi's sister Chandalāmbā or Chandaladēvi was married to Amba-kṣmāpa who was the father of Ambadēva. Since the record states that she bore to Amba two sons, viz., Jannigadēva and his younger brother Tripurāridēva it may be surmised that Ambadēva was probably born of a different mother. In the Tripurāntakam inscription mentioned above, the pedigree of Ambadēva is given as follows : In the Kāyastha family was born Gāṅgēya; after him came his sister's son¹ Janārdhana (udabhavat=ad-anu dvibhujō nṛipa[h] svasur=apatyam=amushya Janārdhana* ll. 8 f.), his younger brother Tripurāridēva and the latter's younger brother Ambadēva 'as Upendra was of Indra'. The names of the sister of Gāṅgēya-Sāhīni and her husband are furnished here for the first time. Rangachari² and Sewell³ have misunderstood the relationship between the several chiefs of the Kāyastha family and have thus given a wrong genealogy.

It may be noted that the Tripurāntakam inscription as well as the present record specify without ambiguity the connection between the four members of the family which put together stands as follows :—

The Kāyasthas were a powerful family of feudatory chiefs who played a prominent part in the politics of the mediæval period in the Telugu country. They started their career as cavaliers (Turaga-sādhnikas) under Kākatiya Gaṇapati and styled themselves as Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara, Maṇḍalika-Brahmarākshasa and Gaṇḍapeṇḍāra. Ambadēva the most powerful chief of the family assumed the epithet Ghaṇḍikōṭa-Manōrathapuravar-ādhiśvara and ruled from his capitals Vallūrupaṭṭaṇa and Ghaṇḍikōṭa the former of which is Vallūru near Cuddapah while the latter is the modern Ghaṇḍikōṭa in the Jammalmaḍugu Taluk of the Cuddapah District. In order to understand the extent of their power and territory, it is necessary to study their records critically, and to facilitate such a study, a classified statement of their principal dated records is given below specifying in each case the name of the overlord under whom the chief ruled :

Date.	Chief.	Overlord.	Provenance.
Śaka 1166 ⁴	Ambayyadēva	Gaṇapati	Satrasāla (Palnad Tk., Guntur Dt.).
Śaka 1172 ⁵	Gāṅgēya-Sāhīni	Do.	Tripurāntakam hill (Kurnool Dt.).
Śaka 1176-79 ⁶	Do.	Do.	Tripurāntakam hill (Kurnool Dt.). Gāṅgavaram (Cuddapah Dt.).

¹ Though the Tripurāntakam inscription contains the specific relationship namely 'sister's son' (svasur=apatyam) between Gāṅgēya-Sāhīni and Janārdhana it has been missed by all writers on the Kāyasthas who nevertheless proclaim that the inscriptions do not disclose the connection between them. From this tabular statement, it is apparent that a certain Ambayyadēva was the earliest member of the Kāyastha family who governed a portion of the Guntur District round about Satrasāla where his inscription was secured. Gāṅgēya-Sāhiṇi appears to have simultaneously held service under Ganapati in the Cuddapah District where his records are found. Both of them are given the epithet Dāmōdara-sainya-diśā-paṭṭa which is likewise adopted by the two successors, viz., Tripurāridēva and Ambadēva along with the other epithets which they actually earned by their exploits. Ambadēva, the younger brother of Tripurāri whose records range in date from Śaka 1194 to 1224, could not have held any administrative authority as early as Śaka 1166 which would otherwise invest him with the governorship of the territory for nearly 60 years which is far from likely. Further, this would lead to the contingency of assigning no period of rule to his elder brothers Janniga and Tripurāri who have, however, issued several records as governors under the Kākatiyas. It is therefore reasonable to think that Ambadēva of the Satrasāla inscription is an earlier member and different from the homonymous chief the younger brother of Tripurāridēva. The earlier Ambadēva may be identified with Ambakshmāpa mentioned in the present record as the father of the three brothers. Since the earliest reference to the defeat of Dāmōdara of the west is found in connection with both Ambadēva I and Gāṅgēya-Sāhiṇi, it is likely that both these officers had a share in the event.

Whether Ambakshmāpa's principality was confined to the Palnad Taluk of the Guntur District or extended as far south as the Cuddapah District where his son's inscriptions are discovered, there are no means to decide. But it is quite probable that Ambadēva I and Gāṅgēya-Sāhiṇi governed different parts of the Kākatiya kingdom separately and on the death of the latter apparently without issue, his territory passed to the nearest relative, viz., his brother-in-law Āmbadēva I or more probably the latter's son Janārddana. This would account for the tracing of Āmbadēva (II)'s genealogy from Gāṅgēya-Sāhiṇi who had, otherwise, no direct lineal connection with him. Thus from Janārddana's time the territory of the Kāyastha chiefs comprised a large area from Pānuṅgal to Mārajavāḍi or Kaivāra, i.e., from the Nalgonda District (Nizam's Dominions) to the Cuddapah District.¹ From the table given above it is clear that Janniga must have come to power some time after Śaka 1179 as Gāṅgēya-Sāhiṇi's latest inscription is dated in Śaka 1179 and held the governorship till Śaka 1192 which is the earliest date for Tripurāri. Tripurāri was succeeded by his younger brother Āmbadēva II in Śaka 1194, who continued to rule till at least Śaka 1224 in which year his Lēpāka inscription is dated.² It is significant that the Kārempūḍi and Nandalūr inscriptions of Jannigadēva bearing the Śaka date 1186 do not refer to the overlord whereas his earlier inscriptions of Śaka 1180-82 introduce him as a feudatory of Gaṇapati. The Durgi and Poṭlapāḍu inscriptions of Śaka 1191 and Śaka 1192 belonging respectively to Janniga and Tripurāri mention Rudramahādēvī as the reigning monarch. But Tripurāri's inscriptions of Śaka 1194 and almost all the records of Āmbadēva II from Śaka 1194 to Śaka 1224 are issued by the chiefs independently without acknowledging the suzerain power. This omission to mention the reigning monarch, if it signifies anything, may be taken to reflect the unsettled political conditions in the country due to weakness at the centre, particularly between Śaka 1182 and 1186 and Śaka 1192 and 1194. This is borne out by a study of the political events that happened at this period in the Telugu country. The most important document that furnishes many political synchronisms for the history of the period is the Tripurāntakam inscription of Āmbadēva-Mahārāja dated in Śaka 1212.³ It states about Āmbadēva that he (1) acquired the title of Rāyasahasramalla after defeating Śrīpati-Gaṇapati; (2) routed Kēśava joined by Sōmidēva and Allugaṅga; (3) vanquished Mallikārjuna who was a hater of Gods and Brāhmins; (4) gave his daughter in marriage to Rājanna son of king [Bō]lāya who had celebrated several sacrifices, together with the Nandanapura country (Nandalur) as dowry; (5) reinstated Manmagadagōpāla at Vikramasinhapura (Nellore) in his kingdom which he had lost; (6) captured the treasures of the Pāṇḍya princes; (7) defeated Dāmōḍara of the west; (8) took the head of Eruva-Mallidēva; (9) was honoured with rich presents by the king of Dēvagiri who was pleased at his valour; (10) destroyed Kāḍavarāya and (11) was helped by his friend king Parākramapāṇḍya with strong cavalry forces. Most of these exploits are confirmed by the contemporary epigraphical and literary evidences as shown in the sequel.

A record from Tāllaproduṭṭūr⁴ belonging to Jagatāpi Gaṅgeyadēvachōlamahārāju, son of Allugaṅga, and bearing Śaka date 1244 describes the chief as Gaṇḍapendūra-Gāṅgēya-Sāhiṇi-sarvasva-bandikūra, i.e., 'robber of Gāṅgēya-Sāhiṇi's wealth and as 'one who obtained the (regal) fortune by churning the ocean of Sērṇa (i.e., Yādava) army, indicating thereby that the Chief had rid himself of the Yādava domination by Śaka 1244. From an inscription⁵ at Nīlūru in the Gooty Taluk of the Anantapur District dated in Śaka 1137, it is learnt that Jagatāpi Daṇḍidēvachōlamahārāya probably an ancestor of the above chief was a subordinate of Yādava Simhapa. And Gaṅgēya-Sāhīni is stated in a record¹ of Śaka 1176 belonging to the reign of Kākatīya Gaṇapati, to have defeated a certain Rakkasa-Gaṅgarasa who may be the same person as the Rakkasa-Gaṅgarasa of the Jōti inscription² (Siddhant Taluk, Cuddapah District) dated in Śaka 1169. The Telugu poem Nīrvaṇānōllava-Rānāyaṇamu records that Gaṅgēya-Sāhīni who had been deprived of his kingdom by a certain Rakkasa-Gaṅgarasa evidently the above-mentioned chief, took refuge under Manma-Janapāla who restored the lost kingdom to his protégé by vanquishing Rakkasa-Gaṅga. This event must have occurred between Śaka 1169 and Śaka 1176. Allugaṅga who was probably connected with Rakkasa-Gaṅga in some unspecified way, as their names, their territory and the hostilities they both bore against Gaṅgēya-Sāhīni would indicate, must have taken vengeance against his opponent Gaṅgēya-Sāhīni, which was reciprocated by Ambadēva who as stated in his Tripurāntakam inscription, routed Allugaṅga and his allies. Thus for three generations the Kāyasthas ranged themselves against the Jagatāpi-chōlādēvamahārījas who appear to have rebelled against their overlords the Yādavas of Dēvagiri. It is likely that Gaṅgēya-Sāhīni and his relatives were the friends of the Sēvūna kings and that they suppressed the rebellion of the latter's subordinates who, however, ultimately became independent by Śaka 1244 when the Yādava power was on the wane. It must probably be with the help of Ambadēva during the governorship of Jannigadēva that Yādava Mahādēva wrested from Kākatīya Gaṇapati the honour of pañcama-mahāśabda as recorded in the introduction to Vratakhayḍa of Hēmādri³. We know that this event took place in about Śaka 1183 during the last days of Gaṇapati⁴. On the death of Gaṇapati the whole country was plunged in utmost disaster and chaos and the internal rebellion and the danger from the neighbouring powers were too much for the queen Paṭṭoddhātī Rudramahādēvi to cope with in the beginning of her reign. Accordingly several Telugu-Chōḍa chiefs such as Eruva-Manumilidēva, Vijayaṅgaḍagōpala and Siddayadēva-Chōḍa-Mahārāja are found issuing their inscriptions independently without referring to their overlord,⁵ in Śaka 1189, 1185 and 1189 respectively, i.e., within a few years after her accession to the throne. Soon, however, the Kākatīya queen appears to have consolidated her power and reduced the refractory chiefs to subjection. She must have first subjugated the Kāyastha chief Jannigadēva by about Śaka 1190; for he expresses his loyalty to the reigning monarch in his inscription of Śaka 1191. Thereafter, with the help of the Kāyastha chiefs of whom Ambadēva appears to have taken a prominent part, the turbulent officers were brought down on their knees since, in the Tripurāntakam inscription mentioned above, Ambadēva boasts of having taken, evidently on behalf of the Kākatīya ruler, the head of a certain Eruva-Manumilidēva who must be identical with the Telugu-Chōḍa chief Eruva-Mallidēva. Simultaneously with or shortly after this achievement, the defeat of Allugaṅga, Sōmidēva, Kōśava, Mallikārjuna, etc., ascribed to the chief in his records appears to have happened. Kādavarāya, i.e., Kōpperuñjīṅgadēva II (A.D. 1243-1279) who had been reduced to subordination by Kākatīya Gaṇapati as can be surmised from his Drākshārāma inscription in which he calls himself the executor of the commands of Gaṇapati-Mahārāja (Gaṇapati-Mahārājasy=ājñām pravartayatā)⁶, must have attempted to throw off his allegiance to the Kākatīya banner on the death of Gaṇapati. In fact he has caused to be engraved a highly pedantic inscription at Tripurāntakam in which he glorifies his past achievements including the numerous rich gifts he had made to the temple of Bhīmēśvara at Drākshārāma, without mentioning the Kākatiya overlord who was reigning at the time.¹ The record is unfortunately not dated. But it must be assigned to a date subsequent to Śaka 1184 in which year Kōpperuñjiṅgadēva figures apparently as a subordinate of a Kākatiya king.² The defeat of Kōpperuñjiṅga called here Kāḍavarāya must have been accomplished some time before Śaka 1201 the last year of the chief³ and after Śaka 1194 when Ambadēva succeeded to the chiefdom. Ambadēva's Tripurāntakam inscription of Śaka 1194 does not refer to any of his exploits mentioned above whereas his epigraphs dated Śaka 1207, 1212, 1213, etc., narrate them in detail. Ambadēva appears to have been puffed up with the signal victory he had gained over his powerful rival Kōpperuñjiṅgadēva, proclaimed himself as a quasi-independent chief and to have held that position till the very last year of his rule. It is, however, certain that he did not turn a rebel against the Kākatiyas or attempt to subvert their sovereignty. For a record from Malyāla⁴ in the Nandikotkur Taluk of the Kurnool District refers itself to the reign of the Kākatiya king Kumāra Rudra-Mahārāja in Śaka 1212 and 1213, thus marking the extent of the Kākatiya rule in the territory of the Kāyastha chiefs during the same period. Tripurāntakam (Kurnool District) and Nilagangavaram (Vinukonda Taluk, Guntur District) where Ambadēva's inscriptions are found, were situated within the Kākatiya dominions. It is therefore possible that though Ambadēva maintained a semi-independent status like the great Feudatory families of the Dekkan, i.e., the Western Gaṅgas, Bāṇas, etc., under the Rāshtrakūṭas, etc., in the mediæval period, the Kākatiya suzerainty was acknowledged in the territory of the Kāyasthas as shown above. In course of time, however, Ambadēva's power suffered heavily in consequence of which he appears to have been deprived of his principality, since an Upparapalle inscription⁵ of Rudradēva dated Śaka 1[2*]36, Pramādi, refers to the reduction of Ghaṇḍikōṭa by a subordinate of the king. Another fragmentary inscription⁶ in the same place, without date, states that the king appointed Goṅkaya-Redḍi, a servant of Juṭṭaya, to the governorship of Khaṇḍikōṭa and Mulikināṇḍu districts. This shows that Ambadēva had been subdued under the orders of the king and his territory annexed to the Kākatiya dominions some time before Śaka 1236. In one of the inscriptions⁷ at Kanāla, Nandyal Taluk of the Kurnool District, a chief (name completely damaged) is stated to be ruling over Mulkināṇḍu, Penamāpādi, Pottapināṇḍu, Poḍakallu and Nāntavāḍi under Pratāparudradēva-Mahārāja in Śaka 1230. We know that these nāḍus had been subject to the administration of Ambadēva⁸, but it is not definite whether Ambadēva continued to rule till Śaka 1230 or had been dispossessed of his territory by that year. But it can be affirmed that he had been either killed in the encounter or dislodged from Ghaṇḍikōṭa before Śaka 1236 as stated above.

No. 28.—BARGAON TEMPLE INSCRIPTION OF SABARA.

By Prof. V. V. Mirashi, M.A., Nagpur.

This inscription is incised on a broken stone slab which is still lying amidst the ruins of a temple to the north of Bargaon, a village situated at a distance of twenty-seven miles north by west of Murwārā, the chief town of the Murwārā tahsil of the Jubbulpore District, in the Central Provinces. The inscription does not seem to have been noticed by General Cunningham who visited Bargaon twice, during 1883-84 and 1884-85, and has given a fairly detailed description of the temples and mentioned three other records found there in his Archæological Survey of India Reports, Vol XXI, Part I, p. 161 and Part II, pp. 163-64. The present inscription was briefly noticed for the first time by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in his Inscriptions in the Central Provinces and Berar,⁷ but it has not been edited so far. It is edited here from good estampages supplied by the Superintendent of the Archaeological Survey, Central Circle, Patna.

The inscription is fragmentary. Nothing has of course been lost at the top, the bottom and the proper right side. But an indefinite number of letters have disappeared on the left side owing to the breaking away of the stone. The extant portion of the record is in a state of good preservation. It consists of five lines, of which the last, which begins at a distance of 2' from the proper right end, contains only three aksharas. The characters belong to the Nāgarī alphabet. As regards individual letters we may note that kh consists of two triangles joined by a horizontal line at the top; th shows a vertical stroke on the right; r exhibits two forms—one with a loop as in krīdara, l. 3 and the other without it in Sabara, l. 1. Rai Bahadur Hiralal conjecturally referred the characters of this inscription to the 8th or 9th century A. D., but they appear to be somewhat later and may be of the 10th century A. D.

The language is Sanskrit. The record is written in prose throughout. It is written incorrectly and contains some mistakes of sandhi (as in atō arthē for atō=rthē in l. 4) and of gender (as in śapath-ēdam for śapathō=yaṁ in the same line). The only orthographical peculiarity that calls for notice is that b is throughout denoted by the sign for v, see Śavara and Valādhikṛita, both in l. 1 and vrahma-stamva in l. 2.

The record opens with Om namaḥ and refers to a commander of the army (Balādhikṛita) of Śabara. His name which is partly mutilated appears to be Śiva. The object of the inscription seems to be to record the gift of a cess on the threshing floor together with a granary to some ascetic residing at the temple in the settlement of Brāhmaṇas for the benefit of (the god) Śaṅkara-nārāyaṇa, to whose temple the inscribed stone was apparently affixed. The record ends with the imprecation that whoever would offend against it would incur the sin of the slaughter of a Brāhmaṇa.

The preserved portion of the inscription contains no date, but, as stated above, it can, on paleographic evidence, be referred to the 10th century A.D. The illustrious Śabara mentioned here is perhaps identical with the Śabara, named Siṃha, mentioned in a fragmentary stone inscription found at Bhilsā, to which Dr. F. E. Hall has called attention in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. XXXI, p. 111, n. 2. The latter inscription states that Vāchaspati of the Kaundīnya gōtra, who was a minister of the king Kṛishṇa after defeating the lord of Chēdi and slaying a Śabara named Siṃha placed the kings of the Rālā-maṇḍala and Rōdapādi on the throne and repaired to the temple of Bhāillasvāmin evidently at Bhilsā where he composed a stōtra in praise of the god.¹ From the mention of the lord of Chēdi and the Śabara chief Siṃha together in the same line, Dr. Hall conjectured that the latter was the Chedian generalissimo. The Śabara of the present inscription, too, was no doubt subject to the contemporary Chēdi or Kalachuri king, for a much defaced inscription at Bargaon to which General Cunningham has drawn attention² refers to a Kalachuri king or kings. But as the present inscription mentions a commander of the forces of this Śabara himself, it seems that he was a feudatory chief and not a mere generalissimo of the Chēdi king. This fragmentary inscription at Bhilsā is also undated, but the date of the king Kṛishṇa, whose minister was Vāchaspati, can be approximately fixed on other evidence. At Maser, a village about twenty-five miles north of Bhilsā, Mr. M. B. Garde, Director of Archaeology,

Gwalior State, discovered in 1930 a fragmentary inscription in two pieces.¹ It mentions one Narasiṃha of the Śulki (or Chālukya) family, who at the command of Kṛishṇarāja initiated the wives of Kalachuri kings into widowhood. As Kēsari, the son of Narasiṃha, was, according to the inscription, appointed Tantrādhipa (Minister for home affairs) by Vākpati-Muñja (circa A.D. 972 to 995), Kṛishṇarāja can be placed about A. D. 950. This conclusion is corroborated by the date V. 1039 (A. D. 982) of a pilgrim record which Mr. Garde has discovered on a pillar of a dilapidated mediæval temple at Maser. This record states the name of the god installed in the temple as Kṛishṇēśvara.² The god was evidently so named after a king named Kṛishṇa who consequently must have flourished before A. D. 982. There is another piece of evidence which corroborates the above-mentioned date for Kṛishṇa. This Kṛishṇa is probably identical with Kṛishṇapa of the Chandēlla family, a son of Yaśovarman, mentioned in four out of six stone inscriptions³ at Dudahi, in the Lalitpur District, about 75 miles north by east of Bhilsā. According to both General Cunningham and Dr. Kielhorn this Yaśovarman is the well-known Chandēlla king of that name, the father of Dhaṅga for whom we have dates ranging from A. D. 954 to A. D. 1002. Kṛishṇapa may, therefore, be referred to the period A.D. 960-85. From the Khajurāho inscription of Dhaṅga, dated V. 1011, we learn that the Chandēlla kingdom in the beginning of his reign extended to Bhāsvat or Bhilsā in the south.⁴ It seems, therefore, that Dhaṅga placed his brother Kṛishṇa or Kṛishṇapa in charge of the south-western portion of the Chandēlla kingdom extending at least from Dudahi in the north to Bhilsā in the south.

If the identification of the illustrious Śabara of the present inscription with the Śabara chief slain by Kṛishṇarāja's minister is accepted, the Śabara chief can be referred to the third quarter of the 10th century A. D. The Kalachuri suzerain to whom he owed allegiance was probably Śaṅkaraṅga. The name of the god Śaṅkaranārāyaṇa appears somewhat curious.⁵ It seems to suggest that the temple was dedicated to Nārāyaṇa installed by Śaṅkara, who is probably identical with the Kalachuri prince of that name mentioned in the Kāritālāi stone inscription of Lakshmaṇarāja II.⁶ It is noteworthy in this connection that he is called a parama-taishṇava or devout worshipper of Viṣṇu in that record.

No. 29.—JIRJINGI PLATES OF GANGA INDRAVARMAN: THE YEAR 39.

By R. K. GHOSHAI, M.A., CALCUTTA.

The plates which bear the subjoined inscription were turned up along with pieces of old pottery in course of excavation of an old temple in the village of Jirjingi near Tekkali in the Ganjām District of the Madras Presidency. They were secured by Sir A. P. Patro, Kt., who made them over to Mr. R. Subba Rao of the Andhra Historical Research Society of Rajahmundry. Mr. Rao subsequently published them in the Society's Journal.* In view of the great importance justly attached to this record for the early history of the Gaṅga kings of Orissa, and considering its rather inadequate treatment by Mr. Rao, I re-edit the inscription from excellent ink-impressions kindly supplied by Dr. N. P. Chakravarti, the Government Epigraphist for India.

These are three plates of copper, each measuring $8\frac{1}{4}$ " by 3". Towards the proper right end of each plate, there is a hole through which passed a ring, 3" in diameter, the ends of which, however, remain un-soldered, owing to the fact that the seal which must have been fixed to this ring is missing. The weight of the plates is $56\frac{1}{2}$ tolas, and that of the ring $12\frac{1}{2}$ tolas, making a total of 69 tolas. The edges of the plates are slightly raised into rims so as to protect the inscription. The first and the third plates have writing on their inner faces only, while the second one is inscribed on both sides. The plates are in a state of perfect preservation and the engraving is clear throughout. The first and third plates, which are inscribed on one side only, have seven lines of writing apiece, while the second one contains six lines on each of its sides,—thus twenty-six lines in all. The height of the letters is about $\frac{1}{3}$ " on the average.

⁸ J. A. H. R. S., Vol. III, pp. 49 ff. Also noticed in the An. Rep. on South Indian Epigraphy for 1935-36 (C. P. No. 9).

The characters belong to the southern class of alphabets and have resemblance to those used in the Gōdāvarī plates of Prithivimūla,¹ Gōkāk Plates of Dējja-Mahārāja,² the Srungavara-pukōṭa³ and Siripuram⁴ plates of Anantavarman, king of Kālīṅga.

The script of the Jirjīngi plates has further some obvious resemblance to that employed in some of the early inscriptions from Cambodia.

The inscription under discussion furnishes examples of initial a in lines 1, 4, 8, 14 and 22 and of initial ā in l. 24 as well as of final m (ll. 18 and 21) and t (l. 25), which are so indicated by their smaller size. The northern form of l is employed in -sakala- (l. 1) and -latā- (l. 8).

The numerical symbols for 1, 9, 20 and 30 are contained in the date in line 25.

The language is Sanskrit. With the exception of two of the customary verses at the end, the whole of the record is in prose.

Among orthographical peculiarities deserving notice are (1) the use of the jihvāmūliya in l. 21; (2) the use of the guttural nasal in place of anusvāra in -nistrīṇṣa (l. 5); (3) the doubling of dh and the change of the first dh into d in -ānuddhyātas- (l. 10); (4) the doubling throughout of a consonant after r; (5) the occasional doubling of a consonant before r, as in sagōtrāya (l. 13). In Taittirīya (l. 13) the doubling of the first letter is ungrammatical. Both ḷ and v are indicated by the sign for the latter, exceptions being saṃ(sa)mbaddha (l. 11) and kuṭumbina[s=]* (l. 12). The rules of sandhi have not been observed in a few cases.

The object of the inscription is to record a grant, which is non-sectarian in character, by Mahārāja Indravarman, Lord of Trikalīṅga, 'a sun in the firmament of the spotless family of the Gaṅgas'. The grant is issued from the city of Dantapura and concerns the village of Jijjika situated in the Vōṅkhara-bhōga, which is given away as an agrahāra, in equal shares, to Agnisvāmin, son of Rudrasvāmin, and the former's (i.e., Agnisvāmin's) son Rudrasvāmin, who belonged to the Viṣṇuviddha gōtra and the Taittirīya śākhā.

The date is given, in figures only, as in the Year 39 on the 21st day of the month of Vaiśākha. The year in all probability refers itself to the Gāṅga era. The present record, therefore, may be considered as the earliest inscription of the Eastern Gāṅga kings discovered so far.⁵

There has been lately some discussion over the question of identity and antecedence of Indravarman, Lord of Trikalīṅga, of the present record. Mr. R. Subba Rao identifies⁶ the donor of this grant with Adhirāja Indra, who, as recorded in the Gōdāvarī plates of Prithivimūla, is said to have overthrown in battle one Indrabhaṭṭāraka¹. This latter potentate has been equated by Dr. J. F. Fleet² with the Eastern Chālukya king of the same name who was the younger brother of Jayasimha I and father of Vishnuvardhana II: while according to Drs. Kielhorn³ and Jouveau-Dubreuil,⁴ Indrabhaṭṭāraka should rather belong to the Vishnukunḍin dynasty. We along with Mr. Subba Rao⁵ are inclined provisionally to subscribe to this latter view.

It seems that the Vishnukunḍins being hard pressed by the Eastern Chālukya kings pushed further northward from their original home in the Kistnā district⁶ of the Madras presidency. Their chief opponents in this direction were the Gaṅga kings of Kālīṅga who had then only recently eked out an independent principality in and about the Ganjām district. The two contending armies seem to have met each other in the heart of the delta of the Gōdāvarī, possibly somewhere near the modern town of Rajahmundry. As has been claimed in the Gōdāvarī plates, victory rested for the time being with the Kālīṅga forces. And it is quite probable that Indravarma returned in triumph to his capital at Dantapura. The victory over the Vishnukunḍins further prompted him to assume the (then rather anomalous) title of 'Lord of Trikaṅga' (Trikalīṅgādhipati), seeing that his hold over the three contiguous districts of Gōdāvarī, Vizagapatam and Ganjām⁷ now became practically undisputed. To this victory may also be attributed his description in our inscription as 'the thousand-rayed (sun) in the firmament of the spotless family of the Gaṅgas'. Indeed, the might of Indravarma may be said to have dispelled the threatening clouds of a dangerous foreign offensive.

At this point it becomes necessary for us to take into consideration a number of kings whose records should be placed on palaeographical grounds in the period A.D. 400-500, roughly indicating the interval between the southern campaign of Samudragupta and the rise of the Eastern Gaṅga dynasty. These are Anantavarman of the Srungavarapukōṭa⁸ and Siripuram⁹ plates, Śaktivarman of the Rāgōlu plates,¹⁰ Umavarman of the Brihatprōshthā¹¹, Dhavalapūṭa¹² and Tekkali¹³ plates, Chaṇḍavarman of the Kōmarti¹⁴ and Tirittihāṇa¹⁵ plates, Ananta-Śaktivarman

⁴ Ancient History of the Deccan, pp. 76 and 91.

⁵ In an earlier study (J. A. H. R. S., Vol. II, p. 159), Mr. Subba Rao held that Adhirāja Indra of the Gōdāvarī plates should be identified with Indravarma of the Achyutapuram (above, Vol. III, pp. 128 ff.) and Parli-Kimeḍi (Ind. Ant., Vol. XVI, pp. 131 ff.) plates. Dr. Fleet, on the other hand, was inclined to identify Adhirāja Indra with the Indravarma of the Chiencole plates of the Years 128 and 146 (Ind. Ant., Vol. XIII, pp. 120 ff.).

of the Madras Museum plates, Nanda¹-Prabhāñjanavarman of the Chicaole plates² and Viśākha-varman of the Kōrōshandā plates.³

All of these potentates, with the exception of Viśākha-varman,⁴ call themselves 'kings of Kalinga' (Kalingādhipati). It is probable that these kings rose into prominence in the period following the withdrawal of the arms of Samudragupta from the south.⁵ After him the Guptas never actively interested themselves in South Indian politics, thus affording ample opportunity for these chiefs, as they originally were, to raise their heads and assume regal distinctions. Naturally, as some of them were living contemporaneously with others, they fought vehemently among themselves for control of the territory now covered by the districts of Gōdāvarī and Vizagapatam. Their objective, at least that of some of them, was perhaps the Orissa littoral, pushing through the districts of Ganjām and Puri right up to the outskirts of Balasore⁶ and beyond that the important port of Tāmraliptī on the Bay of Bengal. This was the period which coincided with the gradual rise to power of the Eastern Gāṅgas under the capable leadership of Indravarman. It is not yet possible, in the absence of more substantial details of historical value, to make out the relation, if there were any, in which all these early 'kings' stood to one another. While some of them like Śaktivarman, Umavarman and Viśākha-varman may have flourished⁷ before the time of Indravarman, it is probable that others like Anantavarman and Nanda-

² Ind. Ant., Vol. XIII, pp. 48 ff. Here we may in passing be permitted to dwell a little on the significance of the prefix 'Nanda' coming before the name of this king. Dr. D. C. Sircar's suggestion (Journ. Dept. of Letters, Calcutta University, Vol. XXVI, p. 66, f. n. 2) that it denotes "Prabhāñjanavarman of the Nanda family" seems to be somewhat speculative as it is without a parallel in the early history of Kalinga. A simpler and more reasonable explanation would be that 'Nanda' is here used as an honorific adjective (qualifying Prabhāñjanavarman) in the sense of 'one who pleases everybody'. In fact, another variant of the same word, 'Nandaka', has the significant meaning of 'one who gladdens one's family' (cf. V. S. Apte, The Practical Sanskrit-English Dictionary, 2nd ed., Bombay, 1912, p. 535). The names of some of the early Pallava kings like Śiva-Skandavarman, Vijaya-Skandavarman, etc., could be cited (as suggested by Dr. Sircar in Successors of the Śālavāhanas in Lower Deccan, pp. 166-67) as parallel instances of such honorific prefixes being in common use in South India from an early time.

³ Above, Vol. XXI, pp. 23 ff.

Prabhañjanavarman lived contemporaneously with Indravarmān. It is even possible that the latter was originally a petty chief of no political position, wielding his influence over a small stretch of territory in the Gōdāvarī valley. In course of time he collected a large following, with whose help he set forth to carve out an independent realm for himself. The Ganjām district conveniently abutting on the Orissan frontier and affording avenues for further northward expansion, satisfactorily answered his expectations. And while yet endeavouring to build up the nucleus of a future empire, disquieting news reached him of elashing of steel at his rear in the Gōdāvarī valley. In all haste, Indravarmān prepared and launched an offensive, and, ultimately, after what must have been quite a number of fierce engagements, succeeded in maintaining his hold over the Gōdāvarī and Vizagapatam districts, while improving and fortifying his base in the Ganjām district.

Unfortunately, the material at our disposal does not permit us yet to develop in fuller details the reconstruction of the history of the rise of the Eastern Gaṅga power. What we have contented ourselves with doing is to suggest the broad outlines of a story which after all may not be quite out of tune with those hectic days in the history of Kālīṅga. At least, and it appears to lend some force of conviction to our line of argument, it would explain the claim, though somewhat conventionalised in form, of Indravarmān in our present record (ll. 4-7) to have subdued in more than one battle many 'chiefs' by his own prowess. It does not seem to be an empty pandering to the vanities of a disillusioned patron by his scribe. No other epithet could describe the feat of this valiant soldier more aptly.

Of the localities mentioned, Dantapura is referred to for the first time in this record. It occurs next in the Purlē plates¹ of Indravarmān (year 149). The place had a Buddhist association in that the left canine tooth of the lower jaw of the Buddha is said to have been brought over there by one of the Master's disciples and a stūpa built over it. Subsequently, it was taken away to Ceylon. A verse preserved in the Dīgha Nikāya, and incorrectly reproduced in the Mahāvastu, speaks of Dantapura as the capital of the Kālīṅgas.² It is also mentioned as such in the Mahāgovinda-sūttanta.³ The Jātakas refer several times⁴ to this city, which fact doubtlessly establishes its antiquity. Many suggestions have been advanced in regard to the identification of this ancient city. Sir Alexander Cunningham⁵ located it at modern Rajahmundry on the Gōdāvarī. Mr. Ramdas⁶ places it in the neighbourhood of Chicacole. Professor Sylvain Lévi identified this Dantapura with the Paloura of Ptolemy⁷ and was inclined to seek for it somewhere near modern Chicacole.⁸ Mr. N. L. Dey, on the other hand, suggested⁹ its identification with modern Dāntan on the river Kāsāi in the Midnapur district of Bengal. According to Mr. R. Subba Rao,¹⁰ Dantapura may be looked for in "the ruins of the fort of the same name, situated on the southern bank of the river Varṇasādhara, three miles from Chicacole Road Station" of the Bengal-Nagpur Railway. According to another view,¹¹ "the place must be near the Chilkā Lake and the old route from Mahud". Pandit Nilakantha Das, finally, believes that "Dantapur is undoubtedly the present Puri of Jagannath".¹

A like divergence of opinion prevails over the question of connotation of the geographical expression Trikaliṅga. According to Mr. R. D. Banerji², Trikaliṅga comprised within it the tracts of country anciently known as Kaliṅga, Tōsala and Utkala; while Dr. R. G. Basak believes³ that it included Udra (Orissa proper), Kōṅgōda and Kaliṅga. Mr. G. Ramdas lastly holds that Trikaliṅga denoted "the highlands intervening between the coast (sic) strip called Kaliṅga and the Dakṣiṇa-Kōsala or the modern Chatargarh (sic)".⁴

The village of Jijjika which was given away, is evidently, as already suggested by Mr. Subba Rao,⁵ the same as the modern village of Jirjingi, the find-spot of our record, in the Tekkali Zemindary of the Ganjam district. The Vōṅkhara-bhōga, in which the village granted was situated, I am unable to identify.

The date of the record is given as the 21st day of Vaiśākha of the year 39 of the prosperous reign [of the Gaṅgas]. The epoch of this era being still unsettled, it is hazardous to attempt at any sure estimation of its correct age. Failing all other help, we are constrained to fall back on the solitary evidence of the palaeography of the record under discussion. Taking all things into consideration and leaving a reasonable margin on either side, we would refer this record to the period 475-550 A.D.

TRANSLATION.

(L. 1) Ōm Hail !

From the beautiful (city of) Dantapura, which vies with Amarāvati (the city of gods), the glorious Mahārāja Indravarman, Lord of Trikaliṅga—who has had all his sins removed by dint of his accumulation of religious merit obtained through his constantly doing obeisance to Śiva who is the cause of creation, preservation and destruction of the entire world ; who is a sun in the firmament of the spotless family of the Gaṅgas ; who has his pair of feet made tawny-coloured by their contact with the lustre of brilliant rubies infixed to the crowns of all the sāmanta-nṛipatis and *maṇḍalādhipatis*⁵ whom he had subdued by his stainless and unsheathed sword while winning many a battle of four-tusked⁶ (elephants) ; who has his friends, the virtuous, relatives

³ Metre Anushtubh ; and in the following verse.

⁵ Read mahārājasya.

⁷ Chaturdanta signifies, traditionally, the far-famed mount of Indra, viz., Airāvata. [See above, Vol. XXII, p. 178. n. 4.—Ed.]

and supplicants enjoying comfort under the shade of an arbour, as it were, of his enormous wealth obtained by his unequalled might and exertion; who is devoted to the feet of his parents—issues (the following) order to all the assembled householders of the village of Jijjika belonging to the Vōñkhara-bhōga¹ :—

(L. 12) “ We have granted this village, in two equal shares,—after making it an agrahāra which is to last as long as the ocean, the mountain, the moon, the stars and the sun, and freeing it from all impositions, for the increase of Our own religious merit, life, fame and strength as well as for the acquisition of religious merit of Our parents—to Agnisvāmin, son of Rudrasvāmin and to his (Agnisvāmin's) son Rudrasvāmin, who belong to the Vishṇuvṛiddha gōtra and are religious students of the Taittirīya śākhā.

“ Therefore, you should abide by this (order) according to usages obtaining heretofore.

“ I also exhort the future kings :—‘ Even having obtained possession of the entire world by means of right, inheritance, or conquest, while ruling on this earth, they should always preserve this gift.’

“And there are also two verses :

(Verse 1)—O Yudhishtira ! Most excellent among the possessors of land ! diligently preserve (a gift of) land given by yourself or given by somebody else. Maintenance (of a donation) is more meritorious than donation (itself).

(Verse 2)—A donor of land enjoys himself in heaven for sixty thousand years. A confiscator (thereof) and one who consents (to the confiscation) remain in hell for the same number of years.”

(L. 25) The increasing Year 30 9 ; the day 20 1 of (the month of) Vaiśākha.

(L. 26) This has been written by the king's *Sādhivigrahika*² Dēvasīmhadēva..

² Dr. A. C. Burnell quotes (Elements of South Indian Palaeography, 1st ed., Mangalore, 1874, pp. 64-66) passages from old texts like the Yājñavalkya Dharmaśāstra, the Mātṛksharā, the Smṛitichandrikā, etc., to show that common usage required that the Sādhivigrahika, among other officials of the same rank, should be entrusted with the task of drafting a royal grant (rājāśāna).

No. 30.—POONA PLATES OF CHALUKYA VINAYADITYA ; SAKA 612.

By MADHO SARUP VATS, M.A.

This grant, consisting of three copper-plates each measuring $9\frac{3}{4} \times 4$ in. and held together by a big ring, was purchased by me in 1936 at Poona as Superintendent of the Western Circle. To the ring, which is $3\frac{3}{4}$ in. in diameter, is affixed a projecting seal, somewhat oval ($1\frac{1}{4} \times 1\frac{1}{8}$ in.), of which the countersunk surface is relieved with the figure of the boar (incarnation of Vishnu) as is usually found on grants of the Western Chalukyas of Badāmi. The seal is however without any legend. The weight of the three plates together with the ring and the seal is about 3 lbs. and 14 oz.

The first and the third plates, as is usual with such grants, are inscribed on the inner face only and the second or the middle one on both. The inscription, which I have edited from the original plates, is in an excellent state of preservation and consists of 35 lines of writing, i.e., nine on each face except the last one which has only eight lines. The orthography is generally regular, though in a few places the rules of sandhi are not observed, e.g., in Vishṇōḥ Vārāham (l. 1), °smābhik dvādaś (l. 23). It is wrongly observed in bālinḍu (l. 18). A consonant followed or preceded by r is generally doubled as in kshēbhīt-ārṇṇava (l. 1), varttamānē (l. 24), paurṇṇamāsyām (l. 25), etc., and in sagṭtrāṇām (l. 2), puttrāṇām (l. 3), pavitrīkṛita-gātrasya (l. 6), mātra (l. 11), etc.

Except the grantee, the property granted and the date, the present record agrees very closely with the published grants of the Chalukya sovereign Vinayāditya.¹ It opens with the stereotyped description of the Chalukya family in which Pulakēśin I, Kīrtivarman, Satyāśraya (Pulakēśin II), Vikramāditya and Vinayāditya Satyāśraya ruled as direct descendants. When Vinayāditya was encamped at the village Mañchōha,² which is probably no other than Manehhar in the Poona district on the road to Nāsik, he issued the grant at the request of his queen on the full moon day of Vaiśākha, Śaka year 612 expired, corresponding to his 10th³ regnal year in favour of two Brāhmaṇas named Durgasārman and Raviśārman of the Kāśyapa gōtra⁴. This date corresponds to Friday, 29th April 690 A.D. The property granted consisted of a field measuring 50 nivartanas of land in the village of Tōravē, presumably the same as the modern village Torveh in the Bijāpur District. The record closes with the name of its writer Śrī-Rāmapuṇyavallabha, the high minister of peace and war who is mentioned in all other grants of the king.

As several inscriptions of dates earlier and later than that of the present grant have already been found, this record adds very little to our knowledge of the history of the Chalukya family.

⁴ [The gift was made kanyā-dharm-ārthan which I take in the sense of kanyā-dāna-dharm-ārthan, i.e., 'for the merit accruing from the gift of a girl (in marriage)'. Apparently the girls were given in marriage to the two Brahmin donces by the queen. The 'gift of a girl' to a learned Brahmin entails great merit and according to Dharmaśāstras this should be accompanied by grant of lands among other gifts. See Hēmadri, Chaturvarga-chintāmaṇi, Dānakhaṇḍa, Pt. II (ed. S. A. Deekshita, Benares), pp. 649-50.—Ed.]

No. 31.—ANJANERI PLATES OF GURJARA JAYABHATA III; K. 461.

By MADHO SARUP VATS, M.A., AND D. B. DISKALKAR, M.A.

This grant consists of two plates which are held together by two copper-rings, one of which has an oval seal containing the letters śrī-Jayabhāṭa embossed below a peculiar symbol resembling a flying Garuḍa. They were found with a Marāṭhā family surnamed Shid of Anjaneri village in the Nāsik District along with two copper-plate grants of Prithivīchandra Bhōgasakti, dealt with above¹, and measure $12\frac{7}{8}'' \times 9\frac{3}{4}''$. The first plate contains 18 lines of writing and the second 21.

The characters belong to the southern variety and closely resemble those of the Nausāri² and Kāvī³ plates of Jayabhāṭa III and IV issued in the years 456 and 486 respectively. With the exception of the attestation in the last line, its paleography is similar to that of the Chalukya and Rāshtrakūṭa grants of the seventh century A.D. found in Gujarāt. The characters in the attestation are cursive and differ from the rest of the inscription. Often a dot has been used in the record to denote a mark of punctuation.

The record is dated the 11th day of the dark half of Āśvina, Tulā-sañkrānti, (Kaṣachūri) Samvat 461 corresponding to A.D. 709-10⁴ and was issued from Bharukachchha (Broach). The introductory portion, containing the description of the family of Jayabhāṭa, agrees with that given in the two grants mentioned above. The genealogy starts with Dadda (II) who was born in the lineage of Mahārāja Karna and who protected the lord of Valabhī who was defeated by Harshadēva (identified with Dharasēna IV who suffered defeat at the hands of Harshavardhana of Kanauj). His son was Jayabhāṭa (II) and his son Dadda (III)-Bāhusahāya. The latter's son was Jayabhāṭa (III), the donor, who was a great devotee of Mahēśvara and had obtained the five great sounds (samadhigata-pañcha-mahāśabda).

The beneficiary in the present grant was a Brāhmaṇa named Nārāyaṇa son of Vasuvāmin of Dābhilya gōtra and Chhandōga-Kauthuma śākhā and a resident of Brahmapurī.

The property granted consisted of three pieces of land totalling 60 nivartanas in and around the village Tauranaka⁵ situated in the Nāndīpura Vishaya: the first measuring 52 nivartanas, the second 5 nivartanas and the third 3 nivartanas.

The importance of this grant lies in the fact that it extends the date of Jayabhāṭa III from the year 456 of the Nausāri plates to the year 461.

The grant mentions certain places situated in the Nāndīpura vishaya which has already been identified with Nandod situated on the Karjan river in the Rajapipla State. The places mentioned are the villages of Tauranaka, Jayapura, Vidvēraka and Bhūtishohī⁶ and the river Karillini: Tauranaka,⁵ in and around which were situated the three plots of land granted, seems to be the modern Toran (also called Toranmal) on the Karjan river which seems to be the river Karillini of our grant situated about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north of Nandod. It is possible that Jayapura is the same as modern Jitpur, 6 miles east of Nandod and about 8 miles south-east of Toran or Tauranaka of the grant. Bhūtishohī⁶ and Vidvēraka, however, cannot be identified but should not be far away

³ Ibid., Vol. V, pp. 113 ff. Professor Mirashi has since proved that this grant is referable to Jayabhāṭa IV, cf. above, Vol. XXIV, pp. 176 ff.

⁴ [The date would correspond to Tuesday, 23rd September A.D. 710, when the sun seems to have entered the Tulā-rāśi.—Ed.]

from the neighbourhood of Nandod.¹ It is interesting to note that the present topography of the place agrees fairly closely with the description given in the grant.

TRANSLATION.

(L. 1.) Om. Hail! From the illustrious Bharukachchha :—

(Ll. 1-15) [Common to Gurjara grants. See Ind. Ant., Vol. XIII, pp. 79-80.]

(Ll. 15-30) Today on the 11th day of the dark fortnight of the month of Āśvayuja while the sun was in the Tulā Saṅkrānti, I have given with libation of water to the Brāhmaṇa Nārāyaṇa, son of the Brāhmaṇa Vasusvāmīn, resident of Brahmapurī, of the Chāturvidya community and Dābhilya gōtra, a student of Chhandōga-Kaushuma (śākhā) for the performance of the five mahāyajñas, viz., bali, charu, vaiśvadeva, agnihōtra and atithi, a piece of land measuring 52 nivartanas in the north-east of the village Tauranaka² included in the Nāndīpura riṣaya, bounded on the east by the path leading to Jayapura village and the pond adjoining the Hastinikā streamlet, on the south by the proprietary field belonging to the householder Dīpa, which is comprised in the marsh indicated by the Chhūdāmī tree, and also by the streamlet rising from the fringe of the marsh and flowing southwards; in the west by the path leading from the village Tauranaka to the village Vīdvēraka, and the Amīra (?) tree as well as the streamlet flowing into the Dhammāna stream; and in the north by the Dhammāna stream—this piece of land thus bounded on all the four sides; and a plot of land measuring five nivartanas in the marshy tract to the south of the same village (Tauranaka) bounded on the east by the proprietary field of the householder Rāvalla included within the limits of Baradaka; on the south by the Karillīnī river; on the west by the proprietary field belonging to the householder Vijadharna comprised within the limits of Baradaka marked by Laggustu (?), and on the north by the donated land belonging to the Brāhmaṇa Dāmādara and by the royal pasture land—the land thus bounded on all four sides; and (lastly) another plot of land measuring 3 nivartanas in the marshy area alongside the embankment and situated to the south of this plot of land, bounded on the east and south by the Karillīnī river; on the west by the boundary line leading to the village Bhūtishōhī; and on the north by the ritāṭī (?) of the Karillīnī river marked by the Kaulla tree—these plots of land with the boundaries detailed above and measuring in all sixty nivartanas together with the uparikara, bhūta, vāta, pratyāya, etc.

(Ll. 27-38) [Are common with the published Gurjara grants, especially the Nausūri plates. See Ind. Ant., Vol. XIII, pp. 80-81.]

(Ll. 38-39) Written by the army chief Sahabhāṭa son of the army chief Durgabhāṭa. The army chief Bāvulla (acted as) the Dūtaka. Recorded in the year 461, 11th day of the dark fortnight of Āśvayuja. This is the sign manual of myself—the illustrious Jayabhāṭa.

No. 32—THE PUNJAI INSCRIPTION OF KRISHNADEVARAYA.

BY PROF. K. A. NILAKANTA SASTRI, MADRAS.

This epigraph (No. 184 of 1925 of the Madras Epigraphical Collection) is a copy of an order issued by king Kṛṣṇadēvarāya of Vijayanagara while he was camping on the banks of the river Kṛṣṇavēṇī some time after his conquest of the Kaliṅga country. So far copies of this order have been found engraved in twenty different places in the Chōlamanḍalam which formed part of the Vijayanagara empire and to which the order relates. These places are : Śēdamaṅgalam,¹ Tirṭhanagari,² Elavānāsūr,³ *Neyvaṇai*⁴ (S. Arcot District), Tiruviśalūr,⁵ Tirukkaṇḍiśvaram,⁶ Perumuḷai,⁷ Korukkai,⁸ Tirunagiri,⁹ Paraśalūr,¹⁰ Puñjai,¹¹ Ākkūr,¹² Tillaiyāḍi,¹³ Tirukkaḍaiyūr,¹⁴ Śendalai,¹⁵ Iluppappaṭṭu,¹⁶ Talaiṇāyar,¹⁷ *Tirumaṅgalakkuḍi*¹⁸ (Tanjore District), Tiruppalātturai,¹⁹ and *Kaṇṇanūr*²⁰ (Trichinopoly District). Though they are all copies of the same royal order, certain variations are found in them not only in the details of the order but also in their record of the achievements of the king.

The inscription is edited with the aid of the impressions and transcripts of all its copies kindly placed at my disposal by Mr. C. R. Krishnamachari, Superintendent for Epigraphy, Madras. Mr. T. V. Mahalingam, M.A., rendered much invaluable assistance in collating the numerous copies and preparing the text and translation of the record, in the verification of the geographical data, and in many other ways.

The script of all the copies is in mixed Grantha and Tamil, and Sanskrit words are often transliterated into Tamil. The language is Tamil; there are however two Sanskrit verses, one at the beginning and the other at the end. The engraving of the inscription appears to have been the work of persons of mediocre ability, and hence many mistakes are found in each copy. The defective nature of these inscriptions is, for instance, in striking contrast with the excellence of workmanship found in the Chōla inscriptions from the same area. Of the twenty copies of the epigraph only four are complete, those found at Paraśalūr, Puñjai, Ākkūr and Tillaiyāḍi; and the chief variations among these have been noticed in the footnotes to the text.

The inscription opens with an invocation to Gaṇapati and Śiva, and records the date and the purpose of the royal order together with the titles of the king; it then gives an account of the conquests of Kṛṣṇadēvarāya in the eastern country till the date of the record, and states that the king while he was halting on the banks of the Kṛṣṇavēṇī in Śaka 1439 (A.D. 1517), remitted 10,000 varāḥan (gold pieces) in favour of the Śiva and Vishṇu temples in the Chōlamanḍalam. The remission comprised the ducs called jōḍi and araṣupēru; other copies mention in addition, one or more of the following : śūlavari, nilavali and marrum pala piṇavarigaḷum.²¹

There is a like difference among the copies in the number and names of the temples enumerated as the beneficiaries of the remission, only a few (like the one that is being edited) mentioning almost all the places. Generally each of the copies mentions the place where it is found and a few others. Hence to draw a list of all the places in favour of which the remission was made, a comparative study of all the copies is essential. Here the four complete copies have been closely compared for being edited while the others have been referred to wherever necessary. The full list obtained is given further down.

The inscription is of more than ordinary interest to the student of Vijayanagara history. Firstly, it gives a detailed list of the conquests of Krishṇadēvarāya in the Telugu country up to the date of the record though it does not state the dates of the different campaigns and conquests. Secondly, on account of the use made of this record by H. Krishna Sastri, it has a bearing on the identification of "Catuir" of Nuniz, a difficult problem for which no satisfactory solution has been offered so far. Lastly it gives us some idea of a few of the taxes and the revenue administration in the empire.

The campaigns of Krishṇadēvarāya against the Gajapati ruler of Orissa and his confederates which are briefly mentioned in this record have been dealt with in detail by H. Krishna Sastri in the light of other inscriptions of the reign and the evidence drawn from contemporary literature, and there is no need, therefore, to consider them at any length here. There is, however, one point on which the opinion tentatively expressed by Krishna Sastri seems to be open to further consideration. This relates to the expedition against Catuir mentioned by Nuniz and the location of that place. Some inscriptions of Krishṇadēvarāya's reign, like the one now edited, trace the course of the king's northern campaign up to Siṃhāchalam and Pottunūru, where he planted a pillar of victory. Telugu works of the reign seem to extend the range of the campaign. "From the Pārijātāpaharaṇamu and other Telugu works, however," says Krishna Sastri, "we learn that Krishṇarāya did not stop with the setting up of the pillar of victory at Pottunūru, but went further north, even into the interior of the Gajapati's dominions, devastated the country of Odḍādi and burnt his capital town of Kaṭaka (i.e., Cuttack) thus forcing the Gajapati to make peace by offering the hand of one of his daughters". He then points out that we have no epigraphical evidence enabling us to decide if this raid into Odḍādi took place in continuation of the campaign commemorated by the pillar of victory at Pottunūru or occurred later as part of another campaign, and proceeds: "This much, at any rate, becomes certain from the Siṃhāchalam records, viz., that Krishṇarāya was at Siṃhādri at the beginning of Śaka 1438, and that in Śaka 1441, he made over to the temple at Siṃhāchalam certain villages which were granted to him by the Gajapati king. Whether these latter were the voluntary gifts of the Gajapati ruler on behalf of his ally Krishṇarāya or were wrung from him by a regular raid on his capital are points which cannot be decided at present. Nevertheless there appears to be a clue to some historical event—not yet discovered—in the conquest of Catuir which is mentioned by Nuniz next, perhaps, in chronological order, after making peace with the king of Orya. The name Catuir cannot be traced either in epigraphical records or in Telugu literature. Nor is Nuniz himself very clear in his statements about this place and the expedition against it. He says that Catuir is situated on the Charmūdel side and that it is surrounded by a river which at the time of Krishṇarāya's capture was in flood. Besides, the account does not state against whom the attack was directed; nor does it disclose any proper names that could lead to the identification of Catuir. Sewell thinks that there is in this a possible reference to Vellore. But as Telugu literature has so far been found to confirm the facts related in litūc records or registered by Nuniz, it may not be altogether improbable to suppose that the 'Catuir' of Nuniz is identical with Kaṭaka (Cuttack) mentioned in Telugu literature, and that Krishṇarāya, according to the latter authority, must have finally compelled tho Gajapati king to flee and burnt his capital before accepting from him the terms of peace and the hand of his daughter in marriage. . . . Very likely Nuniz took 'Catuir' to be situated in a country different from that of the Gajapati's and thought that the peace with Gajapati was concluded before Krishnarāya started against Catuir".

It is true Nuniz's account of Krishnarāya's expedition against Catuir is vague and leaves many things doubtful; but if any one fact emerges clearly from his account, it is that Catuir was not in Orissa. For he begins his account of this expedition with the categorical statement: 'After Crisnarao had made peace, and had married the daughter of the king of Orya, and had restored to him his wife and land beyond the river, as has been mentioned above, he made ready a large army and prepared to attack Catuir', and he also says: 'after the king returned from Orya he never went again thither'.¹ These statements show clearly that Nuniz was clear that the expedition against Catuir had nothing whatever to do with the Orissa campaign. And it is not easy to accept the identity of Catuir with Kāṭaka.

Phonetically more plausible is the suggestion of Dr. N. Venkataramanayya that Catuir should be sought in Kayattār in the Tinnevely District. The Pāṇḍyan ruler of Kayattār was, he thinks, besieged at Kāyal by Krishnadēvarāya, and Nuniz's account of the siege of one of the principal cities where the lord of Catuir was has reference to this. He points out that Krishnarāya is said to have conquered Ceylon in an inscription at Pirānmalai, and that some time between A.D. 1514 and A.D. 1522 the ruler of Quilon must have lost control of the eastern part of the Tinnevely District including the sea-coast, and Krishnarāya's expedition must have brought this about.² But apart from the inconclusive character of the evidence cited which does not seem quite to sustain the conclusion reached, one serious objection to this reconstruction lies in Nuniz's statement that the land of Catuir 'is on the Charmāodel side'. The term Coromandel coast is generally applied to the coast between say Point Calimere and the Kṛishṇā river, and even if it be loosely extended a little more to the south, it is extremely doubtful if it could be made to cover the whole of the Eastern coast down to Cape Comorin, and if, further, a town so far inland as Kayattār which is at least 25 miles from the sea as the crow flies and much more by the road from Kāyal, can be said to be on the Coromandel side by an author who is using the expression from the standpoint of Vijayanagar.

The suggestion made by Dr. S. K. Aiyangar that Catuir must be taken to be a variant of Kāḍavar³ ignores the direct statement of Nuniz that Catuir is a geographical name—'Catuir, which is the land of a lord who had been in revolt for fifty years'. It is perhaps unnecessary to follow the further stages of the argument built upon such a slender hypothesis.

Now in the contemporary Dutch records of the beginning of the seventeenth century, there is frequent mention of a place called Katoer. This is described as a fortress within a mile of Pulicat. I draw my information not directly from the Dutch records to which I have no access, but from the excellent summaries of them provided by N. McLeod in his De Oost-Indische Compagnie als Zeemogendheid in Azie (2 vols., 1927). We first hear of the place in 1610 under the

Dr. Aiyangar's statement that Nuniz's description of the capture of Catuir 'is exactly the description that is given of the siege and capture of Śivanasamudram in the Krishnarājaviyayamu' (p. 9) is not supported either by the text or by the summary of it in Sources, pp. 130-31. His other citations from literature, e.g., Pārijātāpahorānamu are not more helpful. The Kohgudān-rājākāṭa contains a good account of the Ummattūr campaign, but it has no resemblance to Nuniz's account under reference.

name Anai-Kāṭṭūr on the river of Pulicat granted to the Dutch for purposes of trade by Obberāja, a captain of the Vellore army, i.e., of the kingdom of Vijayanagar.¹ Again we find Singama-Naik entrenched in the same place at a distance of $\frac{1}{4}$ mile from Geldria (the Dutch fort at Pulicat) on the 11th August 1625.² Passing over unimportant references to the place³ we may note that in the civil war that was raging in 1632, Śrīraṅga, a nephew of the ruling king Veṅkaṭa II, sent an army of 3,000 men against the fort of Kāṭṭūr (within sight of Geldria) which was then in the hands of Timarāja, the chief of the rebellion.⁴ We seem to have then in Kāṭṭūr ('Katoer' of the Dutch records) a fortified place located on a river and 'on the Coromandel side' which by its name, situation and historical associations seems to answer very well to Nuniz's Catuir. A reference to the survey map sheet No. 66 C/SW (D-2) (scale 1 inch=2 miles) will show that Kāṭṭūr is situated in the midst of swampy and difficult country and besides the river already mentioned, there is also a tank and other waterways, all likely to be flooded easily in the rainy season.

It may be noted that Nuniz counts Palacate among the countries paying tribute to Vijayanagara under Dēvarāya II, that is, some time about 1440 A.D., and Sewell, after rightly identifying this place as Pulicat, near Madras, adds a note saying: 'This was an important province of Vijayanagar in later years'.⁵ It seems probable that 'the lord who had been in revolt for fifty years' and in whose land Catuir lay, was the lord of this province. The words of Nuniz as rendered by Sewell are: Crisnarao "prepared to attack Catuir, which is the land of a lord who had been in revolt for fifty years; this land is on the Charmādel side. And he went against it, and laid siege to one of the principal cities where the lord of the land was; and it is called..... and is surrounded with water".⁶ The last sentence and the blank in it do seem to create a difficulty; but the categorical statement at the beginning that the king prepared to attack Catuir may well be taken to mean that this was the 'principal city' in his land where the rebel lord was at the time of Kṛishṇarāya's war.

Referring to the grant now being edited, Kṛishṇa Sastri has observed: 'The choice of the bank of the river Kṛishṇā for making a grant in favour of the temples of Chōḷa-maṇḍala in the south, cannot be reasonably explained except by supposing that Kṛishṇarāya was about this time, viz., the end of Śaka 1439, again on his march for a second time to the Kālīṅga country against 'Catuir', which, as noted above, is very probably Cuttack'.⁷ Two considerations may be urged against this view. First, there is the categorical statement of Nuniz cited already, that after Kṛishṇarāya returned from the expedition to Orissa which resulted in his marriage with the Gajapati's daughter, he did not go back to Orissa. Secondly, there is a definite statement in an inscription⁸ dated Śaka 1438 that Kṛishṇarāya had already accomplished the conquest of the Kālīṅga country as far north as Kataka, which sufficiently accounts for the literary evidence cited by Kṛishṇa Sastri without the necessity for postulating another Orissa campaign in Śaka 1439.

We do not know the particular reason for which Bezvada was chosen as the scene of this comprehensive grant to the numerous temples of the Tamil country. But we know that in the preceding year (Dhātṛi),⁹ the monarch had attended the mahāmāham festival in Kumbhakōṇam.

and utilised the occasion for making an extensive tour to the various shrines in the south. The most detailed account of this tour is furnished by the Rāyavāchakamu.¹ Evidently, after his return to home country, he wanted to commemorate in some striking manner the pilgrimage he had just concluded. The administrative consultations necessary before the monarch's idea could be implemented must have taken some months as in all probability the local officers in charge of the different parts of the Tamil land had to be consulted. When the final decision had been taken, the monarch must have chosen a suitable place and occasion for making the actual proclamation of his decision. The time chosen was Makara-saṅkrānti of the Īśvara year, and the visit to the Kṛṣṇā river and the shrines of Anantaśāyin of Uṇḍavilli and Mallikārjuna of Bezwada on such an occasion is easily understood. The date of the record corresponds to 28th December, A.D. 1517.

It is possible that Kṛṣṇarāya's presence at Bezwada was connected with one of the numerous campaigns of the reign fought against the Sultān of Golconda, Kuli Kutb Shāh. Late in his life the Sultān boasted of having reduced the infidels of Telingana from the borders of Warangal to Masulipatam and Rājahmundry, having taken between sixty and seventy forts by force of arms.² The anonymous historian who has recorded this fact also mentions a war directed by Kṛṣṇadēvarāya himself after the capture of Dēvarakonda by Kuli Kutb Shāh.³ The date of the particular campaign cannot be determined with precision, and the anonymous historian does not give any date. But once more, it is possible that this campaign is identical with that mentioned by Nuniz as having occurred after Kṛṣṇarāya's capture of Catuir, and having been directed against a Muslim captain most probably of the army of Kuli Kutb Shāh of Golconda.⁴ If these suggestions are accepted, the presence of Kṛṣṇarāya at Bezwada receives a simple and natural explanation as being connected with the regular course of the military campaigns of the reign.

The taxes that were remitted in favour of the Śiva and Viṣṇu temples of the Chōḷamandalam were Jōḍi, Sūlavari, Nilavāḷi (Nilavari), Araṣupēru, and other taxes (piṇṇavari).⁵ These taxes were due to the king (palace) from the temples themselves (l. 30). All these taxes are not mentioned in all the copies of the inscription. It is difficult to specify the exact nature of all of them, but the following suggestions may be made: Jōḍi is explained by Wilson as a favourable quit rent on inām lands.⁶ It is also the name of a tenure under which a person reclaims a certain portion of waste land, settles on it, and pays half or quarter of the gross value of the produce to the Government.⁷ In the Vijayanagar epigraphs it is found used generally in the former sense, and was in many respects similar to the mānyakāṇike which the holders of inām lands like Brāhmins and Fakirs paid to the State.⁸ Thus Jōḍi was a small quit rent, paid by the temples, on their inām lands. The rate is unknown.

Sūlavari is more difficult to explain. One of the meanings given under the word Sūlam in the Tamil Lexicon is: 'Brand-mark on cattle, usually trident-shaped'. No authority is cited in the Lexicon, but the meaning suits the context of our inscription very well and seems to show that the Sūlavari was perhaps a small tax or fee paid on the cattle belonging to the temples, each head of cattle being branded at the time of registration in the nearest public office.

Nalavali seems to be only a variant of the usual Nīlavāri land tax, levied on lands which were not ināms, but held in ordinary tenure by the temples concerned.

Araṣūpēru is another difficult term. Wilson¹ notes that Araṣu means 'privileges allowed for watching', and *Araṣukkāraṇ*²—a person holding certain privileges for performing police duty'. *Pēru*³ is an abstract noun from Tamil pēruḍāḷ, 'to get', and means 'receipts'. Araṣupēru then may be taken to stand for the fee collected by the State for the performance of police duties and the maintenance of security. This was perhaps different from the wages of the village watchmen. It must have been a levy by the central government for our inscription contains the specific statement that all the dues remitted by this grant were due to the palace, i. e. to the king—araṇmanaiḱku iṟuttuvāruḱiṟa (l. 30); or araṇmanai kaṇakkil padindu varuḱiṟa (No. 288 of 1903).

The proclamation was not given effect to even so late as in 1521 which is mentioned in an epigraph dated Śakā 1443, Vikrama, Mithuṇa, ba. Tṛitīyā, Friday, Tiruvōṇam. It states that one Kariya Māṇikya⁴ Bhaṭṭar Apatśalāyar waited on Kṛishṇadēvarāya at Vijayanagara and got ratification of the order of the remission of Jōḍi and Sūlavari on certain villages which had been remitted already in favour of the temple at Tirukkādaiyūr, but was not given effect to till then.⁵

The Śendamangalam copy of the epigraph describes the boundaries of the Chōlamandālam, the Śiva and Viṣṇu-temples in which were benefited by the remission.⁶ Chōlamandalam comprised the region south of the Gādilam, west of the sea, north of the Veḷḷāru (south) and east of the wall at Kōṭṭaiḱkarai.⁷ This copy also says that the beneficiaries of the grant were in the heart of the Chōla country.

According to the epigraph the region was divided into three districts or śimais. They are the Irāṇḍārupparṟu Bhuvanēkaṱvīraṇ (Bhuvanagiri) paṭṭana-ehchīrmai, Tañjāvūrpaṭṭana-ehchīrmai and Tiruchehināppalli-ehchīrmai. In the Vijayanagara days a śimai was a smaller division than a rājya, and its exact relation to the more ancient kōḷam or nāḍu is difficult to find, though it seems probable that the śimai was a larger division than the nāḍu or kōḷam. The Bhuvanagiri paṭṭana-ehchīrmai covered the northern part of the Chōlamandālam, with its headquarters at Bhuvanagiri, a big village on the northern bank of the Veḷḷāru (north) in the Chidambaram taluk. There is to be found at the place even in the present day a fort in a fairly good condition. It appears to derive its name from Bhuvanaikavīra, a title borne by two Pāṇḍyan kings, Māravarman Kulasēkhara I and Māravarman Vikrama Pāṇḍya,⁸ who were contemporaries in the latter part of the thirteenth century A.D. The region is called in the epigraph as Irāṇḍārupparṟu Bhuvanaikavīra paṭṭana, perhaps on account of the fact that it was bounded by two rivers, the Gādilam and the Veḷḷāru. Tañjāvūrpaṭṭana-ehchīrmai is probably all the territory covered by the present Tanjore and had its headquarters at Tañjāvūr. To the west of this was the Tiruchehināppalli-ehchīrmai with its headquarters at Trichinopoly.

While almost all the copies mention the above three divisions, a few mention some others. They are Rāśasura-ehchīrmai, mentioned before Tañjāvūr-ehchīrmai,⁹ Viramadakku-ehchīrmai

TRANSLATION.

Let there be prosperity. Obeisance to the blessed Gaṇādhpati. Salutation to Śiva who is beautiful with the moon kissing his lofty head like the chāmara and who is the main pillar (the cause) of the creation of the city of the three worlds. Be it well! Hail! Prosperity! This is the royal order issued on the day of the full moon in the bright half of the month of Pushya of the year Īśvara which was current after the expiry of the prosperous and victorious year Śālivāhana-Śaka 1439, by the glorious Mahārājādhrāja, Rājaparamēśvara, the conqueror of hostile kings, the destroyer of those kings who break their word, the establisher of the kingdom of the Yavanas, the confiscator of the kingdom¹⁴ of the Gajapati king Pratāpa-Rudra, the glorious Vira-Krishṇadēvarāya-Mahārāja, conveying the charitable edict to remit jōḍi and araṇḍupēṇu as sarvamānya to the Śiva, Viṣṇu and other temples in the Chōḷa country. We (the king) started from Vijayanagara to the eastern region on a tour of conquest, took the fort of Udayagiri, captured Tirumalai Rāhuttarāya, took Vinikonḍai, Nāgūṛjunakonḍai, Vellamukonḍa, Koṇḍaviḍu, Koṇḍapalli, Rājamahēndrapuram, and other forts, captured Virabhadrasēna Gajapati, son of Pratāparudra Gajapati, Pradhānabhūpati, Prahlātan, Śiraehchandran, Mallu Khān, Uddanḍa Khān, and other feudatories as prisoners, and defeated and killed Pratāpa-Rudra Gajapati. We then went to Simhādri and set up a pillar of victory at Poṭṭanūru. On the auspicious day of the Makara-saṅkrānti on the banks of the river Krishṇavēṇi and in the presence of Anantaśāyin of Uṇḍavilli and Mallikārjunaḍēvar of Gajavāḍai, We issued with libation of water a royal order evidencing a sarvamānya grant to the respective Śiva and Viṣṇu temples of 10,000 varāḥans being the contributions of jōḍi and sūlataṛi payable by them. The temples were those viz., of Tirueheliṛappalli, Santalagai, Tirukkāṭṭappalli, Tirunagari, Tirunāṅgūr, Tiruvaḷundūr Tēvūr, Tiruvenṇagar, Aḷaṅgan, Tiruvantīrapuram, Tirumāṇikuli, Tirupattūr, Vaigal, Tirumuttam, Tiruppāḍiripuliyūr, Tiruttinainagar, Iṛaiṇāṇṣur, Śēndavanmaṅgalam, Tirunāvallūr, Tīṭṭaikudi, Tirunāraiṇyūr, Kāṇḍāṭṭampullūr, Tiyāgavalli, Śīrāmavinṇagar, Tiruveḷḷiyaṅguḍi, Panda-

According to this royal order which is to be engraved in stone in all the temples, the worship, festivities, celebrations and repairs shall be executed properly and without shortcomings in all the temples as long as the sun and moon endure. He who acts against this charity shall incur the sin of having killed his mother, father, cows and Brahmins at Vārāṇasī.

No. 33—JUBBULPORE STONE INSCRIPTION OF VIMALASIṂA : THE [KALACHURI]
YEAR 926.

By PROF. V. V. MIRASHI, M.A., NAGPUR.

The stone bearing this inscription was found at Jubbulpore, the headquarters of a district of the same name in the Central Provinces and is now preserved in the Nagpur Museum. The record has been referred to several times, e.g., by Dr. F. E. Hall in the Journal of the American Oriental Society, Vol. VI, p. 533, by Dr. F. Kielborn in the Indian Antiquary, Vol. XVIII, p. 210, n. 2, and again in this journal Vol. V, Appendix I, p. 60, n. 4, and by Rai Bahadur Hiralal in his Inscriptions in the Central Provinces and Berar, (second ed.), p. 42, but owing presumably to its very bad preservation none has so far attempted a transcript or even an abstract of its contents.² A careful and patient examination of the original has enabled me to prepare the subjoined transcript and while I have not been able to decipher or restore the complete text, I hope I have been able to make out almost all that can be deciphered in the present condition of the original.

The writing covers a space 2' 7" broad and 1' 8½" high. The average size of letters is 5". The surface of the stone, which was originally made none too smooth, has been further damaged by exposure to weather, and several letters in the middle as well as on the right hand side of the first fourteen lines and some more in the middle of lines 19-24 have become illegible. The characters are Nāgarī. The letters were beautifully written and carefully executed. It will suffice to draw attention to the proper sign of b as an independent letter in bīhṛat, l. 25 and in its superscript form in °r-brabhūva, l. 9, and also to the form of the initial i in iti, l. 12, of the initial ṛi in ṛichām, l. 15, and of ś, the left member of which resembles the English figure 8, as in Śivāya, l. 1. The language is Sanskrit and except for the obeisance to Śiva in the beginning of the first line and the date in the last, the inscription is in verse throughout. The verses are not numbered, but they appear to be fifty in all. The orthography does not present anything calling for special notice except that v and b as well as ś and s are confounded in some places.

The object of the inscription is to record the construction of a temple of the moon-crested god (Śiva) by Vimalaśiṁa, the religious preceptor of the king Jayasinha of the Kalachuri dynasty of Tripurī. The god was named Kīrtiśvara after Vimalaśiṁa's guru Kīrtiśiṁa. The inscription also records that the king Jayasimha endowed the temple with three villages on the occasion of a solar eclipse. It is dated in words as well as in numerical figures in the year 926, without any specification of the month, fortnight, tithi or week-day. This date must, of course, be referred to the Kalachuri era. It corresponds, for the expired Kalachuri year 926, to A.D. 1174-75. In this year there was only one solar eclipse,¹ viz., that which occurred on the amāvāsya of the pūrṇimānta Pausa, on Tuesday, the 26th November A.D. 1174. This is, therefore, probably the date of Jayasimha's grant if it was made in the same Kalachuri year in which the record was put up. It does not admit of verification, but it falls in the reign of Jayasimha, who, we know, was ruling at least from K. 918² to K. 928³.

After three *maṅgala-śloka*s in praise of Śiva, we are told that the god revealed the Śaiva doctrine for the realization of the self by the worlds. Some Śaiva teachers were named in lines 4-7, but the names of Vimalaśiva⁴ and Vastuśiva⁵ only are now completely legible. In line 8 we read the name of Puruṣaśiva who is described as the cause of Yaśaḥkarna's prosperity. Next is mentioned Śaktiśiva in connection with Gayakarna. His disciple was Kirtiśiva⁶ who is said to have contributed to the prosperity of the king Narasimha. Five verses (22-26) are devoted to his glorification. The next eighteen verses refer to Vimalaśiva. He belonged to the gōtra of Viśvāmitra and was the son of Madhusūdana and Umā. Having paid off his debt to gods and others by performing religious rites at Prabhāsa, Gōkarna, Gayā, and other tīrthas, he was initiated in the Śaiva doctrine by Kirtiśiva. He was very handsome, learned and liberal and exercised great vigilance in looking after all affairs of the king. The earth, being adorned with gardens, tanks, charitable houses, temples and dwellings for Brāhmaṇas constructed by him, is said to have vied with heaven in splendour. The king Jayasimha devoutly bowed to him. We are next told that Vimalaśiva built a temple of Śiva under the name Kirtiśvara for the glory and religious merit of his spiritual preceptor Kirtiśiva. The king Jayasimha endowed it with three villages on the occasion of a solar eclipse. One of these villages which was named Tēkabhara, was situated in the viśaya (district) of Navapattalā and the other two named Kaṇḍaravāḍa and Vaḍōha in Samudrapāṭa which was apparently another district.

The importance of the present inscription lies in the information it furnishes about the spiritual preceptors of the Kalachuri kings of Tripuri from Yaśaḥkarna downwards. It may, how-

⁴ This Vimalaśiva is probably different from the Śaiva ascetic who put up the present inscription.

⁵ I examined the name of this ascetic carefully to see if he could be identified with Vāmaśambhu mentioned in the Mallāpuram inscription (J. A. H. R. S., Vol. IV, pp. 147 ff) in view of the suggestion recently made that the latter was the spiritual teacher of Karna and represents Vāmadēva on whose feet several Kalachuri kings from Karna downwards are described as meditating. (See Ind. Hist. Quart., Vol. XIV, pp. 96 ff). A Śaiva Āchārya named Vāmaraṣi is also mentioned as living in Benares in the Sārṇāth inscription of Mahāpāla, dated V. 1083. Ind. Ant., Vol. XIV, p. 140. The Śaiva ascetic mentioned in the beginning of line 6 in the present record may have been a contemporary of Karna; for the next legible name is that of Puruṣaśiva who was the guru of Karna's son Yaśaḥkarna. But the second akṣara of the aforementioned name does not at all appear like ma. Besides the guru of this Śaiva pontiff was apparently Vimalaśiva, mentioned in verse 8, while the guru and the paramaguru of Vāmaśambhu were Somaśambhu and Suddhāvaśambhu respectively. I have shown elsewhere that Vāmadēva was a Kalachuri king and not a Śaiva ascetic. See A Volume of Eastern and Indian Studies, pp. 152 ff.

ever, be noted in this connection that the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal plates of Gōvinda-chandra¹ mention the Śaivā Āchārya Rudraśiva, not Puruṣaśiva, as the Rājaguru of Yaśaḥ-karṇa. Perhaps Yaśaḥkarṇa had two Rājagurus in succession. The name of Vimalaśiva, the guru of Jayasimha, occurs in his Jubbulpore Kōtwālī plates also.²

The present prāśasti was composed by the poet Śaśidhara, who was a Brāhmaṇa of the Maunya³ gōtra. He composed also the Bhērā-Ghāt inscription of Alhaṇadēvī, while his elder brother Prithvidhara was the author of the Tēwar inscription of Gayakarṇa. The present record was incised on the stone by Nāmadēva, the son of Mahīdhara. His father was the engraver of the aforementioned stone inscriptions of Gayakarṇa and Alhaṇadēvī.

As for the localities mentioned in the present record, Tēkabhārā may be identical with Tikhārī, 5 miles south by west of Jubbulpore. The viśaya (district) of Navapattalā⁴ in which it was situated may have comprised the territory round the modern Nayākhērā which lies about 8 miles west of Tikhārī. Samudrapāṭa is probably Samand Pipāriā, 4 miles south of Jubbulpore. There are several villages named Kunda or Kūndān near Jubbulpore, one of which may represent the ancient Kaṇḍaravāḍa. No place exactly corresponding to Vaḍōha can, however, be traced in the Jubbulpore District.

Success! Ōm! Obeisance to Śiva!

(Verse 1.) Having become a meritorious person's son of righteous deeds, (Śiva) who takes delight in blooming lotuses, who abides in venerable Brāhmaṇas, who dwells blamelessly in honoured lustre, rises from the Kāraṇḍavati river¹ (?), and completely destroys the (evil) actions of the enemies of those who take refuge with him, annihilates the arrogance of demons.

(V. 2.) Śiva, who is mounted on the bull, who has the beauty of lotuses.....

(V. 3.) We praise [Śiva], whom they see.....

(V. 4.) For the realization of their self by the world, Śiva revealed his doctrine.....

(V. 5.) Those whose direct knowledge failed.....

(V. 6.) In his lineage in the succession of disciples in course of time, the family.....

(V. 7.)

(V. 8.) Having installed his disciple, Vimalaśiva, in his own place, he.....

(V. 9.) Whose dear fame.....

(V. 10.) (He) who was named Vāstuśiva, who caused great bliss, who.....in the country of the lords of Chēdi....

(V. 11.)

(V. 12.) His disciple named....śiva, who acquired a great excellence of merits and wealth, in order to oblige others (and) to attain the aims of human life.....

(V. 13.)

(V. 14.)like multitudes of merits.....

(V. 15.) He, (though) possessed of equanimity, bore love towards worthy persons, was attached to holy places, followed the path approved by good people (and) was devoted to Śiva.....

(V. 16.) Puruṣaśiva, the best of men, who was conversant with.....was his disciple.....

(V. 17.) On account of whom there arose as much abundance—great with prosperity—in religious merit, wealth and enjoyment of Yaśaḥkarma as that of (Indra), the lord of immortals, through Brihaspati.

(V. 18.) His disciple, Śaktiśiva,.....(who augmented) the (two) royal powers of the illustrious king Gayakarna, made the circle of regions very bright with the mass of his fame as he did the ocean of learning with the excellence of his intellect.

(V. 19.)the prowess of the king Gayakarna the hostile king forcibly.....

(V. 20.) The deeds of him, who is pre-eminently counted among good people and whose wealth is an ornament of his good heart, are sung by wise men like those of the celestial wish-fulfilling tree.

(V. 21.) The disciple of him—a marvellous tree entwined by the creeping plant of noble fame—(was) Kirtiśiva.....

(V. 22.) He caused the prosperity of the king Narasiṃha....

(V. 23.) (Unlike Śiva) he had not the earth for his chariot, nor the sun and the moon for its wheels, nor Brahmā for his charioteer, nor Viṣṇu for his arrow.¹ Still he reduced to ashes the cities of the enemies (as Śiva did those of the demons). Hence he (was) clearly Kirtiśiva (Śiva in glory).

(V. 24.) He filled all regions with his glory which he wrested from the enemy and which was as bright as the moon, as with the flowers of discrimination.

(V. 25.) Though he had burned the feeling of love in his glances, though his face resembled the bright moon, though he was firmly attached to religion² and was devoted to Śiva³ (even as Śiva burned the god of love by his glance, has a bright disc of the moon on his forehead, is mounted on the bull and is attached to Pārvatī), he was (unlike Śiva who is called Ugra⁴ and wears serpents) neither dreadful in appearance nor attended by backbiters.⁵

(V. 26.) The great lights.....the Kalachuri family.As he, so all his sense-organs were the celestial tree of rest to the goddess of fortune.

(V. 27.) In the gūṭra of Viśvāmitra which is the friend of the world, how many Brāhmaṇas, adorned with benevolence⁶ and other (virtues), have not attained the pre-eminence of Paramēśthin (God)?

(V. 28.) Their.....with great regard for the understanding of the contents of the Vēdas which they had studied in the right manner.....Though they were vagrant mendicants, their sacrificial rites and charitable works were performed with abundance of wealth and in a praiseworthy manner like those of kings.

⁴ Ugra is a name of Śiva.

⁶ Mantri is one of the four bhāraṇās which Yōgiṇs cultivate.

(V. 29) In course of time there was born in that gōṭha Madhusūdana who bore benevolence towards all, had studied the pada and krama texts of the Ṛiks and understood their meaning.

(V. 30.) Tho rising greatness of him, who was an ornament of the southern regions, led greatly to the awakening of learned men, even as the rise of the star Agastya,¹ the ornament of the southern direction causes the awakening of the gods (from slumber).

(V. 31.) Through him who was an ornament of the foremost among Brāhmaṇas, (his) wife named Umā, who resembled Pārvatī, was adorned by a son even as the three worlds were by Skanda.

(V. 32.) Having studied the Vēdas and understood their contents, he, observing vows, [pleased all people] like the southern breeze.

(V. 33.) Having paid off his debt to the best of gods and others at Prabhāsa, Gōkarṇa, Gayā and other holy places, he received (initiation in) the Śaiva vow from Kirtisīva even as Upamanyu did from Ugra (i.e., Śiva).

(V. 34.) (May) this Vimalasīva, who has consequently become the wish-fulfilling tree of the Kali age, live to the end of the world !—(the tree), having come under the shade of which a multitude of Brāhmaṇas does not indeed feel distressed on the approach of great festivities !

(V. 35.) In the case of only this (Vimalasīva) who is solely devoted to exertion are seen (the following), viz., birth in a caste (viz., Brāhmaṇa) which is honoured by good people, a (handsome) form which can turn back the god of love (in discomfiture), a personality attended by lustre, a large increase of merits accompanied by great tranquillity and excellent austerity, a mode of behaviour which is exceedingly pleasing to good people, political wisdom which is always pleasing to the politicians (and) blessed silence.

(V. 36.) '(The goddess of) speech who is fond of proficiency in merits dwells in the lotus which is Brāhmā's face, and the goddess of fortune loves to live on the breast of (Vishnu) who is adorned with Śrīvatsa.'—This is what people say. But, what a wonder ! this pair shines forth so joyfully in him that it has caused.....in the minds of magnanimous people !

(V. 37.) What thing concerning him is not marvellous ?—(him) who is the moon to the ocean of learning, a lotus to the goddess of austerities, a pleasure-mountain to the truth and a friend of virtuous conduct ?

(V. 38.) At the sight of the best of Brāhmaṇas (who approach him) as supplicants, his piety increases in an excellent manner, day and night with the libations of water (poured at the time) of making gifts like a sinew of religion. Vigilant², as he is, he confers respectfully on the best of Brāhmaṇas, whose splendour has not decreased, hundreds of red cows shining with gold even on new-moon days.

(V. 39.) Showing great vigilance in looking after all royal affairs, the indefatigable leaderThe foremost among Brāhmaṇas (viz., Vimalasīva), though proficient in fine arts, shows the play of his power against the enemies.....³

² There is a play on the words dakṣha, divija-pati and rōhiṇī. Dakṣha gave only one Rōhiṇī (i.e., the star Alderamin) to the moon and that too on the full-moon day, while Vimalasīva gives hundreds of rōhiṇīs (red cows) to Brāhmaṇas even on the new-moon day. The star Rōhiṇī is personified as the daughter of Dakṣha and the favourite wife of the moon.

³ In this verse also there is a pun on words like divija-pati, kalā, etc.

(V. 40.) Though he is ever looked at with great eagerness by the goddess of fortune with sportful glances, he nowhere suffers the sense-organs to have the power of making him vain. Though he is always employed by the king in many worthy affairs, he nowhere shows slackness in (the performance of) obligatory and occasional religious rites.

(V. 41.) (There was) no discriminating action which he did not perform; (there was) no gift which he did not confer; (there was) no deserving person whom he did not honour many times (and there was) no holy place on the earth which he did not sanctify with marvellous gifts, bathing and austerities.

(V. 42.) Of him who is like Śiva, the exceedingly good, great and lasting blessings and glory increase like his lustre.

(V. 43.) With what ornaments (supplied by him) does not the earth surpass heaven?—(the earth, which has) gardens, tanks, charitable feeding houses, temples and houses of Brāhmanas?

(V. 44.) May that illustrious Vimalaśiva—who by his counsels has made (even) the most distant people pay taxes, (to whom) the king Jayasimha [bows] becoming very humble through devotion spread in the three worlds his delightful fame which, like the celestial river, is capable of washing away the taint of the Kali age!

(V. 45.) He caused a temple of the moon-crested (Śiva) to be constructed for the fame and religious merit of his teacher Kirtisvara out of reverence for him.

(V. 46.) To this god named Kirtisvara, Jayasimhadēva, through devotion to Śiva and his teacher, has made new grants of villages on (the occasion of) the sun's eclipse.

(V. 47.) Of these, the village called Tēkabhara is situated in the viśaya (district) of Navapattalā and two others (viz.,) Kaṇḍaravāḍa and Vāḍōṇā in (the district of) Samudrapāṭa.

(V. 48.) The poet Śaśidhāra, the son of the illustrious Dharanīdhara who is the foremost among Brāhmanas, born in the family of Maunya, has composed this prāśasti with pleasure.

(V. 49.) Nāmadēva, the son of Mahīdhara, the crest-jewel of artisans, has adorned this slab with excellent letters.

(In) the year nine hundred increased by twenty-six, in figures, 926.

(V. 50.) May this temple endure firmly for the fame of the builder as long as the sun and the moon, going and coming, shine in the firmament!

No. 34.—CONJEEVERAM INSCRIPTION OF BRAHMA-TANTRA-SVATANTRA-JIYAR : SAKA 1282.

By A. S. RAMANATHA AYYAR, B.A., MADRAS.

Kāñchīpuram in the Chingleput District was an important place of pilgrimage from very early times. Portions of this town and its environs were in the olden days known according to their religious associations, as the Buddha-Kāñchi, Jina-Kāñchi, Śiva-Kāñchi and Vishnu-Kāñchi.² The inscription³ published below is engraved on the north wall of the second piālāra of the Varadarāja temple at Little Conjeeveram, otherwise called Vishnu-Kāñchi, which is very sacred to the Vaishnavas of the south.

² Buddha-Kāñchi is referred to in No. 15 of the Madras Epigraphical collection for 1934-35 (Annual Report on South Indian Epigraphy, 1934-35, para 56). Jina-Kāñchi is represented by Thripparuttikunru near Conjeeveram; Śiva-Kāñchi and Vishnu-Kāñchi are respectively the modern Big and Little Conjeeveram.

³ No. 574 of the Madras Epigraphical collection for 1919.

The characters in which the record is engraved are Tamil and Grantha, the latter being employed for the Sanskrit words. The language is Tamil with an admixture of Sanskrit words, and is somewhat illustrative of the type of Vaishnava composition prevalent in this period and locality. The record is very well preserved, and its orthography does not call for any comment.

The record does not quote any king's name but is simply dated in Śaka 1282 and contains the astronomical details—Vikārin, Mēsha, Śu. 1, Friday and Āsvati—which yield the equivalent A.D. 1359, March 29. It states that a certain Vaiṣṇavadāsa who had been given the title of Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar by the god (Hastigiriśa), was put in charge of a maṭha evidently at Kāñchipuram in Śaka 1282. This information is of interest for Vaishnava religious history, as it enables us to identify this first pontiff of the maṭha with the direct disciple of the great Vēdānta-Dēśika, the erudite scholar, keen controversialist and deeply venerated Vaishnava āchārya, whose literary and religious activities are said to have extended over a major portion of the 14th century A.D.

As mentioned above, the inscription does not refer itself to the reign of any king, but it is somewhat peculiarly worded, in that it purports to have been issued by the deity himself. In the Tamil records of this temple, the god is called attiyūr-ninnarūliya-Paramasvāmin, or 'the great Lord who was pl'. The village-name Tiruvattiyūr having been Sanskritised into Hastigiri,¹ the god came to be known to Sanskrit authors as Hastigiriśa, by which name he is referred to in the opening verse of this epigraph. It is stated that on the representation made by the agent Perumāltatan and other Bhāṭṭas, the god, while seated in regal pomp with his consorts in the abhishēka-maṇḍapa of the temple on the throne named Viravallāṇ under the canopy called the Ariyavallān-pandal listening to the chanting of the songs of Śaṭhakoṇa, was pleased to confer the title of Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar on a certain Vaiṣṇavadāsa and to put him in charge of a maṭha and its properties, so that he may propagate the tenets of the Rāmānuja-darśanam² to the Vaishnava laity, and maintain the library which he had collected, probably in the maṭha premises. A sentence at the end adds that this divine order (tirumugam) was engraved on stone by the temple-accoutant.

In regard to the particular style of wording in this inscription, couched as if the orders had emanated directly from the deity himself, it may be mentioned that this convention was adopted by some of the Vaishnava temples in the Tirunelveli District in the 14th and 15th centuries A.D., and in some instances in the South Arcot and Chingleput Districts also. Some Śaiva temples also appear to have sparingly copied this procedure in drafting their documents at this period. In such cases, the occasion when and the place wherefrom the orders³ were issued are given at some length. Some instances may be quoted.

The reigning king of the time is referred to in these records as nam piḷḷai or nam kumāraṇ 'the god's son or favourite', and in response to his formal petition that a particular transaction may be made, the god is described as sanctioning it and issuing a ratificatory order to that effect to the officials concerned. This convention does not, however, appear to have been in vogue for a long time. Ādi-Chaṇḍēśvara, one of the sixty-three Nāyaṇmārs, is considered to be the steward-in-chief (mūla-bhṛitya) of Śaiva temples, and the documents relating to them are drafted in his name. Similarly also Viśhvakṣēna or Śēṇai-mudaliyār is looked upon as the Manager of Vaiṣṇava temples. It is one step further to assume that the orders were issued directly by the god himself.¹ Such divine mandates are called aruḷappāḍu; and in the Śrīraṅgam temple, god Raṅgarāja is even now conventionally considered to look after the affairs of his temple himself and issue the necessary orders through the mouth of his temple-officials.

Before proceeding to examine the contents of this record, a few expressions occurring in it may be explained.

(L. 2). Vīravallāṇa śimhāsanaṇ and Ariyaṇavallāṇ-pandal are the names respectively of a throne and a canopy. The first was probably presented to the temple by the Hoysala king Vīra-Ballāḷa III², while the second may have been named after some one having the title 'he who is as powerful as a lion,'³ but whose title it was is not known.

Nam peṇḍugaḷ—viz., Viśhṇu's two consorts, Śrī and Bhūmī.

Śaṭhakōpaṇ-pāṇu kēḷāṇiṇka—Śaṭhakōpa is the name of the Vaiṣṇava saint Nammāḷvār, whose Tiruvāymoli is considered equal to the Vēdas in sanctity and is chanted in the presence of the deity on particular occasions. Endowments made for this service in Viśhṇu temples are often mentioned in inscriptions.⁴

(L. 3). Perumāḷtāṇ—Perumāḷtāṇ or Perumāḷdāsaṇ would ordinarily mean 'a devotee of Perumāḷ (Viśhṇu)'; but in this context it appears to have been the name of the agent, supervising the sacred business of the temple (nam viṭṭu karumam kēḷum), in whose presence and that of the Bhaṭṭas of the temple, the order is stated to have been promulgated. The name 'Vaishṇava-dāsa' occurring in the same line has to be considered as meaning 'the servant-devotee of Vaishṇavas' rather than as the personal name of the donee in the record; for according to the Guruparamparā-prabhāvam, the original name of Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar was Pērarulā-layyan of Viravalli¹ and his dāsyānāma on becoming a saṁnyāsin was Pērarulāla-Jiyaṇ.

¹ In these instances, the records commence with a Sanskrit verse specifying that the orders emanate from the god himself—

In two other records from the same temple, one of which is dated in Śaka 1283, in the regime of Sāḷuva Maṇa, the god is described as seated in a similar manner while issuing the orders.

(L. 4). Samārādhanaṁ adukku vēṇḍum muṭṭukkaḷum—seems to refer to the worship to be conducted to the deities kept in the maṭha itself and the requirements therefor. It is usual for every maṭha to have images of some deities for worship. In this connection, it may be noted that on the eve of the demise of Vēdānta-Dēśika, some images are said to have been bequeathed to his disciple Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar.²

Postakaṅgaḷum idukku vēṇḍum upakaraṅgaḷum—By postakaṅgaḷ (pustaka), manuscript bundles are apparently meant. The upakaraṅgas are the accessories and paraphernalia required for running a library—such as probably racks for the accommodation of the manuscript bundles, spare sets of caḍḍan leaves for copying work, and stylus and other scribal apparatus.

Rāmānuja-darśanam—is the Viśiṣṭādvaita-siddhānta as codified and expounded in his Śrī-bhāṣya by the great Vaishṇava apostle Rāmānuja (A.D. 1017-1137). It was he who had raised this system to an unassailable eminence and had arranged for its propagation in true missionary style, by the training of a number of able exponents and *śiṁhāsanaḍhipatis*³ from among his numerous disciples.

(L. 5) Nam Rāmānujam-udaiyārum nam samayattil uḷḷārum—Rāmānujam-udaiyār appears to mean the 'followers of Rāmānuja'.⁴ The idea seems to be that the selection of Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar as the pontiff was to receive the acceptance of Rāmānuja's followers and the Vaishṇava laity (samayattil-uḷḷār).

(L. 6) Ivaṇukku nām muḍittapaḍiyum uḍuttapaḍiyum pūṣiṇapaḍiyum kuḍuttōm—means that the flowers worn by the god, the clothes used by him and the sandal-paste and unguents utilised for his worship were presented to the Jiyar as a mark indicative of the god's love to the recipient. This expression is found used in some inscriptions⁵ and in Vaishṇava literature.

As regards Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar, the donee of the record, some information is available from Vaishṇava literature. Among the South Indian religions, it was Vaishṇavism alone that had developed the 'historical sense' to an appreciable extent, and there are therefore several biographies of the Vaishṇava āchāryas available, collated under the names of Vaiḍhavas and Guruparamparās of varying volume.⁶ One such work dealing with the life of the great Vaishṇava reformer Vēdānta-Dēśika is the *Guruparamparā-prabhāvam*⁷ in Tamil prose by Tṛitiya-

⁶ There are many biographies of Dēśika available. The Vēdānta-Dēśika-vaibhava-pratāpikā by Doḍḍay-āchārya is in Sanskrit.

⁷ Published in Madras in several editions. Dvitiya-Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar, the āchārya of the author of this work is said to have written the Paṇṇirūyirappaḍi-Guruparamparā-prabhāvam, which is not extant.

Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar. Shorn of the few miraculous elements that are inevitable in an orthodox hagiography, this work compiled by an author who lived only a few generations later than Dēśika, may be considered as fairly reliable. From it we gather the following details about Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar, the first of that name, who was a disciple of Vēdānta-Dēśika :

Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar belonged to the Kaunḍinya-gōtra and was originally called Viravalli Pēraruḷāyyan. Well-versed in all the sāstras, he became an ardent disciple of Dēśika and assumed the saṁnyāsa garb under the name of Pēraruḷāḷa-Jiyar. When the Rāṅganātha temple at Śrīraṅgam was looted by the Muhammadans in the first quarter of the 14th century, Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar fled along with his āchārya to Satyamaṅgalam (in the Coimbatore District) and returned to Śrīraṅgam only after some years. He was taught the Bhagavad-vishayam (Ārāyirappaḍi) by Varadāchārya alias Nayinārāchārya, the son and disciple of Vēdānta-Dēśika, in Kali 4440, Bahudhānya, Āvaṇi, śn. 2, Hasta (=A.D. 1338, August 18). On one occasion, he vanquished a pandit of North India in a polemical contest at Śrīraṅgam and was honoured by Dēśika with the title of 'Brahma-tantra-svatantra'¹ 'he who is a master in Brahma-tantra'. That accounts for the origin of the name by which he was popularly known. On another occasion during the régime of Tirumalai-Śrīnivāsāchārya² who had been installed by Dēśika as the Śrīkārya-dhuraudhara of the Kāñchīpuram temple, Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar overcame a Kashmirian pandit in a philosophical discussion and earned the title of 'Paryāya-Bhāshyakāra'.³ Some time later under the direction of god Venkaṭeśa in a dream, he accepted the Trusteeship of the Tirupati temple, and during his tenure of office there, he installed an image of Vēdānta-Dēśika in a maṭha built by him at Tirumala, as well as in a maṭṭapa in the Gōvindarāja temple at Lower Tirupati. He stayed at Tirupati for a long time expounding the Vaiṣṇava philosophy to his disciples Ghaṭikāśatakam-Ammā, Kiḍāmbi-Nayinār, Kōmāṇḍūr-Āchehān, Pillaiy-Appai, Pēraruḷāyyan-Appai, Kandāḍai-Āṇḍān, Viravalli-Pillai and others. After his demise he was succeeded by Pēraruḷāyyan-Appai. Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar was the author of two small works—the *Divyasūri-stuti*⁴ and the Āchāryavatāra-ghaṭṭārtha.⁵

Though these biographical details may, in the main, be accepted, a few omissions may be noticed. The Guruparamparā-prabhāvam does not contain a reference to the founding of a maṭha at Kāñchīpuram and to the installation of Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar in it as its first pontiff for the propagation of the Rāmānuja-darśanam, as stated in the present record, nor do the Tirupati inscriptions corroborate his Trusteeship of the Tirupati temple. But these points notwithstanding, Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar of the record under review may be identified with the disciple of

³ A verse composed by Ghaṭikāśatakam-Ammā in praise of this Jiyar reads—

पर्यायभाष्यकाराय प्रणतार्तिं विष्णुते ।

⁴ The colophon reads—ब्रह्मतन्त्रस्वतन्त्रोक्ता दिव्यमूर्तिर्नृति ।

⁵ Its colophon reads—ब्रह्मतन्त्रस्वतन्त्रेण परकाव्यतीक्ष्णम् ।

Vēdānta-Dēśika, because of the fact that the investiture of this unique title of 'Brahma-tantra-svatantra', herein attributed to the god himself, had been made more than a decade prior to the demise of Dēśika and that this āchārya's name figures in three important 'pontifical lists'.¹

The maṭha which was thus started at Kāñchipuram under the pontificate of this Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar in A.D. 1360 grew in importance and appears to have latterly removed its headquarters to Mēlkōṭe in the Mysore State, where it became popular under the name of the Parakāla-maṭha². There were several scholars among the subsequent heads of this maṭha, and a short sketch of its history has been given in the granth-ōpasāṅhāra of the Alaṅkāra-maṇihāra,³ a work on rhetoric composed recently by one of its pontiffs also called Brahma-tantra-svatantra-Jiyar.

At about this time in Śaka 1300 there was in the Varadarāja temple at Kāñchipuram, a minor maṭha called the Vēda-maṭha, which was presided over by a certain Vēdēndrasāgara-śrīpāda and which probably specialised in the teaching of the Vēdas.⁴ Another important Vaiṣṇava maṭha which came into existence in this period was the Ahōbala-maṭha,⁵ whose founder Śrīnivāsa, son of Kiḍāmbi Kēśava-āchārya of Tirunārāyaṇapuram, is, according to orthodox tradition, believed to have assumed the Samnyāsāsrama in Śaka 1320 (A.D. 1398) under the name of Ādivaṇ Śaṭhakōpa-Jiyar and to have been its first pontiff for a period of sixty years till A.D. 1458.

Vēdānta-Dēśika is stated in the Guruparamparā-prabhāvam to have been the contemporary of a certain Telugu chief named Sarvajña-Śiṅgabhūpāla and to have composed the Subhāṣita-nīṭi for his delectation.⁶ The same chief is said to have honoured Nayinārāchārya, the son and disciple of Dēśika, with the gift of a palanquin and other paraphernalia, when this āchārya went to the northern parts in his religious tours. It follows therefore that Brahma-tantra-svatantra was also a contemporary of this Śiṅga. According to the *Velugōṣivāri-vaṁśāvalī*⁷ dealing with the history of the Rēcherla chiefs, there were three chiefs of the name of Śiṅga. Of these, Śiṅga III who came to power in A.D. 1425 had the title of Sarvajña.⁸ The author of the work on rhetoric called the *Rasārṇava-sudhākara*⁹ was a Śiṅga, son of an Annavōta; and he has been identified with Śiṅga II and has been assigned to about A.D. 1380.¹⁰ There was another earlier Śiṅga I who flourished about this time and was killed by a certain Tammaḷa-Bommayya in A.D. 1360. It is no doubt tempting to identify the author of the Rasārṇava-sudhākara, with the chief who honoured the two āchāryas.¹ As Vēdānta-Dēśika is believed to have passed away in A.D. 1370,² and as Nayiṇārāchārya had also attained to literary fame before A.D. 1360, their contemporary has been considered to have been Śiṅga I of A.D. 1360, who lived within the life-time of Dēśika but who is not known to have had the title of Sarvajña or more appropriately, Śiṅga II who actually began to rule later, but who may have been a young chieftain at the time of Nayiṇārāchārya's visit administering a portion of the territory in conjunction with his father Anavōta, for whom, however, records up to Śaka 1307 are found.

The existence of one other Śiṅga at this period may also be noted. In the Śrīraṅgam plates of Mummaḍi-Nāyaka³ dated in Śaka 1280, only two years earlier than the date of the present record, it is stated that a village which had been granted by one of the chiefs of Kōrukoṇḍa to a Parāśara-Bhaṭṭa, the seventh of that name, was transferred to the temple of god Raṅganātha by his mother, on the death of the latter without issue. This grant indicates that the Kōrukoṇḍa chiefs were devout Vaiṣṇavas and that a descendant of the famous Bhaṭṭar family of Śrīraṅgam was honoured by one of them. This Mummaḍi-Nāyaka is stated to have had two younger brothers, one of whom was a Śiṅga who was ruling over a portion of his brother's territory with headquarters at Kōṭipura in the Godavari District. His father was a Kūna. But the chief, to whom Dēśika⁴ had dedicated the three works referred to above, is said to have been the son of a Mādhyama-Nāyaka. If this is so, he cannot be identified either with the Rēcherla Śiṅga, son of Anavōta, or the Kōrukoṇḍa Śiṅga, son of Kūna. His identity must therefore remain undetermined for the present.

Another point of interest in this epigraph is the reference to a collection of manuscripts (or a library) which was kept in the maḥa and a stipulation made for its proper upkeep, as envisaged in the expression 'iva tēḍiṇa postakaṅgaḷum idukku vēṇḍum upakaraṅgaḷum'. It is well-known that in the medieval centuries, religious institutions of all denominations, Śaiva, Vaiṣṇava and Jaina, flourished in South India, either as a result of royal patronage or supported by private benefactions. They appear to have been primarily intended as seminaries for the imparting of religious education and incidentally for the dissemination of secular knowledge as well. The extensive properties granted from time to time to temples and to such religious establishments were left in charge of the heads of these maḥas called Maḥādhipatis, Mudaliyārs or Jīyars, on whom devolved the duty of supervising the proper conduct of the services for which the endowments had been intended, and who, in turn, enjoyed some privileges as remuneration for their services. Then there were also the Ghaṭikāsthānas (i.e.) 'establishments for holy and learned men', and smaller educational institutions of which there were many in the land, which were responsible for the intellectual well-being of the community. The munificent donations made for the maintenance of these institutions are recorded in several inscriptions;¹ but though no specific references to libraries as such, are found in them, it is, however, reasonable to infer that when these maṭhas, ghaṭikās and pāṭhaśālās were functioning properly, they must have been maintaining well-stocked libraries, for the use of the teachers as well as the taught.

² The Sanskrit verses engraved in the Śrīraṅgam temple eulogising the restoration of the Raṅganātha image by Gōpanārya, are stated in the Guruparamparā to have been composed by Dēśika himself. If so he must have passed away soon after this incident.

The numerous collections of manuscripts which have been found in maṭhas and other places in South India, bear ample testimony to the fact that the library was a fairly well-recognised institution of medieval religious and student life. But specific references to libraries as such are, as stated already, rather rare in inscriptions. A record of the Western Chālukya king Trailōkya-malla-Āhavamalla dated in Śaka 980 (=A.D. 1058) from Nāgai² in the Hyderabad State mentions that Danḍanātha-Triṇētra Madhusūdana, a general of the king, received from his master among many other endowments, a gift of land for the maintenance of six Curators called Sarasvatī-Bhaṇḍārigas who were placed in charge of the library attached to the college (Ghaṭikāśālā) at Nāgavāgrābāra, which had several hundred students on its rolls. Another interesting reference to a Sarasvatī-bhaṇḍāra or library is found in a fragmentary epigraph³ engraved on the east wall of the third prākāra in the Raṅganātha temple at Śrīraṅgam in the Trichinopoly District. It is but natural to expect that this temple which is classified as belonging to the uttamōttama type, should have been provided with a library as well.⁴ The record states that in an auxiliary maṇḍapa which accommodated this library, provision was appropriately made for the installation and worship of the images of the three presiding deities of learning—viz., Hayagrīva, Sarasvatī and Vyāsa-Bhagavān, by Pālappalli Nīlakaṇṭha-Nāyaka. As this person was a contemporary of Hoysala Vīra-Rāmanātha, in whose 14th year inscription⁵ (A.D. 1269) he is mentioned, the library of the Śrīraṅgam temple was in existence from the middle of the 13th century A.D. A pustaka-bhaṇḍāra as an adjunct to the Advaitic Śaṅkara-maṭha at Śrīṅgeri in the Mysore State is mentioned in two epigraphs⁶ from Vanṭyāla near Perdurū in the South Kanara District, which belong to the early Vijayanagara period. One of them is dated in Śaka 1328 in the reign of king Bukka II and registers a gift of land for the maintenance of a certain Purāṇika Kavi-Krishṇa-Bhaṭṭa, who was the Curator in charge of this library, while the other dated a few years later in Śaka 1354 in the reign of king Dēvarāya II, relates to another gift of land made to the Curator's son Kavi-Śaṅkara-Bhaṭṭa, who evidently succeeded his father in his office.

TRANSLATION.

This is according to the sacred order.

Hail! Prosperity!

This is the order of the glorious Lord of Hastigiri, the god of gods, which is red with the brilliance of the gems in the diadems of the (supplicating) lords of the celestials and of the Asuras:

"In the month of Mēsha of the (cyclic) year Vikāraṇ, on a Friday with prathamā-tiṭhi of the first fortnight and Aśvati-nakṣhatra, while We, in company with Our consorts, were listening to the songs of Śaṭhakōpa, seated on the throne (named) Viravallāḷaṇ under the canopy (called) Ariyēvallaṇ in the abhishēka-maṇḍapa (of the temple)— on the representation (made) by Perumāltātaṇ, who supervises the (sacred) business of Our temple (nam viṭṭu), and by Our Bhātṭas, We were pleased to assign to a Vaishṇavadāsa on whom we had bestowed the name of Brahma-tantra-svatantra-jīyaṇ, the maṭha which had been set apart for him, the lands belonging thereto, the worship to be conducted therein and the expenses therefor, the books which he had accumulated and the accessories required for them (i.e., their maintenance), so that he may propagate Our Rāmānuja-darśanam, and after him, the disciples selected by him may, in succession, take possession of these and continue (the work).

We directed that the followers of Rāmānuja (Rāmānujam-uḍaiyār) and those of our Vaishṇava samayam shall accept him (i.e., his pontificate) and carry on (the work).

We also ordered that this information be engraved on stone and copper, and We presented him (in token of Our regard) what had been used (as garlands), what had been worn (as clothes), and what had been anointed (as unguents) by Us."

As thus graciously commanded (by the god), this is the writing (or signature) of the temple-accountant Pēraruḷālapriyaṇ.

The Śaka year in which this sacred order was written (engraved) is One thousand two, hundred and eighty-two.

No. 35.—KASYAPA IMAGE INSCRIPTION FROM SILAO.

By B. CH. CHAKRA, M.A., M.O.L., PH.D. (LUGD.), OOTACAMUND.

It was early in the year 1935 that the late Babu Puran Chand Nahar of Calcutta, a well-known Jain antiquarian, kindly placed at my disposal a couple of inked estampages of the subjoined inscription for decipherment and publication. He informed me that the inscription appears on a stone pedestal which is in the possession of Babu Bhagwan Das of Silao¹ in the Bihar subdivision of the Patna District. This gentleman, I understand, owns a collection of antiquities. He could not tell the exact provenance of the present piece, as the collection had existed in the family from before his time and is apparently not properly enlisted. Considering, however, that Silao is situated between the famous archaeological sites of Nālandā and Rājagṛha, it is probable that the find hailed from one of these two places. But, as will be shown below,² it is more likely that the piece belonged to Silao itself.

From the estampages supplied by Babu Puran Chand, I could read a considerable part of the epigraph. For its complete decipherment, however, an examination of the original or, at least, a set of better impressions was essential. During the summer of that very year, I had occasion to visit Silao, but unfortunately I then missed Babu Bhagwan Das there. Consequently I had to go disappointed without seeing either his collection or the inscribed pedestal in question.

About two years later, Mr. J. K. Roy, the then Custodian of Nalanda Museum and Monuments, at my request, got a fresh set of impressions prepared, which he kindly sent to me along with his description of the sculptured piece. In December 1939, Mr. Amalananda Ghosh, Assistant Superintendent, Archaeological Survey, Central Circle, Patna, further obliged me by furnishing me with two photographs of the damaged sculpture and three impressions, on thin paper, of its inscription. The new material enabled me to read the inscription almost entirely.

As may be seen from the accompanying photographic reproduction, the pedestal is elliptical in shape and has, in its centre, a remnant of the kneeling statue, carved in the round, which once surmounted it. The pedestal stands 9" high, and measures 20" at its longest and 14½" at its broadest. The extant portion of the figure shows that it represented a person seated in the attitude that is technically called ālīḡhāsana. The symmetrical lines seen on its right leg suggest folds of the dhōṭī or the lower garment. Further, the pedestal has, at its bottom, a tenon, about 6" long and 4" wide, which shows that the present sculpture was placed on a larger pedestal by the side of some other statue or statues. This is borne out also by the posture of the present image, as judged from its surviving portion. The posture recalls to one's mind certain representations of Garuḍa, Viṣṇu's vāhana, depicted as offering worship with folded hands or waiting on his master. In the present instance, however, the figure represented, as is disclosed by the inscription, not Garuḍa but Kāśyapa who, as will presently be shown, was a famous disciple of the Buddha. We may thus conclude that the present image, representing Kāśyapa in worshipful attitude, was originally installed next to the statue of his teacher, Gautama Buddha, in a shrine or a sanctuary somewhere near the modern village of Silao.

The pedestal is partitioned into two by an inward curve. The inscription runs along the upper band and consists of three lines, each measuring about 21" in length. It is slightly weather-worn, especially on the right-hand extremity where a few letters in the first line I have not been able to make out. Again, due to erosion, parts of letters and signs of superscript r̥pha have, at certain places, been rendered obscure. In most cases, however, they can be made out from the moulds on the back of an estampage. The average size of the letters is $\frac{3}{8}$ ".

The characters belong to the northern class of alphabets. Kielhorn described this type as "the Magadha variety of the Nāgarī alphabet"¹, while some other scholars more appropriately call it "the Eastern variety of Nāgarī"². The script of the present record bears a close resemblance to that used in the Ghōsrāwā inscription³ of the time of the Pāla king Dēvapāladēva who reigned from c. A.D. 801 to c. A.D. 840⁴. In view of this consideration, the present inscription, which neither bears a date nor mentions any ruler's name, may be placed in the first half of the ninth century A.D.

The language of the record is Sanskrit and its composition is entirely in verse, all the three stanzas forming but one sentence. The following points are worthy of note in respect of orthography, a consonant followed by a r is very often reduplicated, s is used for ś in yas=cha, l. 2 and gītas=cha, l. 3, and v is used for ṽ in Vauddha, l. 3. The sign of avagraha appears twice. Grammatically, the form amit-ardhau, l. 1, is wrong. As an adjective of kulē, it ought to be amit-ardhinī. Similarly the use of the feminine gender in the word ādī in svīya-saṃhātīk-ādīr, l. 3, is incorrect. In a compound like the present one, it should ordinarily be treated in the neuter gender. The exact sense of the expression yānti dvaidharā, l. 2, in the given context is not clear to me, though I have rendered it as 'vic with one another'⁵. Of lexicographical interest are the terms pūrasa, l. 2, and saṃhātīkā, l. 3. The former in all probability is meant to be an equivalent of puraṭa which is equally of rare occurrence and means 'gold'. The latter appears here as a synonym of saṃghāṭī or saṃghātīkā which is peculiar to Buddhist terminology and denotes 'one of the three robes of a monk' (tri-chīvara)⁶.

As regards contents, the inscription is virtually a label to the image which once surmounted the pedestal, giving in a compendious form a laudatory account of the deity represented. The deity or the deified personage, as is disclosed by the inscription, was Kāśyapa.

This Kāśyapa is no other than the Buddha's favourite disciple Kāśyapa or Mahā-Kāśyapa who is reputed to have convened the First Buddhist Council⁷ at Rājagṛha three months after the parinirvāṇa of the Master. Even during the Buddha's lifetime Kāśyapa had become a foremost Arhat. It is perhaps on account of his playing such a prominent part in preserving and expounding the Lord's teachings that he has been accorded such an exalted rank as to be deified. In the Mahāyāna Buddhist iconography he has been confused with a previous Brddha, called Kāśyapa. There he figures as the sixth Mānushi-Buddha of the group of seven.⁸ There is hardly any Buddhist treatise wherein some account of Kāśyapa may not be met with. We have, however, certain references in literature, which are of great value to us inasmuch as they not only bear out the information imparted by our inscription but also supplement it. It will, therefore, be interesting to cite them here.

The events narrated in the inscription evidently follow the order of their sequence. It may further be observed that each of the nine attributive clauses refers to one distinct happening connected with Kāśyapa's life. To sum up the whole, Kāśyapa (1) occupied the position of Surapati for seven times successively in some of his former births, (2) was born on this earth in a wealthy family, (3)¹?, (4) renounced the world, forsaking his wife Kāpilēyā, (5) showed sympathy with the wretched, so much so that it excited the admiration of the gods, (6) worshipped the Lord with intense piety, (7) received the Lord's robe at the time of the latter's nirvāṇa, (8) expounded the Law² and finally (9) attained nirvāṇa on the mount Gurupāda.

In literature, it is the later Pāli works like various Aṭṭhakathās that furnish us with a somewhat detailed narrative of Kāśyapa's³ early life, which may be summarised as follows: "His boyhood's name was Pippali Mānavaka". He was born to a wealthy Brāhmaṇa of the Kapila gōtra at the village of Mahātīttha (Mahātīrtha) in Magadha. From the very beginning he was averse to worldly life. He would look after his parents so long as they lived and afterwards turn a monk. But when he came of age, his parents exhorted him to marry. He refused to do so. However, when his mother persistently remonstrated with him on this point, he devised means by which, he thought, he would have his way and, at the same time, would not incur his mother's displeasure. He got an image of a young lady of supernatural beauty fashioned of pure gold, bedecked with glittering jewels and daintily clad in red. He presented the image to his mother, declaring that if he were to have a bride of that form, he would fain go in for wedlock. He had fancied that neither would such a paragon of beauty be forthcoming, nor would he marry. This, however, did not dishearten his mother. She rather imagined that her son was very fortunate and that he must have done meritorious deeds in his former births, not alone but in company with a lady of golden hue (surāṇa-varṇā). She, therefore, at once called in a council of eight Brāhmaṇas, handed over the gold idol to them and charged them with the duty of finding out a damsel of the requisite beauty to be the bride of her son. The Brāhmaṇas mounted the idol on a chariot and set out on their mission. They travelled far and wide until at last they reached the city of Sāgala⁴ in the Madra dēśa, where they found a girl who in grace and charm far excelled the gold image, not to speak of resembling

⁴ Sāgala or Śākala has been identified with Sialkot in the Punjab. See Cunningham's Ancient Geography of India, edited by S. Majumdar Sastri (1924), pp. 686 f.; N. L. Dey, Geographical Dictionary of Ancient and Medioeval India, pp. 173 f.; B. C. Law, Geography of Early Buddhism, pp. 53 f. The country of the Madras lay between the Ravi and the Chinab; see N. L. Dey, op. cit. p. 116.

it. She was Bhadrā Kāpilāyani,¹ daughter of an equally well-to-do Brāhmaṇa of the Kausika gōtra. She shared the propensities of Pippali Mānavaka, like him not caring for connubial felicity. Finally, however, their marriage was settled in spite of them. They married, but did not lead a married life. An opportunity offered itself and they forsook each other, renounced all and turned ascetics.

"Pippali Mānavaka, with a single robe on and a bowl in hand, left home in quest of the Buddha. He saw the Lord seated under a bōdhi tree called Bahuputraka somewhere between Rājagriha and Nālandā. It was there that he received his ordination (upasampadā) from the Lord. Later on Pippali Mānavaka, now Kāśyapa, presented his silken saṃghāṭī to the Master and accepted with alacrity from the latter his coarse and threadbare robe in exchange. So ardent was Kāśyapa's faith that he attained the position of an Arhat only a week after his ordination."²

Āsvaghōsha has also left us a brief sketch of Kāśyapa.³ Therein Kāśyapa is said to be Rāj-ādi-gēh-ākhyā-dēśi which compound Cowell translates as 'an inhabitant of Rājagēha'.⁴ We have just learnt from the Aṭṭhakathās that Kāśyapa hailed from a village called Mahātittha in Magadha. In the light of this information we may explain the above expression more precisely as 'an inhabitant of the country named Rājagēha'. We know that Rājagriha was then the capital of Magadha. And in the present instance the country is denoted simply by the name of its capital, which practice has not been uncommon.⁵ In this way Āsvaghōsha's statement on the point of Kāśyapa's native land is not at variance with the information contained in the Aṭṭhakathās. Again, according to Āsvaghōsha's description, Kāśyapa had performed six years' hard penance before he met the Master.

Āsvaghōsha does not allude to Kāśyapa's marriage with Bhadrā Kāpilāyani, which event is, however, confirmed by references in certain stories of the Buddha's former births. Thus in the Asūtamanta Jātaka,⁶ the Lord identifies the characters of that story in the following manner: "Kāpilāni was the mother of those days, Mahā-Kassapa was the father, Ānanda the pupil, and I myself the teacher".⁷ Similarly in the Haṭṭhipāla Jātaka, the chaplain was Kassapa and his wife was Bhaddakāpilāni.⁸ Again, in the Sāma Jātaka, the father was Kassapa and the mother Bhaddakāpilāni.⁹

¹ The name Kāpilāyani (or Kāpilāni or Kāpilēyā as we shall have it later) is apparently derived from Kapila, which, as we know from the Apudāna (P. T. S. edition, p. 583, verse 57), was Bhadrā's father's name. The same source gives her mother's name as Suchimati. A detailed account of her also is found in Dr. G. P. Malalasekera's Dictionary of Pāli Proper Names under Bhaddā Kāpilāni Therī (Vol. II, pp. 354-55).

² This summary is extracted from an account of Kaśyapa-saṃnyāsa, which is given by Mahāpandita Triptakāchārya Rāhula Sānikṛityāyana in his Buddhacharyyū (Hindi), pp. 41 ff., and which in its turn is based upon the following works: Theragūthā Aṭṭhakathā 30; Saṃyutta-Nikāya Aṭṭhakathā, 15, 1, 11; Ānguttara-Nikāya Aṭṭhakathā 1, 1, 4.

It may at once be recognised that Kāpilānī and Bhaddakāpilānī of the *Jātaka*s and the *Aṭṭhakathā*s, and Kāpilēyā of the present inscription are but variants of one and the same name and refer likewise to one and the same person, namely Kāśyapa's wife.

It may parenthetically be pointed out that according to the *Aṭṭhakathā*s it was, as noted above, somewhere between Rājagṛha and Nālandā that Kāśyapa's first meeting with the Lord took place. That position almost corresponds to the modern village of Silao. May we then suppose that the statue of Kāśyapa was set up there in order to sanctify the spot and thereby to commemorate the first meeting? In that case, the find-spot of the inscribed pedestal under discussion, as has already been hinted, must be Silao.

Now if we compare the above descriptions with the account given in our inscription, we shall find that most of the details do agree. There are, however, certain points which it has not been possible for me to corroborate by literary references. In the first place, Kāśyapa is stated to have acted as Indra for seven terms on end. He must have attained such a distinction as a reward for highly meritorious deeds on his part; but I have not been able to find any mention of this fact in literature. We are told that Gautama Buddha himself was Śakra in twenty of his antecedent births, that there is a Śakra in every chakravāla and that the office of Śakra, which is in fact the sovereignty of the Tāvātimsa angels, is held only for a limited period by the same individual.¹ It is said of Kāśyapa that 'he bestowed his favours only on the poor',² which sentiment is echoed in dīn-ānāh-ānugata-mānasaḥ of our inscription, l. 2.

We further learn from the inscription that the Buddha, while entering nirvāṇa, gave away his saṃghāṭī and other things to Kāśyapa. I could not find this event related in any of the Buddhist canonical works. All that we know in this connection is this, as we have noticed above, that the Lord and Kāśyapa exchanged their saṃghāṭīs shortly after their first meeting. However, the information from the Chinese sources in this regard is in perfect agreement with the account of our inscription. According to that, Tahtāgata, on the point of attaining nirvāṇa, addressed Kāśyapa and said inter alia: "The golden-tissued Kaśhāya robe given me by my foster-mother I bid you keep and deliver to Maitrēya when he has completed the condition of Buddha."³

Finally we come to the nirvāṇa of Kāśyapa himself, which is stated to have taken place on the mount Gurupāda. Here, too, the Chinese record is in full concord.⁴ In the Divyāradānamālā,⁵ the name of the mountain is given as Gurupādaka, while elsewhere it is also called Kukkuṭapāda.⁶ The identification of this hill had long been a subject of keen controversy among such eminent scholars as Cunningham, Beal and Stein until at last the late Mr. R. D. Banerji brought the issue to a successful close by offering a thoroughly satisfactory solution. Cunningham contended that three bare and rugged hills in the vicinity of Kurkihār, 16 miles to the east of Gayā, represent the Kukkuṭapādagiri, taking the name Kurkihār to be a contraction of Kukkuṭa-vihāra or Kukkuṭapāda-vihāra and, at the same time, presuming a connection between this last and the Kukkuṭapāda-giri.⁷ Beal had his objections to this identification, for, to him the location did not agree with the accounts of the Chinese travellers. Moreover, he has emphatically pointed out that the Kukkuṭārāma or Kukkuṭa-vihāra must not be confounded with the Kukkuṭapāda-giri.¹ Stein had occasion to visit this part of the country in the winter of 1899, and, with a view to arriving at a definite opinion regarding the identification, he made a thorough survey. After a close examination he came to the conclusion that the Kukkuṭapāda-giri or Gurupāda-giri is represented by the Sōbhnāth hill, a part of the Maher hill, in the district of Gayā.² Stein's identification met Beal's objections to some extent, but was not totally convincing. Finally Banerji investigated the matter further, and conclusively proved that the modern representative of the Gurupāda-giri is to be found in the Gulpā hill in the district of Gayā.³ This identification is warranted not only by the name Gulpā being phonetically a corrupt form of the Gurupāda itself, but also because it satisfies all other considerations, as detailed by the author.⁴ Nevertheless, some scholars even now, knowingly or unknowingly, adhere to Cunningham's discarded identification of the Kukkuṭapāda mountain with Kurkihar.⁵

Judging from the description of the pedestal as well as from the nature of the inscription on it, the statue of Kāśyapa in question must have been one of considerable artistic merit, typifying the art of the Pāla period. It is greatly to be regretted that the major portion of the statue itself is not forthcoming. It would have been a unique specimen inasmuch as the known sculptural representations of Kāśyapa are few. In fact, so far as I know, we do not have a single entire piece of this kind. At Bishanpur in the Gayā district, Beglar noticed one image of Kāśyapa. "On a small bas-relief", so runs his description, "representing a figure seated cross-legged in Buddha fashion is inscribed Ye Dharma Rāsi Maḥa Kasyapa (sic.)"; this statue is clearly therefore one, of the venerable president of the first synod, and is the only one I have seen or heard of, of one of Buddha's disciples."⁶ The present whereabouts of this statue are not known. Even in 1899, when Stein visited Bishanpur, he found it missing, for he writes: "I was, however, unable to trace the small bas-relief, which is mentioned by Mr. Beglar as bearing a short inscription with the name of Mahākāśyapa."⁷ It may in passing be pointed out that plastic representations even of the Kāśyapa Buddha, who, as has been shown above, is sometimes mixed up with the Mahā-Kāśyapa, are equally rare. The Curzon Museum of Archaeology at Muttra has recently acquired an image of the Kāśyapa Buddha, carved in the round, standing on an inscribed pedestal; but the upper half of it is missing. It belongs to the Kushāna period. The preserved part, from the girdle downwards, shows it wearing a dhōṭī, a mēḥkalā and a scarf.⁸

KASYAPA IMAGE INSCRIPTION FROM SILAO.

SCALE: ABOUT ONE-HALF.

Hiuen Tsiang, the celebrated Chinese pilgrim, informs us of the existence of an image of the Kāśyapa Buddha enshrined in a vihāra to the north-west of the Bōdhi tree at Bōdh-Gayā. "It is noted for its miraculous and sacred qualities. From time to time it emits a glorious light."¹ There is presumably a reference to this representation of Kāśyapa in the Bōdh-Gayā inscription of Mahānāman, wherein homage is paid, in the beginning,² first to Śākyanikabandhu (i.e. Gautama Buddha) and then to Mahā-Kāśyapa, assuming that Hiuen Tsiang, too, meant 'an image of Mahā-Kāśyapa' when he said 'an image of the Kāśyapa Buddha'. Among the ruins at Bōdh-Gayā, Cunningham has identified the remains of the aforesaid vihāra,³ while the image is not to be found at all.

There are, however, a good few sculptures which represent the group of seven or eight⁴ Mortal Buddhas, wherein the Kāśyapa Buddha figures as the sixth⁵. In the Indian Museum at Calcutta we have a stone pillar from Bharaut, depicting his distinguishing bōdhi tree⁶, which is nyagrōdha (Ficus Indica).

Here I may gratefully record that to Dr. N. P. Chakravarti I owe some useful references and suggestions, especially with regard to the identity of Kāśyapa.

¹⁰ The superscript r here is not well marked.

TRANSLATION.

Success 1

(V.1) Who had formerly remained the Lord of Gods for seven terms without intermission; who attained birth in a highly noble and immensely prosperous family of mortals; who, being possessed of unbounded speed, the brilliancy of gold; who turned a recluse, forsaking (his wife) Kāpilēyā of golden form;

(V.2) Other deities in paying reverence to whom—his heart going out to the distressed and the desolate—vie with one another¹; and who revered Lord Jina (the Buddha) with devotion; and further, on whom Sugata (the Buddha), while entering nirvāṇa, bestowed his saṃhāṭikā and the rest; and who, being an exponent of the Buddhist doctrines, expounded the Law;

(V.3) Who, after having assumed his (human) form solely for the sake of (delivering the mortal) beings, entered nirvāṇa on the charming hill of Gurupāda; the very same Kāśyapa shines forth here.

No. 36.—A BRONZE IMAGE INSCRIPTION FROM NALANDA.

By A. GHOSH, M.A., PATNA.

The following inscription is engraved on the back of a bronze image of Balarāma, excavated in 1917-18 out of the northern verandah of Monastery Site No. 1 at Nālandā. The image is now in the Archaeological Museum at Nālandā and bears the register number S. 1-442.

The characters of the inscription belong to the eastern variety and may be ascribed to the ninth century A.D.; they have much similarity with those of the Nālandā copper-plate of Dēvapāla.² In fact, the inscription may well belong to the reign of the Pāla king Dēvapāla (c. A.D. 815-854), who is mentioned in the text of the inscription. As is common in the inscriptions of this age, the medial ē is written both as a superscript oblique line and as a short stroke attached to the left limb of the respective letter. The medial ō is denoted by a combination of both these signs. There are some obvious grammatical and orthographical mistakes in the inscription.

The inscription records the dedication of the image at Nālandā in the Dēvapālādēva-haṭṭa, or 'the mart of Dēvapālādēva', by Nisīṅgha(?)kā, the wife (?) of Śōujjeka. There is epigraphic evidence of the existence of other haṭṭas at Nālandā; for example, the inscription on a stone image of Avalokiteśvara, now housed in the modern Sūrya temple at Bargūn near the excavated site of Nālandā, contains a reference to a tala-haṭṭa, the meaning of which is not clear.³

¹ This rendering may now be accepted as exact. After I had prepared this essay, I chanced to read a passage, in a similar context, in Mahā Kassapa's account given by Dr. G. P. Malalasekera in his Dictionary of Pāli Proper Names (Vol. II, p. 481), which has confirmed the above explanation. The passage in question reads: 'Owing to his great saintliness, even the gods vied with each other to give alms to Kassapa.'

The inscription shows that a haṭṭa was founded at Nālandā by Dēvapāla, or, at any rate, was named after him. The connexions of Dēvapāla with Nālandā are attested to by other inscriptions as well. Thus, the Nālandā copper-plate referred to above records the munificence of that king in favour of Nālandā at the request of the mahārāja Bālaputradēva of Suvarṇadvīpa (Sumatra). Further, the Ghosrāwān¹ inscription acquaints us with the fact that Dēvapāla appointed a monk named Viradēva to look after Nālandā.

Another word in the inscription worthy of notice is Malapōrasya, occurring at the beginning of the second line; neither its meaning nor its proper position in the syntax is clear. It is interesting to note, however, that a similar word Mallapōrasya occurs in a dedicatory inscription on a bronze image found at Kurkihār (District Gayā), also belonging to the reign of Dēvapāla.² It is tempting no doubt to regard the word as an incorrect derivative of Mallapura, and to take it to mean 'a resident of Mallapura'.³ But this meaning is hardly possible in the Kurkihār inscription, though it may suit the present record.

No. 37.—A NOTE ON THE PANCHADHARALA PILLAR INSCRIPTION OF KING VISVESVARA.

By M. SOMASEKHARA SARMA, WALT AIR

In Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XIX, pp. 161 ff., the Dharmaliṅgēśvara temple inscription at Pañchadhārāla was ably edited by Dr. J. Nobel of the Berlin University. This inscription belongs to the Eastern Chālukya king Viśvēśvara, who ruled the territory around Pañchadhārāla in the Yellamanehili taluk of the Vizagapatam District. Vinnakōṭa Peddana was his court-poet. He dedicated his Kāvyaḷaṅkāra-chūḍāmaṇi, a poetical work on rhetoric in Telugu, to his patron. Both the date of king Viśvēśvara and the date of composition of the Kāvyaḷaṅkāra-chūḍāmaṇi had not been known definitely, so far. The inscription under discussion settles these dates satisfactorily.

The inscription records the construction of a maṇḍapa in the Dharmaliṅgēśvara temple at Pañchadhārāpurī in Śaka 1329 (Śakābdē Nava-Bhānu-Rāma-Śasi-saṅkhyūtē) or A. D. 1407,

² This image, along with the other antiquities found at Kurkihār, is now in the Patna Museum. The full meaning of the inscription is not clear, but the relevant portion may be quoted here :—śrī-Dēvapālādēva-rājyāt samat 19.....malla-chchhandakam Mallapōrasya pratipādittāḥ.

³ Mallapura or Mallāpura is given in the St. Petersburg Dictionary, Vol. V, pp. 602-3, as a place-name. Cf. Malla, the name of a well-known tribe.

⁵ Is the word to be corrected to Sauryyakasya? [The reading seems to be Śōhaṭṭēlasya.—B C, C.]

* Read Nisīṅgha(?)kāya dēva-dharmas=yam pratipādittāḥ.

by king Viśvēśvara. As has been pointed out by the editor, there is a covert allusion to the date of a battle fought by Viśvēśvara in the text of the inscription, in the verse quoted below :

Gati-bāhu-śakti-bhū-mitim=api gaṇayat-Sarvasiddhī(dhī)-patha-bhagnum |
sati Chitrabhānu-sākshipi Dharaṇivarābhād=ādā(dhā)vad=Amhra(dhra)-balam ||

Dr. Nobel discloses the pun contained in the verse and brings to light the historical fact, namely, that king Viśvēśvara defeated the Andhra army, near Sarvasiddhi, in the cyclic year Chitrabhānu, represented by the Śaka year gati (5), bāhu (2), śakti (3), and bhū (1), i.e., 1325.

An exact Telugu rendering of the above verse is found in canto vii of the Telugu work Kāvya-lāṅkāra-chūḍāmaṇi, without, in any way, spoiling the ślēsha. It is as follows :

Chatur-upāya-bāhu-śakti-kṣham-āvali bāraṇiḍiḥi Chitrabhānu sākshi
bāre Sarvasiddhi-padam-ēdi Dharaṇivarāhamunakun-ōḍi Rācha-Kādupu ||

For the expressions gati and bhū in the Sanskrit verse the words chatur-upāya and kṣhamā were used respectively in Telugu. These are the only differences that could be found between the Sanskrit verse and the corresponding Telugu verse. The occurrence in Kāvya-lāṅkāra-chūḍāmaṇi, of a faithful rendering of the verse occurring in the inscription, leads us to surmise that the composer of the Pañchadhārāla inscription might be Vinnakōṭa Peddāna. He would not have incorporated in his work the exact Telugu version of the Sanskrit verse, if he were not the composer of the inscription as well. Hence, it may be concluded that the author of the Pañchadhārāla inscription could be no other than Peddāna, the court-poet of king Viśvēśvara.

The editor of the inscription deserves great praise for discovering the real import of the verse when many Telugu pandits and Sanskrit scholars who printed and edited the Kāvya-lāṅkāra-chūḍāmaṇi were not able to disclose this fact, just because their outlook was more literary than historical. When, however, the verse in the Kāvya-lāṅkāra-chūḍāmaṇi and the corresponding verse of the Pañchadhārāla inscription are closely examined, we find that there is a small discrepancy in the date of the battle, arrived at by the editor of the inscription. He has taken gati to represent the numeral 'five'. But, that its value is 'four', is now ascertained by the Telugu verse, wherein the term chatur-upāya denoting the number 'four' was expressly used in the place of gati of the Sanskrit verse. Hence, the date given by Dr. Nobel should be corrected to Śaka 1324.

Saṅkhyāntanūmaprakāśikā written by the erudite scholar, Kanuparti Venkatarāma Śrī-Vidyāmandanātha, assigns the value 'four' to the term gati and enumerates four gatis, namely Dēra-gati, Manushya-gati, Jantu-gati and Naraka-gati.

The value given to gati even in epigraphical literature is four as is evidenced by an inscription¹ from Simhaebalam, Vizagapatam District. The date of this inscription is given in the Telugu portion as Śaka-varshaṁbulu 1294 and in the Sanskrit portion as 'Śākābdē gati-randhra-Bhānu-gaṇitē' etc. Another inscription² in Telugu from Yenamadala (Guntur District) which gives the date in chronogram 'gaṇa-bāna-gati-chandra' in verse and in figures in prose, equates gati with four. Thus, we find that gati represents four.

The existence in the Kāvya-lāṅkāra-chūḍāmaṇi of the Telugu version of the verse mentioned above proves, beyond doubt, that this work had been composed after Śaka 1324, the date of the battle referred to therein.
